She didn't just consider the seniors who frequented the Senior Center clients, or the volunteers simply there to help out, or her co-workers just co-workers — " they were her family," Johnson said.

Diane Herth, a regular volunteer at the senior center, said Elworthy made sure everyone who lived alone or was ill got a phone call. Herth said it wasn't just the seniors she check in on, she personally received a phone call from Elworthy following a surgery to see if there was anything they could do.

"Linda Elworthy was always thinking of benefiting others and wanted no attention herself," Herth said.

Elworthy kept her co-workers entertained with funny stories about her two cats.

She loved to dress to the nines for holidays; she had a slew of funny accessories from a hat much like the one worn by the cat in Dr. Seuss's Cat in the Hat to elf shoes. She kept her favorite — a hat that resembled the Disney cartoon character, Goofy — in her office. For a baseball themed senior event, she showed up in a complete Red Sox uniform. Her co-workers said she always had that element of surprise.

"She definitely had the capacity to laugh at herself," said Horsefield, the Elder Affair's volunteer coordinator.

When Town Manager Bill Griffin hired Elworthy for the position of Elder Services director in the summer of 2006, he said he knew from the moment he interviewed her she was the person for the job.

"She was dedicated to the needs of our senior citizens and she always put what was in their best interest first. She also had a great energy and a wonderful sense of humor," Griffin said. "She will be sorely missed."

Services for Linda Elworthy

Funeral services will be held tomorrow, Saturday, May 30 at 9:30a.m., at St. Anne's Church, 290 Jefferson Ave., Salem, Mass. There will be a wake tonight, Friday, May 29 from 5 to 7p.m. at O'Donnell Funeral Home, 46 Washington Square, Salem.

A memorial service will be held in Cohasset at St. Anthony's Church on Saturday, June 13 at 11a.m.

Thank you for a beautiful Memorial Day

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

THANK YOU

Hello Cohasset. How is everyone doing as we get ready to head into June? This past Monday, the Memorial Day Parade, 2009 was done so well. A huge thank you goes out to Tom and Dee Wigmore along with all the helpers involved on a job that was thought out and put together so well. Thank you again to all of the men, women and families who have worked so hard to protect and defend our country.

NORTHEASTERN

Congratulations go out to Jen Buckley, CHS Class of 2004, on her graduation Cum Laude from Northeastern University School of Nursing on May 1. Wishing you all the best in the future Jen, Nice Job.

SCIENCE LOVERS

Attention all middle school science lovers. Would you love to muck around in the marsh and get dirty while exploring the coast this summer? Are you currently in 5th, 6th or 7th grade? If so, CSCR (Center for Student Coastal Research) has the program for you, it's Junior Marsh Monitors. The program will run Tuesdays and Thursdays for four weeks starting July 7. Sessions run from 9-11 am or 2-4 pm. Cost is $150 for the month. Space is limited. Email macadoo7@verizon.net or kbcanney@comcast.net for more information

OUR WORLD

The Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum still has limited openings for many of our Summertime Kidsclub Programs that will begin the next week. These programs are designed for children from ages 2 and up and each week is a wonderful theme that is enjoyed by all. For more information, you may check out the website at www.ourworldcgdm.org, call Miss Jen or Miss Julie at 781-923-1473 or send an email to ourworldprograms@comcast.net. You may choose the number of weeks, days and times that fits the schedule you are looking for. Buggies, Birdies and Butterflies, Oh My is next weeks theme and so many more are following in the weeks to come with Mr. Dykas Days, Drama, Happy Birthday USA and more.

AUTHORS!

Buttonwood has been hosting the "Coffee with the Authors" for 16 years. The "Coffee" offers an opportunity to hear contemporary authors discuss their latest work. The panel this year is exceptionally fine. Lisa Genova for "Still Alice, Scituate author Lynne Griffin discusses "Life Without Summer and Cape Cod author Anne LeClaire describes being silent in "Listening Below the Noise." The event is at the Atlantica Restaurant on Tue. Jun. 9, from 9:45 –11:30 a.m.. Reservations and tickets ($16 per person) are necessary. Call Buttonwood at 1-781-383-2665 to reserve.

RELAY

This year marks the 25th Anniversary of the Relay For Life Fundraiser held at the Alumni Field at the Cohasset High School on Pond Street. This event begins on Friday, June 12 at 3 pm and runs throughout the night, ending at 10 am on Saturday, June 13th. If you would like to come and purchase Luminaria Bags to honor or remember a loved one for the Relay For Life, you may come to the Our World Museum and purchase the bags you would like or need and then, if you would like, you may decorate them here at the Museum or bring them home to decorate. The Schedule to date is as follows. Starting on Friday, June 12 at 3 pm, the Relay begins and team registration begins. The Children's Tent, with a "Celebrate the 25th Birthday of the Relay" is from 3-6:30 p.m. with fun party hats to decorate and birthday games to play. At 5 p.m., the Survivor Registration is open and the Children's Lap will begin at 5:30 for children and families of all ages. The Opening Ceremony begins at 6 pm with a music selection to be performed by the Hingham High School Chorus and will be conducted by Joe Young. This will be followed with a song by Lisa Battista and Steven Gilbert and a solo by Kelsey Gilbert. The Opening Remarks will be shared by Harry St. Onge and a Survivor's story will be shared by Craig Coffey.

At 6:30, the Survivors and Caregivers lap will happen with a song to honor all of the people who have survived and the many who care for those who are dealing with cancer sung by Cohasset's own, Lily Sestito. 6:45 pm, the entertainment will be led by the Rusty Skippers Band with the Taste of The Relay being held from 6:45-8 pm. The Bagpipes and a Luminaria ceremony will happen at 9:00 pm and all will be followed with the popular gaming system being played for a "WII Relay." This truly is a special two day event that is held each year to raise money to help find cures for this dreaded disease and to remember and honor all those who have dealt with this sickness in their lives. It is a family event that we encourage as many of you who can attend to be there.

Tennis lessons end the week of Aug. 3. Various levels of instruction are available. Cost of the program is $80 per participant. Register in person at the Recreation Office or online.

Summer Xtreme – Students entering grades 6 through 9 will travel to field trip destinations around the region, ranging from theme parks and paintball fields to outings like the Codzilla thrill ride out of Long Wharf, Boston, which will be paired with an IMAX movie. With a $99 per week fee, Cohasset Recreation Department is bridging the gap many parents face each summer, the gap between the quality and affordability of summer programs.

What's in store this summer?

Week one: June 29 to July 2, Water Country and Monster Mini Golf.

Week two: July 6 to 9, Codzilla boat ride and Boston Bowl and Billiards.

Week three: July 13 to 16, Six Flags and Morton's Pond.

Week four: July 20 to 23, Water Wizz and paintball.

Week five: July 27 to 30, Canobie Lake Park and kayaking.

Week six: Aug. 3 to 6, Paw Sox and Fenway Park Tour/Tomb.

Week seven: Aug. 10 to 13, Water Wizz and laser tag.

The program will meet four days a week, Monday through Thursday, with field trips on Tuesdays and Thursdays. On Mondays and Wednesdays, the group of about 45 middle school students will participate in various sports, crafts, challenges, team builders and social activities. The program is supervised by counselors and directors with many years of experience working with children.

Jeri Herman opens studio in Village

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Isn't this fun?

This is what Cohasset resident, mother and entrepreneur Jeri Herman often asks her clients from behind the camera lens. The answer she's looking for, of course, is "yes."

With a relaxed attitude and a goal to capture more than a posed family portrait, Herman wants her clients to walk away with more than a photo for this year's Christmas card.

"I want my clients to have a positive and fun experience. This is not like getting dressed up and carted off to the mall," says Herman with a laugh.

"I want my clients to have a positive and fun experience."
— Jeri Herman, photographer

Although Jeri Herman Photography has been in business for roughly two years, this month Herman opened the doors to her Village studio located at the 11 Elm Street — the tiny and historical building across from Fleming's that was once home to a blacksmith.

A largely self-taught photographer, Herman specializes in photographing babies, kids, families and high school seniors. Up to now she primarily did on location photo shoots — and still intends that to be her focus — but she is looking forward to augmenting her business with the studio.

The studio, she says, will give her flexibility to do more formal family shots, to photograph babies and shoot actor and model headshots.

"It also gives me the opportunity to show off my work," adding displaying some of her products should help her clients envision what's possible for their own home.

The journey to get to the opening of her own photography studio in Cohasset Village was long and winding, but in the end, the fulfillment of many goals.

"My story isn't really much different than a lot of moms with a camera," says Herman. She first truly discovered her passion for photography when her first child was born 10 years ago. It was then she purchased her first SLR camera.

Shortly after her son Zack's first birthday she and her husband hired a family photographer. Although the pictures came out nicely, Herman said the whole experience was missing something.

"It has always stuck in the back of my mind that it could be such a better experience," says Herman.

Although Jeri Herman Photography has been in business for about two years, this month Herman opened the doors to her Village studio located at 11 Elm Street.

However, she shelved the thought as she pursued a consulting career and raising a family. After Zack, now 10, came Jenna, 7, and Catrina, 4.

When Catrina was born Herman realized how difficult it was to balance her career and her family. Three years ago, when her youngest was one-year-old, she left her consulting career and began to nurture her interest in photography.

In the following year, she took pictures of anyone and everyone who would let her, she read up on photography online and took classes locally.

Last year, she started her business officially – Jeri Herman Photography. Her niche in the photography business she envisioned being largely on location – at a beach, in a backyard or in the woods. But when the winter came and her business slowed down she realized a studio wouldn't be such a bad idea. She began to hear rumblings that Sagestone Beads, the former tenant of 11 Elm Street, was moving out.

"I always thought it was a really great building," Herman says. She kept walking by looking in the windows, asking around the village about the space, the rent, the landlords.

"I went all around the mulberry bush before I made the call (to the landlords)."

When she stepped into the space, she knew it was special.

"I felt a kind of energy, it was the kind of atmosphere I wanted for my business," Herman says

When she signed the lease for the space she said the news about the economy was at its very worst, yet she remains optimistic.

"Maybe it's the MBA talking, but I figured I should get in, get started and build my brand," Herman says.

Owning her own business in her hometown gives her the flexibility to do all the things she wants to do as a mother – go to her kids' school events, be home when they get off the bus.

She also is excited about being part of the village community, which is largely made up of women-owned businesses.

"One of my longer term goals is to be an active member of the Chamber (of Commerce). I think the business owners in the village to a lot to support the each other," says Herman. "This is where I live, so it makes sense."

Preparing for a shoot

Before any given shoot, Herman spends time talking to the family (usually the mother) about different locations, what they are looking for out of the shoot, what to wear and about their lifestyle in general.

"I like to do as much set up as possible to ensure success," says Herman. On the day of the shoot, which is typically in the morning hours or late afternoon when the light is best, she doesn't set a time limit.

"As long as there is good sunlight and the kids are having a good time, I'll keep shooting," Herman says.

As much as possible, she tries to match her photography style with the client's lifestyle.

"If parents like to laugh and have a good time with their kids, then I might be the right photographer for them."

She usually begins a photo shoot with the posed family portraits to get them out of the way and then she lets the kids play and have fun. She follows close behind with the camera to capture those unexpected moments and smiles.

She hopes to give clients a positive experience and impress upon them the benefits of having beautiful pictures of their family as it grows up.

"What's better than looking at pictures of your family on your wall?" says Herman. "I'd like to see my clients come back every year, or every other year. I tried to price my products so that's accessible."

Herman offers custom products and framing for her photographs. She has partnered with fellow Cohasset resident, Vicky Neaves, of Fusion Studios for the framing.

Jim Norton stands next to a section of his bookshelf dedicated to his little brother, Brendan Sewell, of Bridgewater. Jim and Brendan were matched in 1994 when Brendan was 10 years old.

Big Brother by choice

Resident inducted into Big Brother Hall of Fame

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"With more and more single parents, it is critical this organization flourishes."
— Jim Norton , "Big Brother"

Fifteen years ago there was a fated meeting between a 28-year-old single professional and a 10-year-old boy with special needs. Neither knew how the other could and would change his life.

Cohasset resident Jim Norton first met Brendan Sewell at an informal meeting in the boy's home in Canton. They were brought together through the Big Brothers Big Sisters organization.

From that initial meeting has grown a lifelong friendship and brotherhood.

Brendan wasn't an easy little brother to match; he had severe developmental delays and difficulty expressing himself. He needed the right kind of big brother — one that would be both a role model and patient mentor.

With a background as a speech pathologist, Norton felt the match with Brendan could be a good one.

"I jumped at the chance to work with Brendan. I thought with my background I might be have some insight into his disability more than a lay person would," Norton said. "It turned out it was a perfect match."

In the 15 years they have been Big Brother and Little Brother each has gone through extraordinary changes.

Now at 43 and 25, respectively, their lives are intertwined. Brendan served as the ringbearer at Norton's wedding ceremony. Norton's four children call him "Uncle Brendan" and Brendan is his daughter's godfather.

"It's a big thing for him to be an uncle," Norton said. Brendan now lives in a group home for adults with disabilities in Bridgewater and works everyday doing odd jobs.

The pair still spends time together at least once a month. Sports, particularly the Red Sox and Bruins, are favorite topics and pastimes. Brendan and his mother, Chris Miskinis, are a part of Norton's family and attend family functions and holidays.

"When a match is good, everyone wins," Norton said.

Two weeks ago, Norton was inducted into the Big Brother Hall of Fame. In 2002, he was recognized as Big Brother of the Year.

More than simply spending a few hours each week with Brendan, over the years Norton took on the role as Brendan's education advocate. Along with Brendan's mother, he would go to Brendan's school and sit in on his special education meetings.

"I played the bad cop to mom's good cop," Norton said with a laugh. "But it got him services he otherwise might not have gotten."

Brendan's mother said the situations weren't always easy and there were so many different people and agencies to deal with. Though it all she said Norton was stable and consistent.

"He was the first and only male in long time to be consistent in Brendan's life," said Miskinis, adding Norton just seems to know what Brendan needs to be more successful in life.

Despite the challenges and level of commitment, Norton never considered not being a part of Brendan's life.

"I've always been a guy that doesn't quit…I knew early on I would be with him for a long time," Norton said. He proudly acknowledges how far his little brother has come over the years, particularly in his social skills.

"Jim brings out the best in Brendan, particularly his sense of humor," Miskinis attested. Norton nurtured Brendan's love of sports, which has helped him succeed socially.

"It makes Brendan feel important and successful that he knows so much about players and statistics," Miskinis said. "Jim has given Brendan such opportunity – opportunity he would never had had in his whole life."

Norton said there's a great need for more Big Brothers and Sisters.

"It's important (for kids) to have a male in their life they can rely on when other males have let them down," said Norton, adding it doesn't take a significant commitment and it is not as hard as one might think to relate to a child.

"With more and more single parents, it is critical this organization flourishes," Norton said. "I wish more people would talk about the impact the relationship does to help the older brother or sister as a person. It's not babysitting and you're not the dad (or mom), you're just a friend."

Norton said the greatest benefit of being Big Brother has been incorporating Brendan and his family into his own.

"They'll always be a part of my life," said Norton.

"His family has made us part of their family and it is a wonderful family to be a part of," said Miskinis. "It's been the best experience. Jim has entirely changed our lives."

Miskinis believes so much in the Big Brother program that for the past four years ago she has ran the Boston Marathon to raise money for the Big Brother Big Sister nonprofit. Each year she has raised almost $5000.

"I'm so proud to be able to talk about my story and raise money. Jim is such a great role model," Miskinis said.

Farewell, Linda

In some places, if one is not a native or a "townie" – he or she would never be truly accepted.

From the very first day we met Linda when she came on board as the new director of the Senior Center, we knew we were going to like her a lot. And we had a feeling that Cohasset would, too. Time has proved that to be the case. Linda, who passed away unexpectedly Saturday, is going to be missed by all the lives she touched.

For one thing she defied stereotypes. A "senior" herself, she tackled the "job" of serving other seniors with boundless enthusiasm and creativity.

She called us nearly weekly to alert us to senior happenings, to ask us to include senior news in the paper – or just to say hello. She was always appreciative and demanding. Linda was someone who likely got what she was asking for because of her delightful persistence.

Linda's dream was to have a new Senior Center. She envisioned a Senior Center large enough to accommodate the town's growing senior population.

In just a few short years – Linda made her mark on Cohasset. Let's hope we can bring her vision of a new Senior Center to reality. We could not imagine a more fitting legacy.

Honor and respect

Freedom is not free.

Those words were echoed here in Cohasset and at communities across Massachusetts and the country during Monday's Memorial Day observances.

At the Cohasset Mariner and her sister newspapers, reporters and photographers were deployed to the various towns to provide coverage both editorially and photographically.

We believe Memorial Day coverage is important – no matter how long ago wars become or how unpopular they may be.

Here in Cohasset we are proud of the way the town conducts its Memorial Day weekend observances.

Constant vigilance by veterans groups and others who care is critical — because the importance of honoring those men and women who lost their lives serving our country — can slip away all too easily.

At times we can become all too comfortable in the years between wars and conflicts or during unpopular wars. Some start to believe that veterans and honoring their service are not significant.

The Mariner editor, whose two sons both earned Bronze Stars for their service in Iraq, proudly attended the Scituate Memorial Day observances during which one of her sons and her husband marched.

The Lawson Common in Scituate was beautiful in the brilliant sunshine.

However, right across First Parish Road at the edge of Lawson Common, a Little League game was under way. Moms and dads, sitting in lawn chairs, cheered away, undeterred and clearly uninterested in the solemn observances being conducted just a few yards away.

Dads did the pitching, so the teams that were playing were on the younger side. The only time the parents and kids stopped or looked to see what was happening was when they heard gunshots during the rifle salute.

In a show of quiet indignation, flag carrying veterans marched right through the baseball field to Cudworth Cemetery that abuts the field for a prayer service following the main part of the ceremony.

Frankly, the lack of interest and appreciation for Memorial Day exhibited by the adults supervising that baseball game and the lesson it taught their kids is going to stay with us for a very long time.

It made us realize that indeed, freedom is not free. So many died to allow us to enjoy our freedoms – even if that means playing baseball during a memorial service.

But the disrespect and ignorance held by some of the importance of those sacrifices made by the few for so many can be tough to take.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Good sportsmanship

TO THE EDITOR:

I want to express my appreciation and admiration to the Cohasset and Norwell Girls tennis teams. On Wednesday, May 20 the Cohasset and Norwell tennis match came down to a tiebreaking match between my daughter, Katie Malloy (Norwell) and Maggie McGoldrick (Cohasset.) The girls were well matched in skill and they played a long and difficult match. Early in the second set, Katie struggled with leg cramps and; after the second injury time out, it became Maggie's decision to wait to play or take the win on a technicality. She stated she did not want to win that way, and decided to wait.

When the game resumed, the girls showed real heart as Katie struggled with her leg cramps and Maggie played though the pain of tennis elbow. Norwell took the match, but both teams won the day. Thank you to both Judy Field and Gigi Meehan, Norwell and Cohasset coaches, respectively, for teaching much more than simply the game of tennis. It was a fine display of character and sportsmanship for all.

Building permit inspections to be conducted

Cohasset Assessors' Office staff will conduct building permit inspections for assessment purposes over the next few months as they prepare for certification by the Department of Revenue for fiscal 2010. The staff will be physically inspecting and/or measuring the properties in town that have recent building permits. Digital cameras will be used to produce exterior photos of the buildings for the database.

The Assessors' staff will be able to produce proper identification. If the homeowner or a person older than 18 years of age is not at home on the first call, a notice will be left asking the homeowner to call for an appointment. Property owners are asked to respond to any notices at their earliest convenience to avoid estimated assessments.

Greenbush, Jacobs Meadow and Little Harbor paving

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Greenbush – We mentioned last week that the Greenbush project continues to fix up the little areas of their project around Town that either were not completed, or needed minor adjustment to make them right. This week Cashman is doing the final driveway entrance work at Woodside Cemetery on North Main Street.

As we mentioned last week, they fixed a few things in the center of the village near Pleasant Street and Depot Court. The edge of the new Town parking lot on Pleasant Street adjacent to the residential area has been cleaned up. Scraggly growth has been removed from the small hillside there. Anti-vegetation fabric was laid and the slope was covered with riprap. Also, some of the granite curbing in that parking lot was reset in areas where it was crooked or loose.

Jacobs Meadow – About three years ago we became concerned about the condition of the walls of the Jacobs Meadow outfall channel adjacent to the Legion Hall on Border Street. It might be interesting to recap why this small channel is important to Cohasset. This channel allows two-way interchange of harbor salt water into Jacobs Meadow and allows storm water from Jacobs Meadow to exit to the harbor based on the level of the tides. So how does storm water get into Jacobs Meadow? Simple, it comes via James and Stewart brooks. James Brook drains the area from Lower King Street to the Post Office, roughly following North Main Street, and part of the hillside area immediately west of downtown. Stewart Brook, likewise, drains part of the hillside area and the surrounding land along the Greenbush tracks almost to Beechwood Street. Having salt water flow into Jacobs Meadow is important for the health of the salt marsh in this 14-acre salt/fresh water meadow site. The ability for fresh water to flow out is important in order to reduce the flooding impacts to the properties around Jacobs Meadow.

Let's go back and review why we were concerned about this channel now that you can see how important it is to the health of the marsh area and for flood mitigation. When we first started looking at the walls of this channel over three years ago, there was an obvious bow in the wall. This wall was originally constructed of stone that had received several layers of concrete patching over the years since it was placed.

The photo shows the decided bow in the wall as the result of its loss of structural integrity. Water behind the wall continued to undermine the wall. Freezing and thawing behind the wall pushed the wall closer to the opposite side. Eventually, we expected the wall would just say, "Enough" and collapse. Well, several weeks ago about 12 feet of the wall did just that. It collapsed.

What will happen now? Fortunately, the Town, in anticipation of the collapse of the channel wall, at the Fall 2008 Town Meeting passed an article for the replacement of this wall and related structures. Since your approval of the necessary funds at Town Meeting, we have been working with Vine Associates, Inc. to do the necessary engineering and permitting work for replacement of the channel.

The primary permitting body for coastal structures like this is the U S Army Corps of Engineers (ACOE), along with a variety of local and Federal agencies, beginning with our own Conservation Commission.

We are pleased to say that last week we received notice of project approval from the ACOE. Now, we can really get to work and can complete the detailed design and prepare the project for construction bidding. We expect to accomplish the construction during the dry summer/fall season this year. Preparing for the inevitable wall collapse has really paid off for the Town. We are now ready to act. In subsequent articles, we'll let you know more of the details about this project and what it will mean to the Town.

Lastly – By the time you read this, more Little Harbor paving should have been laid this week on some of the remaining unpaved roads, weather permitting. A bit more progress…

HEALTH NOTES

Private wells and drinking water

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

On Monday June 1 at 8:15 p.m. the Board of Health will hold a hearing on a State-mandated revision to the Town's Board of Health Regulations for Private Wells. The regulation will cover drinking water from private well systems. Purpose of the regulations is to protect the public health and general welfare by ensuring that private wells are constructed and maintained in a manner that will protect the quality of the groundwater derived from the wells and people using that water.

These regulations are similar in intent to existing regulations now in place, and should not normally require any action by those with their own drinking water wells.

These regulations are similar in intent to existing regulations now in place, and should not normally require any action by those with their own drinking water wells. However, if you use a private well, you should have some information about it. If it's an old well, most likely any records that you my have date to the first inspection done at sale of the property or at the last required inspection. A private well (drinking water or irrigation) use permit must be obtained every three (3) years in conjunction with the required testing. Several tests are required on differing schedules. For example. tests for a variety of 20 or so metals (lead, mercury, etc.) are conducted on a ten-year basis, as are tests for synthetic organic compounds like chlordane and lindane. Entrococci, bacteria and several other microscopic critters are tested for on a 3-year cycle as well. There's a test for turbidity (cloudiness) done every three years. And finally, a test for nuclear activity done every ten years.

All of these tests are required to be done on every private well in Town. And towns all over the U.S. have similar regulations. Such are the protections developed in the face of advancing and persistent threats to drinking water supplies all over the world.

According to the United Nations, the world water crisis is one of the largest public health issues of our time. Nearly 1.1 billion people (roughly 20 percent of the world's population) lack access to safe drinking water. The lack of clean, safe drinking water is estimated to kill almost 4,500 children per day. Out of the 2.2 million unsafe drinking water deaths in 2004, 90 percent were children under the age of five. Water is the basis for all healthy life on this planet.

The problem isn't confined to a particular region of the world. A third of the Earth's population lives in "water stressed" countries and that number is expected to rise dramatically over the next two decades. The crisis is the worst in developing countries, especially in Sub-Saharan Africa and South Asia.

The world water crisis is created many factors: climate and geography, lack of access to water systems and infrastructure, and inadequate sanitation for 40 percent of the world's population. Some countries have high levels of arsenic and fluoride in their drinking water, the only water to which they have access.

Women and young girls in rural areas in sub-Saharan Africa and other parts of the world must trek as far as six miles every day to retrieve water for their families. Lack of clean water, causes high child mortality rates, depressed education levels, and political instability. Without question, the world water crisis condemns billions of people to a perpetual struggle to survive at the subsistence level. [1] This in a world where three quarters of the planet is covered by water.

The 2008 world population was 6.3 billion: the available food supply worldwide can feed about 5.0 billion.

Short of a holocaust, the only way the problem of water and food distribution can be solved in the face of a growing world population is through a program of education, dissemination of knowledge, communication, and finally transportation: the four great facilitators of successful healthy growth.

Cutting Latin is illogical

COMMENTARY

SAM GREEN

DR. WALSH,

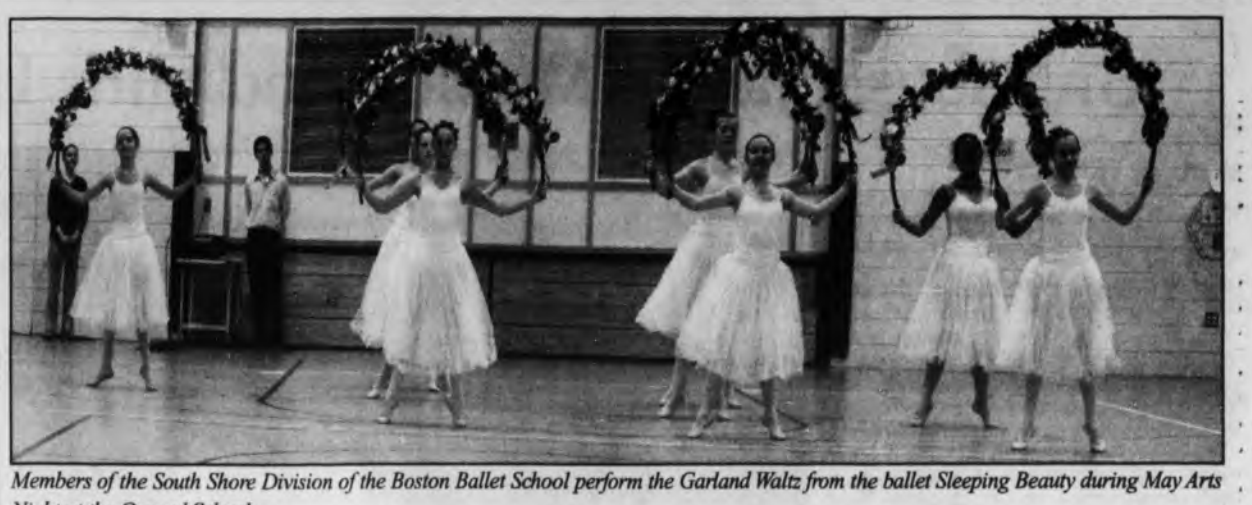
My name is Sam Green, I will be a junior at Cohasset High School in the fall, and I believe I would be doing a disservice to the education of myself and my peers if I did not voice some concerns shared by many students about certain decisions that have been made with regards to curriculum, particularly regarding the Foreign Language Department. I know that you have heard from several students and parents already on some of these issues, but as a dedicated student of both Latin and Spanish (with the intention of beginning French) who plans to focus the remainder of his high school and college education on language, I stand to suffer the consequences of these decisions more than most other students.

I understand that the budget is tight and cuts must be made, but as an educational institution, it is the responsibility of Cohasset High School to place priority on academics. Money is currently being spent on frivolous classes such as "electronic studio art" and "photo, film, and media," which most students seem to take as joke classes of which not much effort or academic performance is required. But at the same time, a highly academic course such as Latin is being dropped from the school's curriculum entirely? It seems illogical to take from the dedicated, gifted students who chose to challenge themselves intellectually while favoring students who are unmotivated and apathetic.

Latin in particular is an extremely rewarding course. Students learn not only vocabulary and grammar of Latin, but also ancient and modern history, American government, and the grammar and mechanics of English (grammar is no longer taught in English classes). While working on a recent research paper for English, I found myself constantly thinking how much richer my English vocabulary is since I have taken Latin. Furthermore, Mr. O'Neil is undoubtedly the favorite teacher of every student who has ever taken his class. I have more respect for this man as an educator, an intellectual, and a person than I previously thought possible. He challenges his students immensely while still making class enjoyable, which is a truly rare phenomenon. Latin is easily my favorite class, and I look forward to it every day. In the fall, I practically count down the days until the spring term so I can begin the class again, and I know that I am not the only student who feels this way. I can honestly say that I learn more in one of Mr. O'Neil's classes than I learn in whole semesters of other classes. Additionally, Mr. O'Neil is a part-time teacher currently, and he only teaches three classes for one semester per year, so the expense is far less than many other areas of the school.

In the fall, I practically count down the days until the spring term so I can begin the class again, and I know that I am not the only student who feels this way.

Another issue that many students have is the fact that Advanced Placement Spanish is not being offered next year. The excuse of low student interest can not be made, as there are AP French classes that have only two to four students, whereas there are approximately 10 students who would sign up for AP Spanish next year. Students who want to take this course will no longer have the opportunity to perfect their Spanish fluency. That this course is being dropped while less academic courses such as AP Computer Science are being introduced is a tragedy in the education of Cohasset High School students.



Please consider the educational future of the students in your schools who are passionate about language. The Foreign Language Department, as it stands, is about to be cut to only two full-time teachers, whereas other departments have up to six.. I am highly concerned about the direction that Cohasset High is taking in this decision.

I understand that you are extraordinarily busy and have an incredibly demanding job, so I thank you very much for taking the time to read this e-mail. I don't mean to sound aggressive or bitter and intend this e-mail to be only a respectful plea from a highly dedicated student.

Countdown to the Arts Festival!

FESTIVAL

DIANE KENNEDY

The countdown is on for the 54th annual South Shore Art Center Arts Festival, a weekend that for the Art Center offers an opportunity to showcase their many artists and ongoing exhibition and education programs. For South Shore residents, it's a traditional welcome to summer and a chance to be inspired by art – as well as shop among the art exhibitions and the almost 100 craft exhibitors selling handmade clothing, art, original art, jewelry, and home and garden products.

The centerpiece of the Arts Festival is a large exhibition tent that bisects the historic Town Common. More than 300 artists are showcased in two exhibitions: a Juried Art Show and Members' Show. The juried art show was selected in early May and Best in Show will be awarded to Hingham artist Vcevold Strekalovsky for his piece "Burditt Lane." Strekalovsky is an architect and former president of South Shore Art Center.

"We laugh that this is the 'Year of Vcevy'. A few months ago, we chose his 2008 festival painting to be on the cover of the festival program book and now he is being recognized by our professional jurors with the Best in Show award. It all makes sense – he is a gifted artist and is always willing to share his art and demonstrate his talents on behalf of the Art Center," said Sarah Hannan, executive director of the Art Center. Both paintings will be for sale, and the festival painting will be a part of a silent auction at the Art Center during festival weekend.

Throughout the Common, individual artists, including painters, printmakers and craft artists, will display their work in small tents. "Each February, we carefully select the exhibitors, balancing annual favorites with new artists," said Diane Kennedy, festival coordinator. "Our priorities in selecting the artists are quality of their product and salability to the Arts Festival audience." Local artists participating in this year's festival include Marj Bates, glass, Scituate; Sage Belber, jewelry, Scituate; Susan Buswell, fiber rugs, Cohasset; Margot Cheel, aerial photography, Cohasset; Kieli Storm Dooley, jewelry, Scituate; Karen Eames, fiber bags/purses, Duxbury; Steve Eames, photography/painting, Duxbury; Trish Hart, headbands/accessories, Cohasset; MacMillan Family Surfside Studio, ceramics, Squantum; and Brian T. McAlpine, furniture, Scituate.

The Arts Festival opens at 2 p.m., Friday, June 19, and continues on Saturday and Sunday, June 20 and 21. For more information, visit the Web site at ssac.org. Visitors are asked to park at South Shore Music Circus and take advantage of the free trolley shuttle. Parking in Cohasset Village will be heavily restricted and there is no parking along the Town Common.

Tough questions for the MBTA

COMMENTARY

MICHAEL WEYMOUTH

The news that the MBTA is considering eliminating the commuter boat service seems to have taken many people by surprise. However, for those of us who were active in the Greenbush opposition, especially members of Advocates for Transportation Alternatives (AfTA), the demise of the commuter boat service was foreseen as an inevitable casualty of the Greenbush restoration.

When AfTA president, Dr. John Bewick, along with several other South Shore luminaries, met with Governor Romney to present the case for the alternatives to Greenbush, the boat being the primary alternative, he outlined a cascade of events that would spell the end of the commuter boats. Not the least of these events was the financial catastrophes that would be visited on the MBTA if Greenbush were built. In addition, Bewick's presentation pointed out that the T's Greenbush ridership projections were not only inflated, many of the train riders would ultimately come from the commuter boats, a pre-existing, inexpensive and very popular public transit system. And if those riders were not sufficient to meet the projections, the T would ultimately find a way to shut down the commuter boat service in order to drive more commuters to the train.

Unfortunately the presentation was a hard sell for two reasons: the first was the appointment of Doug Foy as the Governor's transportation/environmental czar. Foy had been head of the Conservation Law Foundation and a strong proponent of Greenbush prior to joining the Romney team and was hardly an impartial voice in advising the Governor; the second was Romney's lack of focus as Governor. Instead of becoming the fiscally responsible leader he had promised voters, he decided to pursue his Presidential ambitions instead. As a result, he left many important decisions up to others in his administration, Foy among them. And I'm sure Mitt Romney did not lie awake at night thinking about the fate of the Hingham commuter boat.

In the two years since Greenbush has been in operation, Bewick's ridership projections have proven to be much more accurate than the T's. And unfortunately the T is doing the very thing he predicted they would do if ridership fell below projections, albeit cloaked in the guise of budget cutting. If there's any doubt about this, ask yourself why any responsible public transit agency would cut funds from a commuter system with one of the lowest per rider subsidies in its entire system.

Rather than being surprised by this move, citizens should be outraged!

Q: Greenbush ridership has fallen short of expectations and one presumes that were the boat service to be terminated, more commuters would be driven to ride the train. Is the removal of the boat subsidy part of a calculation to bolster Greenbush ridership or is it truly budget-cutting as the T claims? And if it is the latter, why would they eliminate a system that is such an efficient mode of public transit?

Q: The boat is given a $3.9 million subsidy. What does that translate into per rider and how does it compare to the Greenbush per rider subsidy (based on actual annual ridership, not the projected ridership)?

Q: The T had the option to not build Greenbush, (because of lack of federal funding, among other reasons) when they were well aware of their impending financial crisis, why didn't they support the much less expensive boat alternative instead with things such as enhanced parking at the shipyard which was projected to remove the same number of cars from the roads as a restored Greenbush?

Q. If they remove the subsidy, and the boats try to make it on their own, what becomes of the parking lot? Would they sell it to the shipyard developer? What is the value of the parking lot?

Q. The original Greenbush line was strictly a commuter service. The T runs nearly empty trains during non-commuting hours during the week and especially on weekends. Why not eliminate these runs, rather than nix the boat service?

If there's any doubt about this, ask yourself why any responsible public transit agency would cut funds from a commuter system with one of the lowest per rider subsidies in its entire system.

Buttonwood hosts Coffee with the Authors

Buttonwood Books & Toys will host its semi-annual Coffee with the Authors event from 9:45 to 11:30 a.m., on Tuesday, June 9, at Atlantica Restaurant, 44 Border St.

Attendees can enjoy a continental breakfast while three contemporary authors discuss their latest work. Authors will be Lisa Genova, Lynne Griffin and Anne D. LeClaire.

Genova's book, "Still Alice," is about a 50-year-old woman who is diagnosed with early-onset Alzheimer's. Scituate author Griffin writes about the loss of a child in her debut novel, "Life Without Summer," and Cape Cod resident, LeClaire will discuss "Listening Below the Noise: A Meditation on the Practice of Silence" about her decision to turn an ordinary day into a day of silence and how that one day turned into 17 years of total silence twice a month.

Tickets are $16 per person, and reservations and tickets are required. Call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665 to reserve seats or order a signed copy if unable to attend.

played "Glory, Glory, Hallelujah" and veteran Joe Hamilton recited the poem, "In Flanders Field" written by John McCrae during WWI.

All the speakers were heartened and appreciative of the support evident in the large turnout for the services. "What a tribute to American servicemen and women and what a tribute to those who gave the ultimate sacrifice," said Tom Wigmore, Sons of the American Legion commander.

Looking out at the crowd and seeing many young families touched Deirdre Wigmore, American Legion Women's Auxiliary President. She especially thanked the veterans who marched in their uniforms.

"Thank you for our freedom, because it is not free," she said.

Keynote speaker Coleman Nee, Cohasset resident and the current undersecretary of the Massachusetts Department of Veteran Services, said he was impressed with the crowd.

"Through my work I get to speak to groups all over the state about veterans' issues, sadly sometimes there are more speakers than audience members," said Nee, adding he was struck with how many of his comrades came out – and fit into – their uniforms. "You look pretty smart."

A veteran of Operation Desert Storm, Nee served in the Marine reserves. Wearing a gray suit in lieu of his uniform, he quipped his uniform must have gotten shrunk in the dryer.

Nee's address spoke of the importance of both remembering those fallen heroes and honoring them.

"We should all understand though that remembrance is not enough. What we do here today is not enough. We, as Americans and patriots, are also duty bound to honor those that have died in service to America…the true measure of how much we honor those that have fallen is directly proportional to how well we care for and support those that have returned and their families," Nee said – in response to this statement he received a round of applause.

He told the crowd they should be proud to live in Massachusetts because of the state's commitment to the men and women of uniform.

"Massachusetts has a proud tradition of caring for veterans and ensuring that those who have answered our country's call to duty, are treated with the dignity and respect that they have earned when they return," said Nee.

To close the ceremony, a wreath was placed at the front of the memorial to commemorate those Cohasset residents who have lost their lives fighting for the country. The flower girls cast their bouquets into the harbor for those sailors lost to the sea and a firing squad saluted fallen comrades with three single shots. The veteran's saluted while a trumpeter played Taps.

Cohasset resident Lilly Sestito sang "God Bless America" and the Cohasset High School accompanied by the Rusty Skippers played the National Anthem and the American flag was raised to full staff.

Cohasset-Hull makes a good team

By William Wassersug

The Cohasset softball team may be rivals with neighboring Hull, and in fact might play them in their tournament opener Monday, but in one sport, the two schools aren't rivals. Instead, they're teammates.

Cohasset and Hull, two smaller schools that couldn't individually support the numbers needed for a successful track team, have banded together and had an outstanding season.

The boys team won three meets and the girls notched a pair of victories, and the season isn't over for everyone.

Cohasset-Hull has three South Shore League All-Stars and five athletes headed to the MIAA Class D State Meet on Friday in Weston.

Tori Lehr qualified for States in the shot put, and is also the South Shore League champion in the event.

Dave Allen will represent the team in the mile and Calvin Servaes qualified in the high jump.

Allen and Servaes are also All-Stars.

Lesen Haracz made States in the javelin and Brian Collins qualified.

Could things get much more exciting around here when it comes to sports?

I'm not sure it can get much better.

Just take a quick look around.

Start with the Cohasset softball team.

They're a No. 1 seed, finished the regular season with a 17-3 record and stats that just jump off the page.

This is a team that I honestly believe has a chance to go all the way.

Of course it all starts with pitching, and Cohasset has that in abundance.

Kelly Naegelin has been virtually untouchable all season, and even if something goes wrong, freshman Haley Wheelwright can get the job done.

The boys lacrosse team opened their playoff campaign last night at home, and barring an upset or rain, keep in mind this was written Thursday morning, the team should have a chance to do some damage.

Cohasset finished the season 14-6, but the six losses were all quality losses. According to Laxpower.com, the teams that beat Cohasset, with the exception of Scituate, were among the top 20 teams in the state, and Scituate is the No. 1 seed.

If the Skippers won last night, they'll play the winner of Austin Prep/Hamilton Wenham on Monday at 5 p.m.

The boys and girls tennis teams are both in action with good seeds.

The boys tennis team, with a 12-4 record nabbed the No. 5 seed and a home meet against Norton on Sunday at 4 p.m.

Local tennis fans should love Sunday because the girls play right before the boys at 1 p.m.

Cohasset will be taking their 12-4 record and No. 7 seed to the court against No. 10 Cape Cod Academy.

If the two teams win, it looks like a Monday road trip for both to Old Rochester.

That could be a battle.

The Old Rochester girls will have an opening bye and check in at 18-0.

Old Rochester's boys are 14-4 and have the No. 4 seed.

Still, you never know what can happen.

Head coach Rob Spofford is all smiles after Kelly Naegelin struck out the side as he gives a hand to catcher Kayla Omer in an earlier win this season. Cohasset drew the No. 1 seed and will play on Monday.

The Cohasset softball team doesn't know who they'll play on Monday. They aren't particularly concerned either.

With a No. 1seed in the Division 3 South Tournament, Cohasset has a first-round bye and a full weekend to prepare for either Hull or South Shore Christian.

Cohasset coach Rob Spofford expects a tough game either way.

"Anything can happen in the playoffs," Spofford said. "I don't know much about South Shore Christian, but I do know Hull is a good team. We beat them twice, but it's always a tough game. They have a real good pitcher."

With the prom on Friday, uncertain weather and the long season just behind, the extra few days and the stress of one fewer high-stakes game can only help.

Expect Cohasset to be in the mix.

The 17-3 record and No. 1 seed didn't come without hard work, luck and talent – the same elements that will win in the tournament.

Cohasset is led by pitcher Kelly Naegelin, who finished the season with a 16-2 record and a 1.00 ERA in the strong South Shore League.

Naegelin also hit .436.

Offensively, the Skippers will look to a deep lineup fueled by first baseman Meredith Kelly, who hit .535 with a league-leading seven homeruns and 40 RBI.

Part of her success can be credited to leadoff hitter Kristen Monaco, who hit .474, and an even higher on base percentage.

My 18: a gem, from start to finish

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

Everybody asks, "What's your favorite golf course," and I always say, "the one I am playing."

However, if I could take a first hole from one course and the second hole from another, I would have a dandy of a golf course. Here is mine:

My first hole is Atlantic in Plymouth. It's reachable by most golfers and would be considered easy. But it isn't. If you pull it right, you're in a lateral hazard. Long hitters can go for broke. But don't ruin your round before it begins.

The second hole at Brookmeadow in Canton is a dog leg to the right, but long hitters have to be wary. You can drive it through the fairway into the trees. But even a well-placed drive leaves you a long approach into an elevated green.

The third hole at Pembroke CC, a fearsome par-3, has caused me nightmares. It's a downhill tee shot of 220 yards. Water fronts the green and meanders to the left side. The green has two tiers and if you are on the wrong level, a three-putt is likely.

The fourth hole at Green Harbor in Marshfield is another one I have battled with for many years. It's only 300 yards and it has a quick dogleg to a huge green. If the wind is blowing in the right direction, long hitters mind try to drive it.

The par-5 fifth hole at Crosswinds requires power as well as patience. It's nearly 500 yards from tee to green and the green is well protected. And once you get to the green, your work is just beginning. It's one of the largest putting surfaces in Plymouth County.

What is it about reachable par-5s that make you want to play them again and again? I always eagerly anticipate playing the sixth hole at Widows Walk in Scituate. It's the widest fairway and is a slight dogleg to the right. Water skirts along the left. It begs you to get on in two.

My seventh hole has to be Bay Pointe's in Onset. It's not TPC Sawgrass, but it's an island green, just 101 yards from the tips. It is more a battle of nerves than skill. Just imagine what it's like for the pros playing a hole like this for the Players Championship?

The eighth hole on the Milton nine at Granite Links is a short but deadly affair. Aim away from the green, favoring the left side because long hitters will drive it into the waste bunker that fronts the green. The green is narrow and difficult to hold.

The ninth hole at Olde Scotland Links in Bridgewater is another of those reachable par-5s that has trouble everywhere. Water guards the left side of the fairway. If you hit it right you're in the wetlands. Another band of wetlands separate the fairway from the green.

When you prepare to hit your tee shot at the 10th hole at Lakeville CC, remember accuracy is more important than distance. There are water hazards to the left, straightaway and to the right. Drive it as far as you dare and then prepare for a precarious approach shot to an elevated green.

The 11th is the most difficult hole at Braintree Municipal. It is a long par-4 (430 yards from the tips) with water down the right side. If you fade your tee shot or approach, you will be in trouble. The green is as difficult as the length of the hole.

The 12th hole on Ponkapoag's No. 2 course in Canton demands a straight drive. There is no room for error. It's only 340 yards, but staying in play is the key on this hole. You might want to back off to your 3-wood if your driver is straying.

D.W. Field in Brockton is one of the hidden golfing jewels in an urban setting. And the 13th hole is as good as any hole you'll play – public or private. It is a long par-4 down a tree-lined fairway. Your approach shot is all carry because of the cavernous dip that fronts the green. And the putting surface has several levels waiting for disaster.

You could pick any of the holes at Poquoy Brook in Lakeville and they could be listed in a Best 18, but the par-5 14th is one that always comes to mind. It is a short par-5, but the green is so huge and well protected with sand that it makes up for the lack of distance.

When you stand on the 15th tee at Presidents in Quincy, you look below at what's ahead and you think birdie. Often times, you walk off the green with bogey or worse. There is plenty of fairway on this dogleg right around a pond. But greedy golfers dare to hit it close to the shoreline for the opportunity of reaching this par-5 in two shots.

Heritage Hill's 16th hole in Lakeville has one of the most unusual greens we have ever putted. It's shaped like a shamrock, but few golfers have much luck surviving it without a three-putt, especially when they tuck the pin in the upper corners.

Riverbend's 17th in West Bridgewater reminds me of playing golf in Carolina among the tall pine trees. This par-3 plays anywhere from 197 to 139 yards and water comes into play in front of the left side of the green. The putting surface is framed up by a pair of bunkers.

The 18th at South Shore in Hingham is one of those short par-5s you can reach with two perfectly executed shots. But watch out for out of bounds down the right side and a hill full of high round on the left. There is a creek that meanders across the fairway and the putting surface is deceptively heartless.

HACKER OF THE WEEK

Not his bag

It happened a few years ago at Rockland. There is a water hole with several tees around it. A guy dribbles his tee shot into the water. Gets so mad, he throws his club in the drink, too. Then, he picks up a golf bag and tosses it in the pond. Everybody laughs but one guy. Why? The club tosser threw the wrong golf bag in the water. It wasn't his. Sheepishly, he apologized and went in the water and retrieved the golf bag.

One size fits all at Atlantic

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

Is there a way to size up a golf course before you play a round?

ATLANTIC COUNTRY CLUB

I think so. What I do is walk into the clubhouse, in general, and its 19th hole in particular.

If there is no more than the barest of elements: greasy hot dogs and PBR's (that's Pabst Blue Ribbon Beer), the course is usually unkempt and pedestrian.

If there is an ostentatious clubhouse with ornate decorations and uncomfortable seating, the course is usually too manicured and has holes that aren't easy to play, but take wonderful photographs.

Then there are courses with modest clubhouses and wonderful 19th holes. These are the courses you want to play. There is no pretension.

It is simply a wonderful, challenging golf course that you can play day after day without getting bored. There are no impossible holes and every par you make is a par that you've earned.

The landscape is oh, so Cape Cod and you don't have to cross the canal to enjoy it.

Laid out generously over 178 acres of modestly rolling topography, this track is in the backwoods of Plymouth, a short ride from the hustle and bustle of Route 3. You have an idyllic ride up and down an old country ride to put you in the right frame of mind before your first tee shot.

There are so many good holes and with its multiple tees, is a challenge for everyone from scratch to hardscrabble hacker.

This is a golfer's golf course. Every hole is unique and in a world of its own. There are no back-and-forth adjacent fairways where other hackers can invade your territory and distract you from your appointed rounds.

Although carts are available, those who enjoying walking a course will be happy to know that there are no 200-yard marches from one green to the next tee.

Your work begins at the first hole. It is a perfect design to set you up for what lies ahead.

Donald Ross always said he wanted to give golfers an opportunity to stretch out their game before they faced the difficult holes ahead. For a starting open, he wanted something simple and the architects at Cornish Silva & Mungeam did just that.

The first hole is a 300-yard par-4. You don't have to kill the tee shot. Just put it in play and you have a modest approach. But there is danger down the left side as staked wetlands follow you from tee to green.

There are holes that will test even the best golfers.

The eighth is a magnificent par-4. It played around 400 yards from the middle tees and stretches to 443 from the tips. The prevailing wind, of course, is always in your face. Of course, it is the No. 1 stroke hole. Just hope the flagstick is in the back of the green because you're hitting a long iron or fairway wood for an approach shot.

Another one of those little things that make Atlantic stand out is the drive-by halfway house, where hungry golfers can grab a bite on the run without slowing down the rest of the course.

The 18th is a challenging finishing hole. You need a good drive to reach this 386-yard par-4 in regulation. But if you are fading your irons, you'll have to garner all your courage for the approach behind water that's in front and down the right side to the green.

If you make a par, go celebrate on the deck with a beverage of your choice. If you lose a ball in the water hazard, you can commiserate on the deck as well.

the League Meet," C-H coach Brad Mingles said. "He ran a four-minute, forty-four second mile. I think he liked the symmetry (all fours). Really, he executed beautifully. He was right on the plan."

Haracz, a senior, may opt out for good cause.

"The way the schedule is, with States Friday night is tough because of the prom," Mingels said. "She's hoping for rain so she can go to the prom and compete on Saturday. She's earned the right to go."

Lehr is a multi-sport star.

Mingels said he's been more than happy with his team this season.

"The kids really came together," he said. "After our last meet, the South Shore Principals Meet, we got back to the school and nobody wanted to get off the bus. Nobody wanted it to end. We really had a unified, dedicated group of kids. The dynamic is just great. I coached cross country as well. I knew the distance crew was close, but this group is too. I'm so pleased and proud of them."

Mingels said his athletes can advance to the All-States.

"We have legitimate threats," he said. "They can make it."

There were a few people who just missed.

"JoJo Brophy is an honorable mention All-Star," Mingels said. "She ran just about everything for us from the 200 to the two-mile. She missed States in the 400 by a half a second. When she was running it showed how close the team is. Everybody was there pulling for her. They really wanted to help her in her last bid. They wanted to pull that last half second."

Mingels said it wasn't just the top athletes who impressed.

"We've had kids grow tremendously," he said. "Like Natalie Dignam. She's come a long way. She was sixth in the league in the 800 and it was her first year running it. Chris Quebec was another. Every time on the track he gave his best."

Mingels enjoyed bringing the sometime rivals together.

"It's interesting with a co-op, especially when the schools are rivals in other sports," he said. "It works here. The kids really like each other. They get along great. The dedication is there. Hull doesn't have a track so those kids are coming here every day. They've all worked hard. We've had light numbers, but I'm expecting an uptick next year. The kids talk and they've heard how much they enjoy it. Word travels. I think we'll be climbing in the next couple of years."

With the season done for most, Mingels said he's ready for the next season to start.

"It's kind of bittersweet," he said of the end of the season. "I look forward to running with the kids. It's been a gratifying season. I can't wait until next year."

Weekend worth watching

against Pembroke, well I think it was Pembroke, highly favored, and got routed.

On the track, Tori Lehr has a chance to do some damage in shot put in the State Tournament on Friday.

The news hasn't been all great.

The Cohasset girls lacrosse team lost 15-5 at Franklin in the preliminary round, and the baseball team fell short of the tournament, although they look like a team that can make some noise in the next few seasons.

Upcoming young pitchers can do that.

As for the girls lacrosse, they are also a team that can make some noise in the future and have to be congratulated for their making the tournament.

Finally, the Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund is hosting the annual Clark's Fund Run on Sunday, May 31 at 10:00am. It's a 3.5 mile walk or run that leaves and finishes at the South Shore Music Circus. All the proceeds go to the Chatterton Fund which has given over $100,000 to worthy athletic and community projects in Cohasset over the past ten years.

Lady Skippers wait to see who they'll play

Monaco changed her style of hitting this season to a slap-hitting style that can drive pitchers and defenses crazy.

Monaco drew 20 walks during the season and scored 27 runs. Opponents have to make a decision to defend the bunt or risk the infield hit.

In Cohasset's come-from behind win over Harwich, Monaco knocked in the winning run with a bases-loaded drive down the third base line that easily got by third because Harwich had to stay in to defend the squeeze.

Cohasset will go into the playoffs on a positive note, even though the season finale at Nantucket was a 3-2 loss on Saturday.

"Haley Wheelwright pitched at Nantucket," Spofford said. "She pitched a four-hitter and pitched well enough to win. We made a few errors, but played well. If we have to use Haley in the tournament I'm confident she can do the job."

Spofford said that with the No. 1 seed wrapped up, he wanted to get playing time for all.

"We might have to play them soon," he said. "I didn't want to give away too much. Neither team did. They didn't use their starting pitcher either."

The playing time for the bench made the long trip more fun.

"It did make it a little more special for the girls," Spofford said. "They earned it. The success of the team came from them too."

Spofford credited his senior captains for bringing the team together quickly.

"My three senior captains have shown great leadership," he said of Carly Salerno, Monaco and Carly Zappolo. "They've been captains for two years. It's nice having continuity. The girls have really done a great job. Brittany Dunn has also been a leader. She's also a senior."

When the game start, Spofford expects a strong showing.

"We have the capability to go all the way," he said. "They have to believe that and embrace that. If the girls can muster it and we get a few breaks on the way we can do it."

The breaks, Spofford said, are part of the game.

"You need a little luck at this level," he said. "And you need to stay focused on the positives. It's going to be fun."

Then, there are the numbers.

"I'm a stats guy," Spofford said. "Look close and you see the stats don't lie. Our record is 17-3 and we're a No. 1 seed because we belong there. The girls have worked hard. We weren't on anyone's radar screen at the beginning of the season. We are now. We just have to play the games."

Local gymnasts shine

Seven gymnasts with the South Shore Community Center Gymnast in Motion Team traveled to West Roxbury for the South Shore Championships on Friday, May 8. The competition was at the Ohrenberger Community Center. All of the gymnasts had some outstanding performances.

In the 10 and younger age division Elizabeth Coletta of Cohasset placed first in the all-around, first on floor (7.8), bars (8.0) and beam (8.0), and fourth on the vault (8.0).

In the 14 and older age division Amber Silvia of Cohasset placed first in the all-around, first on floor (8.6) and bars (8.60), second on beam (7.8) and vault (9.20). Teammate Erin Murray of Hingham placed sixth in the all-around and sixth on the floor exercise.

In the 13-year-old age division there were strong performances from the following competitors. Kara O'Malley of Scituate with a sixth place finish on the beam (7.2). Teammate Marisa Stewart of Scituate placed fifth in the all-around, fourth on floor (8.0) and vault (8.90), and fifth on the bars (7.90). Christina Tedeschi of Cohasset was fourth in the all-around, fourth on floor (8.0) and bars (8.20) and first on Vault (9.20). Emily Podurgiel of Scituate was third in the all-around, third on floor (8.1) and bars (8.40),and sixth on vault (8.60).

Cohasset Golf Club womens team captures championship

Congratulations to the Women's 2nd Team of Cohasset. The team captured the Championship of the 24th Cup of the Annual WGAM (Womens Golf Association of Massachusetts) Spring Team Matches. The team plays a series matches over 5 weeks at WGAM member clubs.

The team consisted of Diane Benson (Captain) and Dianne Taylor of Cohasset, Pidge Hurley and Jill Drohan of Hingham. In addition, the following players came through as player substitues for at least one of the five matches played: Judy Simmonds, Mary Roche, Donna Fitzwilliam, and Pat LaFond.

Clark's Fund Run is Sunday May 31

The annual Clark's Fund Run is scheduled for Sunday May 31at 10am.

The 3.5 mile road race will start and end at The South Shore Music Circus. The days events include a 3.5 mile walk at 9:30am and the run at 10am.

The Clark Chatterton Memorial Committee sponsors the run. Clark Chatterton spent his entire life in Cohasset. He and his wife Sally raised their children in town. For more than thirty years Clark was a teacher, coach and athletic director at Cohasset High School.

Clark is also remembered as the Concessions Manager at The South Shore Music Circus, where he spent every summer of his adult life. Clark loved Cohasset and had a special place in his heart for youth sports and community initiatives. It is on behalf of theose things he held dear that the Clark Chatterton Memorial Committee was formed. The primary mission is to raise funds and enhance Cohasset's sports and recreation facilities. The 9th annual Clark's Fund Run is set for Sunday May 31, 2009.

Our raised funds continue the long-lasting tradition of giving back to the community in Clark's name.

Please consider joining us on the 31st for a fun family event. Applications can be picked up at The Good Sport or via email from dbeal@cohassetk12.org.

Former Cohasset sticker heading Down Under

The former Cohasset lacrosse player recently graduated from St. Michael's College and he's headed to Australia to play and coach lacrosse for several months. His host team there will be the East Fremantle Blues, which has been a sister program to Cohasset Youth Lacrosse since the World Games of 2002.

That year, the World Games were played in Perth, Australia, and Previte's former youth coach Chuck Jaffe played in the master's division of the tournament with the Brine USA team. While there, Jaffe's team was hosted by the Wembley Wolves, a long-time Australian club that plays its games in green and gold uniforms; that happened to be the colors of Jaffe's club prior to changing to red, white and blue for the games.

So Jaffe and his teammates donated their old gear — helmets, gloves and uniforms — and sent it halfway around the world to Wembley. And upon seeing how grateful the Wolves were — even to use old jerseys as scrimmage vests — Jaffe looked for a Western Australian club that shares Cohasset's navy-and-white colors.

Since 2003, Jaffe finished every lacrosse season by sending over any "extra" lacrosse gear — items left behind on the field plus donated old jerseys, sticks, helmets and more — to East Fremantle.

"I figured that program might end this year, as last season was my last year coaching youth players in Cohasset," Jaffe said. "We had always hoped it might lead to their players coming for a visit or ours heading there, but something always seemed to come up. And, truth be told, our donations dried up a bit and the boxes we shipped over were getting smaller."

"And then I found out that Jake was headed to play in East Fremantle," said Jaffe. "He's going to travel half way around the world — it's 24 hours of flying time and 12 hours' time difference — and when he shows up for his first practice they will all be wearing Cohasset jerseys."

Jaffe and the Cohasset Lacrosse Boosters want that tradition to continue. Previte is not the first Cohasset player to go play and coach down under, but he is the first to join East Freo. With the lines of communication strengthened by his presence, Jaffe hopes that he will be the first of many to have the experience. (Jaffe's own experience in Australia was strong enough that seven years later, he named his new dog "Freo" for a place he "loves and wants to get back to.")

To that end, Jaffe and the Cohasset Lacrosse Boosters are trying to generate the biggest shipment of Cohasset lacrosse gear ever sent to Australia, to support Previte during his time there. They are collecting old Cohasset jerseys, plus any extra gear that is in reasonable condition. Coaches will gather it during the final weeks of the 2009 spring season — and will have a station for it at the South Shore Lacrosse Jamboree the second weekend in June — and everything collected will be sent along in mid-June. Jaffe will also be collecting gear directly, and can be reached at cajaffe@aol.com to arrange for pick-up or drop-off of equipment.

"My hope is that Jake is just the first, that his presence really helps to solidify the relationship," says Jaffe. "He has a wonderful opportunity, one that I hope other Cohasset kids will get in the future. Our old gear — sitting in drawers and rotting in garages, is a real boon to the growth of the sport in Western Australia, and will allow Jake to be that much more of a goodwill ambassador."

CYBSA parade and opening day ceremonies go off without a hitch or... a fire truck

In a scene straight out of a Norman Rockwell painting the Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association kicked off it's annual Opening Day parade.

With a Cohasset Police Squad Car blaring it's siren the parade kicked off from the Town Common. As is tradition, the 2008 Major League baseball champions, the Cardinals and the 2008 softball champs the Diamondbacks had the honor of leading the parade from their "luxury benches" on the CYBSA championship float. (Unfortunately the antique fire truck, a long-time staple of the parade, succumbed to the ravages of time and could not make the taxing drive).

Although Mother Nature threatened to interfere, a break in the inclement weather allowed the youth of Cohasset to show off their baseball and softball pride as they proudly marched down North Main St. The parade and ceremony drew record crowds this year as players and fans alike marched to the musical stylings of the Deerhill Band.

Once the parade reached the Barnes Complex the nearly 700 players sprinted onto the pristine diamond of Barnes Field and the players and fans gathered around the infield to celebrate the beginning of a new season. The Deerhill Band (including a few players in uniform doing double duty!) led the group in a rousing rendition of the Star Spangled Banner followed by an inspiring convocation delivered by Reverend Gary Ritts.

Varsity baseball and softball players lined the first and third base paths and were introduced by Head Coaches Peter Afanasiw and Rob Spofford respectively. Shortly thereafter, the honorable State Representative Garrett Bradley officially opened the season by throwing out the first pitch on behalf of the CYBSA. Young Liam O'Connell donned a weathered mitt and received Garrett's pitch like a pro. Not to be outdone, Robin Spofford pushed aside young Liam to receive the first pitch for the softball league. Demonstrating the form that earned her Cohasset HS Captain honors, Carly Salerno whistled one over the plate. The smack of the ball hitting the glove signaled to everyone in attendance that it would soon be time to play ball!

As tradition demands, the CYBSA board then recognized the contributions of its departing members. Countless hours of contribution marked the tenure of these members; each contributing in his or her own unique way. We bid you all adieu…Liam T. O'Connell, Nancy Froio, Suzie Montgomery, Joe Stanganelli and Dan Rice.

In a gesture of solace and appreciation, the CYBSA recognized the passing of a special friend and long-time supporter of the baseball and softball programs – Craig Muir. In his honor the CYBSA sponsored the American League Angels baseball team with uniforms donning the Muir name. Below is an excerpt from that presentation.

"As part of our opening day ceremonies, I would like to take this time to note the passing of a long time friend and supporter of Cohasset youth baseball, Craig Muir.

Craig was born and raised in Cohasset. He was an avid baseball fan who was instrumental in helping a growing baseball and softball organization thrive in this town. He played, coached, and was a selfless individual who did whatever it took to help the kids of Cohasset play ball.

In honor of Craig, The CYBSA is proudly sponsoring the Angels team this season. In addition, we would like to present this replica (authentic) MLB jersey to Kenny Muir, Craig's son, who himself was an avid Cohasset baseball player and is now attending Fairfield University.

Following this special recognition the ceremonies continued with the presentation of the Leo J. Fiori award; Tina Danielson stepped forward to deliver the award, which recognizes selfless contributions towards the betterment of the CYBSA programs. Below is an excerpt from that presentation:

"Each year, the CYBSA presents the Leo J. Fiore award to an individual who has distinguished himself or herself in support of the CYBSA, and his or her commitment to the youth of Cohasset. This year's Leo J. Fiore award recipient has devoted an extraordinary amount of time and effort to the CYBSA and the children of Cohasset over several years - he has contributed to this organization as a coach, a mentor and a board member; including serving four years as President.

His leadership was balanced and fair and always tempered by what is best for the youth of Cohasset. It is our privilege to know him and call him a friend, and our great fortune to have him as a fellow citizen.

Please join me in recognizing and applauding this year's Leo J. Fiore award recipient, Liam T. O'Connell.

While fidgeting players waited anxiously for the now much anticipated trivial portion of the program there was yet one more special award to announce.

No one was more stunned and surprised than Rob Spofford as he humbly walked to center stage to collect an award certain to define his legacy and contribution to the softball program. After years of incredible contribution and dedication towards the development of the Cohasset softball program, the CYBSA board created the Spofford Outstanding Achievement Award, which will be issued annually in recognition of extraordinary contributions to the softball program. Below is an excerpt from that presentation:

Spofford Outstanding Service Award (by CYBSA President Erik Golz)

"This year the CYBSA Board voted to establish a new award to recognize, specifically, the selfless dedication and commitment of individuals in support and development of our Softball program.

The CYBSA has had a long and proud tradition of exceptional volunteer service, but until now hasn't had a way to meaningfully acknowledge and thank the dedicated individuals that work so tirelessly to promote and enhance the Cohasset Softball Program.

This award has been created to recognize those individuals who, in the judgment of the CYBSA, have made extraordinary, commendable and sustained contributions to our softball program.

The chosen individual will be someone who creates a more positive and fun environment for our kids, who promotes teamwork, player development and community involvement. This is a person who has helped our young women maximize their full potential in the sport as well as in their life.

It is with great honor that I am pleased to announce the first ever recipient and namesake of this award – Rob Spofford. Rob's contributions towards the betterment of the Cohasset Softball program have been endless. He has channeled enormous energy into the program and, with the help of other dedicated volunteers, helped architect a growing programs that now includes Cohasset, Hingham, Scituate and other invited programs such as Derby Academy. Please join me in congratulating Rob.

And then the ceremony turned down trivia lane. The incredible patience of the girls and boys in uniform was about to be rewarded, there were prizes to be won and the ceremony turned into a wonderful joyful chaos…Questions rained down on the baseball mob…arms flailing about in hopes of recognition…answers shouted…coupons flying…smiles everywhere…the mob grew closer…louder…more demanding…one more time…and then, alas the till was dry…

And then it was really time to play ball…

Letter by CYBSA.

SCHOOLS

Seniors are outta here...almost

LIFE AT CHS

LAUREN MACK

Hello everybody! If the hallways seem quieter and the parking lot seems emptier, don't think that it's a terrible epidemic of swine flu or influx of early vacations. It's because the seniors are finally out! After 12 long years, we finally bid the Cohasset School Systems adieu. However, just because we're not present at school does not mean that we're necessarily done. Tonight is prom, which is held at the Venetzia in Dorchester. Pre-prom festivities will be on the Common at 5:30 where those attending the prom will walk down the red carpet and get to feel like beautiful celebrities surrounded by paparazzi. As for the post-prom...well I don't know too much about it other than the fact that it goes till 4 am. It's meant to be a surprise for us! Grad night is next Wednesday night at 7:30 pm at the high school, it is not only wise that you show up to this event where the school will be giving away about $100,000, but it is also mandatory if you think you might like to graduate. And of course, June 6th is graduation day.

This is a bittersweet time for my fellow classmates and I. Do not think for one moment that we are not absolutely thrilled to finally be out of school — because we are; but it is somewhat sad that we have to say goodbye to those who, over the past decade, have become as close as family. As for those who read this regularly? Well first of all, god bless all of you for putting up with my grammatical errors and sarcasm. And second, don't think I'm going to leave you guys hanging next year! Next year, as I have said before, I will have a predecessor for the Life at CHS column. Have you figured out who it is yet? If you have, great job following my hints; but if I stumped you, allow me to clear the air: next year, your newly minted senior columnist will be...Sean MacCarthy! Sean will begin his Life at CHS career immediately following my departure, meaning that next week, you'll have a new personality giving you the latest at the high school. And with that, I leave you all to not only a wonderful weekend, but a wonderful life. This is my 37th and final article, I hope I've done them all justice. I sincerely thank you all for reading them, and for the last time, goodbye.

Red carpet, tonight!

Once again, members of the Pre-Prom Committee have organized the very popular Red Carpet festivities for this year's prom-goers at Cohasset Town Hall, rain or shine, On Friday, May 29 starting at 5:15pm. Prom goers will be professionally photographed by Dan Leahy and videotaped by Our Town Producer, Pat Martin. Copies of prom photographs will be given to couples at the post prom and video will be shown on an upcoming episode of Our Town.

The popular roving reporter Rich Ofsthun will emcee this year's event. The town hall parking lot will be closed to prom goers only so attendees are suggested to park on North Main Street or in the town parking lot.

Pat is also currently producing the Class of 2009 Senior Slide Show and asks any parent who has not submitted photos of their senior to do so ASAP.

The video will be shown at the Post Prom and copies will be made available for sale. To order a slideshow, prom video or to submit photographs, please contact Pat at: massmartins@comcast.net.

Osgood celebrates Art in Books

THE ARTS

KATHRYN HILLMAN

Osgood School hosted its May Arts Night, sponsored by the Osgood PSO, on Wednesday, May 20. The theme this year was celebrating Art in Books. In different areas of the school, volunteers set up art-related activities for the students.

Most of the activity stations were in the cafeteria, set up for the students to try art techniques based on different books. Participants received a book to carry the art they created at the various stations. Each station was based on a different classic children's book such as the books of Eric Carle, the "I Spy" series and "Where the Wild Things Are." Each station combined its book with a different art technique, such as printing, photography or puppet making. For example, a station combined "I Spy" with photography by having each student make a beach scene and photographing it for their own "I Spy" scene. Another combined Eric Carle's distinct illustration style with an art technique. There was even a small printing press for the students to try.

Art-related activities were found throughout the school. On the playground, Mr. Dykas, the Osgood gym teacher, taught the students line dances. In the upstairs atrium, Mrs. Ogden, the Osgood art teacher, set up crafts centered around books, focusing primarily on teaching students about art techniques. In the library, there was an "instrument petting zoo" set up, where students could experiment with different instruments, including the clarinets, saxophone, drum, flute and a beginner violin.

Brooke Conroy and Emma Carroll create their ladybugs based on the book "The Grouchy Lady Bug," by Eric Carle. The theme of Art In Books was prevalent throughout May Arts Night at the Osgood School.

Arts night included the performing arts. The High School Jazz Combo played outside the school's main entrance. Director Stephanie Moriarty said the band was "...here to inspire young students" heading toward Cohasset's bands program.

Other performing arts included dance groups performing dances from around the world. Held in the gym, the dancing started with Isadora Duncan, from the Hingham Community Center, performing classical dances based on Greek mythology. Next, South Shore Ballet, from Hanover, preformed pieces from "Coppelia." The lead dancer, Charlotte Hovey, 14, summed up the entire evening, saying "I love performing. When you're dancing its all about fun. That's why I love it." The Dunleavy-Shaffler School of Irish Dance also preformed, as did the Boston Ballet School from Norwell. In addition, Deer Hill School's Jack Cunningham, a 10-year-old black belt in karate demonstrated different karate forms and answered questions.

The whole event was well attended and a huge success. The students clearly enjoyed the hands-on stations and many left with their books filled with projects destined for refrigerators all over town. As Jenni Milanoski, president of the Osgood PSO put it, "The PSO is proud to sponsor May Arts Night. Families love to attend. This year we celebrated art in books. It's a great event."

Farmer's markets, the fair and concerts in Marshfield this summer

By Lydia Mulvany
LMULVANY@CNC.COM

Fresh, local produce, crafts and live music are coming to the farmer's market at the Marshfield Fairgrounds on Fridays from 2 to 6 p.m., starting June 5 and ending Oct. 16.

But the markets, sponsored by the Marshfield Agricultural and Horticultural Society, are just a small taste of what can be found at the 142nd annual Marshfield Fair, which will be nine days of carnival rides, shows and exhibits from Aug. 21 to 30.

This year the fair's schedule includes an exhibit about raptors, stilt walkers, organic gardening demonstrations, a frontier show, live music, a blacksmith's shop and magic shows. There will also be exhibits of fruits, vegetables, plants and farm animals.

The recreation department will also offer summer concerts for four weeks on the Town Green next to Town Hall. This year, on July 12, from 5 to 8 p.m., there will be a family night to kick off the summer series, with Anna Buckley and the Armstrong Brothers performing country and children's music, and the Infractions performing oldies, R&B, reggae and swing classic ballads. July 19, The Rusty Skipper Concert Band, a 30-piece concert band, will perform marches, jazz, Broadway hits, and classical music from 6 to 8 p.m. July 26, the Jumpin' Juba trio will perform New Orleans-inspired rock and folk music from 6 to 8 p.m. And at the final concert Aug. 2, Quintessential Brass, a brass quintet, will perform classical, jazz, ragtime, rock and more.

Cohasset Carillon concerts are a summer classic

The 85th Annual Summer Recital Series begins Sunday, June 28, at 6 p.m. and will continue each Sunday until Aug. 16.

The Cohasset Carillon (speaking in superlatives) can proudly claim the oldest continuing annual recital series in North America. It is also the largest carillon by number of bells (57) in New England. The smallest bell weighs only 29 pounds, the largest five and a half tons – more than 11,000 pounds. It was the second carillon to arrive in the United States (the first was installed in Gloucester in 1923).

Among the guest recitalists this summer season are carillonneurs from the United States, Canada and Europe. Sally Slade Warner, carillonneur at St. Stephen's Church, will play on Sunday, Aug. 16. All are invited to take lawn chairs or a blanket along with a picnic supper to enjoy on the Common while listening to the music of the bells. After each recital, a brief tour of the tower will be offered for those interested in seeing the instrument in the playing cabinet and the bells in the tower above.

On Saturday, June 21, at 10 a.m. the bells will "be ringing" for the South Shore Arts Festival on Cohasset Common. Mary Kennedy, assistant carillonneur, will celebrate America with a selection of patriotic and popular songs, songs from the movies and Broadway, and songs from our richly diverse ethnic heritage.

If you would you like to commemorate a special romantic or family event with the music of the bells, e-mail Mary Kennedy at marymisha@aol.com.

Scituate Heritage Days headed back to its roots

By Brian P. Nanos
BNANOS@CNC.COM

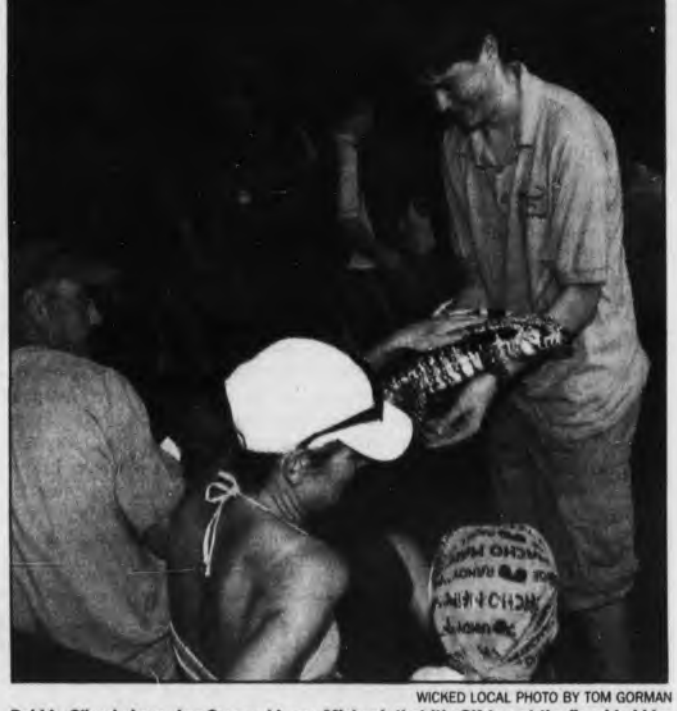
This year, Scituate's Heritage Days festival is being toned town and brought back to its roots.

In 1968, Scituate merchants had a sidewalk sale in the town's harbor business district. From there, Heritage Days has grown to become one of the South Shore's more popular events. Bands, crafts and other attractions – including more than 100 booths – have pulled more than 30,000 people to the coastal community in recent years.

From the lighting of luminaria along the coastline to the bands that played all weekend long, the traditions of the three-day fair have become highlights of Scituate summers.

But, according to members of the Chamber of Commerce, which sponsors the event, something might have been lost during all that growth.

This year, the Scituate Chamber of Commerce has announced plans to scale back the event, which will take place Aug. 7, 8 and 9.



Jesse Bateman, who is one of the festival's planners this year, has said that he wants to return Heritage Days to be more like it was when he was younger and felt comfortable attending the annual festival with his parents. He said he felt "almost claustrophobic" with his own children at last year's festival.

"I want to start to bring this back to me holding my mom and dad's hand, walking through Scituate Harbor," he told the town's Selectmen in March. "I think these steps will help us control it."

In recent years, Front Street has been packed with booths where vendors sold goods or advocates pushed causes.

This year, merchants who want to man one of the Front Street booths will be screened by a review board. The music – long a highlight to visitors but a bane to some neighbors – may be toned down and could possibly end earlier in the evening than it has in past years.

"This year, the Scituate Chamber of Commerce is bringing Heritage Days back to its original concept of quality art and artisans, music, food and supporting marketplace for a festive weekend," the Chamber has published on its Web site.

Weymouth's summer begins with a blast

By Ed Baker
EBAKER@CNC.COM

Skyrockets in flight over Wessagusset George Lane Beach will cap an evening of delights at Wessagusset George Lane Beach during the annual Independence Day celebration on July 3 at 9:30 p.m.

The festivities get underway at 5 p.m. A variety of musical groups will take listeners down memory lane by offering a variety of contemporary and classic lyrics before the fireworks display.

Spectators are urged to use a free shuttle service to Lane Beach from the Whipple Senior Center, located at 182 Green St., because parking will be restricted near the waterfront.

The shuttle will begin transporting people to Lane at 5 p.m. and will make continuous trips to the beach. Buses will provide return trips to the McCulloch Center following the fireworks.

Additional information about the events will be announced on the town's Web page, www.weymouth.ma.us./mayor. If necessary, cancellation of the event due to the weather will be aired on WBZ (1030 AM) and Weymouth Community Access TV Channel 10.

The Independence Day celebration is among a series of seasonal fun being planned by Mayor Susan Kay's staff and the Weymouth Recreation Division.

A "Summer Sizzle" at Wessagusset School will offer youngsters a variety of music, animal displays, interactive sports and inflatable rides to enjoy Saturday, June 27, from 1 to 5 p.m.

The young and youthful at heart can get into the spirit of the season during the annual concert series at the amphitheater in July.

All musical performances get underway at 6:30 p.m. and there is no admission fee.

The New Band will take the stage July 9 followed by Johnny the K on July 16, Toe Jam on July 23 and Wayne from Maine on July 30.

The silver screen will offer PG entertainment at the amphitheater in August.

"Surf's Up" will be showcased Aug. 6 followed by "Kung Fu Panda" Aug. 13 and "Jaws" on the beach Aug. 20. All movie showings start at 8 p.m.

Information about the movies and concerts will be announced at the town's Web site, www.weymouth..ma.us/.

Down on the farm in Hingham

This summer, The Trustees of Reservations invite you to get outside and enjoy some of the places that make Hingham truly special. The barnyard at the Weir River Farm is now open to the public every Saturday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. This is a great time to hike the trails that surround the farm, enjoy a picnic lunch and stop in to visit the livestock. If you are looking to visit the barnyard during the week, consider attending Preschool Story Hour. This program starts June 3, and runs every Wednesday from 10 to 11a.m. and is a great chance to see the livestock and listen to a barnyard story. Admission to both programs is free for Trustees members and $3 per person for non-members.

Looking forward to fresh, local and sustainably grown summer produce? Look for Weir River Farm's delicious display at the Hingham Farmer's Market, every Saturday (rain or shine) from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. The farm always has more room in the garden for volunteers willing to help plant, cultivate, harvest and sell vegetables, herbs and flowers. This is a great way to expand your own gardening experience and meet local folks with similar interests.

If you are trying to think of a great way to spend Father's Day, bring dad to the Summer Solstice Celebration at World's End Reservation. Sunday, June 21, from 6 to 8:30 p.m., the Trustees will be hosting this annual event that is perfect for families. Take a picnic supper and enjoy the sounds of a live bluegrass band as you watch the sunset over the harbor. Admission to the Solstice Celebration is $5 for Trustees members and $10 for non-members. Also, children under the age of 12 are admitted free.

If you want to learn a little more about World's End, you should try one of the Kayak Tours. You can discover tide pools, egrets, horseshoe crabs and more. In addition to learning some basic paddling techniques, the guides will share information covering the history and ecology of this much-loved place. This program starts in June, and reservations can be made by calling the World's End Ranger Station at 781-740-6665. The cost for this program is $30 for member adults and $15 for member children under the age of 15. For non-members the costs are, $40/adults, $20/children under 15.

For more information regarding The Trustees of Reservations in Southeastern Massachusetts, call 781-740-7233.

Hingham parade to have hometown appeal

The 2009 Hingham Fourth of July Parade will celebrate "Our Favorite Places," as many will be staying closer to home this summer.

The parade will step off from Hingham High School off Union Street at 10 a.m. Friday, July 4, and make the annual journey down historic Main Street. One of the famous areas in Hingham is Main Street, which Eleanor Roosevelt referred to as "the most beautiful main street in America."

This year's parade will include floats, military representatives, antique cars, clowns, marching bands, sports teams and local officials. Some are special favorites like the Crow Point Marching Kazoo Band and the Festival Brass Band, while recent additions are becoming crowd pleasers. Local organizations and neighborhoods will also enter floats for annual awards such as "Most Original" and "Most Beautiful."

The parade route will follow the traditional path, heading down Main Street and then right on Station Street. However, parade participants and viewers should check the Fourth of July parade committee's link on the town Web site, www.hinghamjuly4th.org, for updates on parking and detours.

British redcoat Peter Peahulis leans out of formation to see what was going on ahead during last year's Hingham Fourth of July Parade. This year's parade theme will celebrate "Our Favorite Places" as many may be staying closer to home this summer.

Applications for those entering floats are available online but must be sent to Margaret Costello, 28 Fresh River Ave., Hingham, MA 02043 by June 15. Antique car applications should be sent to Jim and Sue Drew, Hingham Toy Storage, 191 Beal St., Hingham, MA 02043.

'Pelham,' 'Public' and 'Potter' among major summer movies

By Robert Alcardi
BAICARDI@CNC.COM

A remake, a gangster epic and the latest installment in a series adapted from the novels of J. K. Rowling are among the movies Hollywood hopes will attract crowds to box offices this summer despite the dismal state of the economy.

"THE TAKING OF PELHAM 1 2 3" (June 12) – Based on the superb 1974 thriller starring the late Walter Matthau, Robert Shaw and Martin Balsam and the very much alive Jerry Stiller and Hector Elizondo, the new "Pelham" features two-time Oscar winner Denzel Washington as a New York City subway dispatcher who matches wits with the leader of four men who hijack a train and threaten to kill the passengers unless they get the ransom they want within an hour.

The obvious question here is why director Tony Scott, whose resume ("The Last Boy Scout," "Beverly Hills Cop 2") doesn't inspire confidence, felt the need to tamper with a film that featured such a terrific combination of humor and suspense, as well as one of Matthau's best performances, building up to an ingenious and unforgettable final close-up. Although he has proven to be capable of playing villainous roles ("Broken Arrow"), John Travolta faces the challenge of competing with memories of Shaw's flawless portrayal of the criminal mastermind who was even more frightening because, unlike your typical cinematic bad guy, he never raised his voice.

"PUBLIC ENEMIES" (July 1) – Directed and co-written by Michael Mann ("Heat," "The Insider"), Johnny Depp, last seen in his tour de force and Oscar-nominated performance in Stephen Sondheim's "Sweeney Todd: The Demon Barber of Fleet Street," plays the infamous Depression-era outlaw John Dillinger, whose crimes made him the chief target of J. Edgar Hoover and its top agent Melvin Purvis (Christian Bale, in his first appearance since "The Dark Knight"), who was nicknamed "the Clark Gable of the FBI."

The question is whether the key 18-to-30-year-old movie-going public has ever heard of Dillinger and his legend (including "the lady in red"), which means they might not be interested in watching his exploits. This must be considered a gamble for Mann, who found out the hard way a few years ago that, despite Will Smith in the part, there wasn't a big audience for a film about Muhammad Ali.

"HARRY POTTER AND THE HALF-BLOOD PRINCE" (July 15) –The "Potter" repertory company, ranging from Daniel Radcliffe, Rupert Grint and Emma Watson on one side of the age scale to Michael Gambon, Maggie Smith and Robbie Coltrane on the other, returns, but as far as I'm concerned, the drawing card, as usual, is the magnificent Alan Rickman, whose superbly enigmatic interpretation of Professor Severus Snape has been a highlight of each chapter in the Hogwarts saga even though he has never gotten sufficient screen time to suit me. I hope that this will change this time around since, I'm told, Snape is "the half-blood prince."

Perhaps no film this summer carries a higher burden of potential disappointment than this one since it was initially supposed to be released last fall before Warner Brothers abruptly changed its mind, meaning that fans of Harry, Ron, and Hermione were told that they must be patient for several more months.

Other high-profile releases will include Will Ferrell in "Land of the Lost" (June 5), based on the cult classic TV series created and produced by Sid and Marty Krofft; the third "Ice Age" animated film, this one subtitled "Dawn of the Dinosaurs" (July 1); and "The Boat That Rocked" (Aug. 28), the first film written and directed by Richard Curtis since "Love Actually" and featuring a cast led by Academy Award winner Philip Seymour Hoffman ("Capote") and the astonishingly versatile Kenneth Branagh, who has received Oscar nominations for acting, writing and directing.

By the way, if you've been asking yourself "Whatever happened to Chevy Chase?," the former "Saturday Night Live" star returns to the big screen Aug. 21 in "Goose on the Loose!" The premise? After a boy befriends a talking goose, he teams up with his pals to save it when he finds out that the principal of his school (Chase) is fattening up the bird for a Christmas cook-off.

Granted, the tale of a talking pig named "Babe" didn't sound promising on paper either, but if this is the vehicle Chase selected for a comeback, I would hate to see the scripts he turns down. If the movie is a hit, the goose will get the credit, and if it's a flop, he'll take the blame.

In 1955, a group of South Shore artists set up easels and displayed artwork among the trees on historic Cohasset Common establishing an annual tradition for thousands of South Shore and metropolitan Boston residents. The South Shore Art Center Arts Festival, held each Father's Day Weekend, showcases the work the Art Center does throughout the year: offering visual arts education for adults and children and compelling, contemporary art exhibitions.

The 54th Arts Festival takes place Friday, June 19, through Sunday, June 21. At the center of the Festival is the main exhibition tent exhibiting the work of hundreds of artists in a Juried Exhibition and a Members' Show. Throughout the Common over 90 juried craft artists offer unique handmade jewelry, ceramics, clothing, fine art and photography, and home and garden products. Art comes to life as ceramicists, wood carvers and painters demonstrate their work and the LemonLime KidsTent offers children the opportunity for hands-on creativity.

Live musical performances on the festival stage feature regional concert bands, bluegrass, jazz and acoustic ensembles and are enjoyed by old and young. A number of high-quality food vendors provide summer fare including trolley dogs, Greek specialty cuisine, fresh lemonade and homemade ice cream. Fresh lobster rolls and homemade strawberry shortcake are also sold at nearby churches.

South Shore Art Center Arts Festival is a wonderful way to discover not only the many talented artists from throughout the region, but also the beautiful seaside village of Cohasset. Visitors to the Arts Festival are encouraged to utilize a free trolley shuttle from satellite parking at the South Shore Music Circus. For hours and additional information visit www.ssac.org.

Park it in Abington this summer

By Seth Jacobson
SJACOBSO@CNC.COM

You don't have to look too far to find something to do in Abington this summer, thanks to the town's park and recreation department.

If the kids feel like getting out on the water without traveling too far, the park and recreation department has the perfect remedy – swimming lessons at the Island Grove Park pool.

"The general objective of our lesson program is to provide an atmosphere where children can learn water skills in a safe and enthusiastic environment," according to the department's Web site.

There will be two three-week sessions of swimming lessons this summer. Children must be 4 years old to participate in the classes.

The department's Eager Beaver camper program will also kick off in June, offering a host of activities for kids, including arts and crafts, swimming activities, organized games, track and field events and more. According to the Web site, you can sign up now for programs. Prices vary depending on how many sessions you sign up for.

"The program will be based at Island Grove, but will utilize many of the various facilities around the town in order to provide a broad scope of experiences," the Web site states.

For more information on programs or costs, call 781-982-2125 or e-mail Park and Recreation Department Superintendent Mark Chirokas at mark@abingtonrec.com.

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
MAY 25, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) An unexpected development could change the Arian's perspective on a potential investment. Keep an open mind. Ignore the double talk and act only on the facts.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A surge of support helps you keep your long-standing commitment to colleagues who rely on you for guidance. Ignore any attempts to get you to ease up on your efforts.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Family continues to be the dominant factor, but career matters also take on new importance. You might even be able to combine elements of the two in some surprising, productive way.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A realistic view of a workplace or personal situation helps you deal with it more constructively once you know where the truth lies. Reserve the weekend for someone special.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) As much as you Leos or Leonas might be intrigued by the "sunny" prospects touted for a potential investment, be careful that you don't allow the glare to blind you to its essential details.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A friend's problem brings out the Virgo's nurturing nature in full force. However, don't go it alone. Allow others to pitch in and help share the responsibilities you've assumed.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A business decision might need to be put off until a colleague's personal matter is resolved. Use this time to work on another business matter that you've been anxious to get to.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Relationships (personal or professional) might appear to be stalled because of details that keep cropping up and that need tending to. Be patient. A path begins to clear soon.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A promotion could cause resentment among envious colleagues. But others recognize how hard you worked to earn it, and will be there to support you if you need them.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Handling a delicate personal matter needs both your wisdom and your warmth. Expect some setbacks, but stay with it. The outcome will more than justify your efforts.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Resist the temptation to cut corners just because time is short. Best to move ahead step by step so you don't overlook anything that might later create time-wasting complications.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Use the good will you recently earned with that well-received project to pitch your ideas for a new project. Expect some tough competition, though, from an unlikely source.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

We welcome all to our inclusive spiritual community. We affirm our Unitarian Universalist Principles and put them into action by worshiping together, caring for one another, and working for a safe, just, and sustainable world.

Sunday, May 31

8 a.m. – Circle Ministry (group led by Joan Kovach & Susan Meikleham)

9:50 a.m. – Childcare for our youngest. Children will gather with their parents in the Meeting House for our Coming of Age service.

10 a.m. – Worship in the Meeting House – Coming of Age Sunday - A Service of credos in word and deed

We celebrate nine Coming of Age youth offering their credos—their beliefs—as the core of our morning worship. Over the past year, they have visited congregations of many faiths, our own included. They have reflected together upon each experience. They have met with their individual mentors. They have participated in community service ventures. They have journeyed to Boston for an overnight retreat and exploration of our Unitarian Universalist roots in this city that is home to so much of our religious history. Given the size of this year's class, the service will extend to 11:15 a.m.

Everyone is invited to a celebratory brunch in the Parish House directly after the service .

All are welcome as we worship and learn and live our faith together! To learn more about First Parish Unitarian Universalist, please come by the Parish House and pick up or sign up for the current monthly newsletter, The Common, or visit our website at www.firstparishcohasset.org.

Appreciation for 'Grey Gardens' grows

Cohasset actress lands big role

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Sarah deLima doesn't mind at all when people don't immediately recognize her under a gray wig and behind cat's eye glasses as Edith "Big Edie" Bouvier Beale in the current Lyric Stage Company production of the musical "Grey Gardens." In fact, deLima – the daughter of English missionaries who was born in India and brought up in England – likes it even better when people also don't recognize her voice.

"Big Edie had an American accent, of course, and one that was very much a mix of Long Island and Connecticut. It is a very difficult voice for me to do, and when I auditioned I was pretty sure they wouldn't hire me. I thought 'Why would they cast me when there are so many talented actresses around with American accents?' recalled deLima last week from her home in Cohasset, where she has lived since 1973. "I haven't done too many roles that called for American accents. I did one in 'Company' at the Company Theatre, and, more recently, I did one in 'Steel Magnolias' for Fiddlehead Theatre Company. In England, I could do an American accent that would blow them away, but doing one here is a very different story."

The off-beat tale of the dysfunctional mother and daughter duo who just happened to be Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis's aunt and cousin – and their slide from the social register to being social outcasts in their tony Hamptons neighborhood – is another very different story which first came to the public's attention in the 1975 documentary "Grey Gardens" by Albert and David Maysles. In 2006, a musical version of the story, with book by Doug Wright, music by Scott Frankel and lyrics by Michael Korie, and again titled "Grey Gardens," opened off-Broadway. With Christine Ebersole and Mary Louise Wilson, as Little and Big Edie respectively, the show became a smash hit. With its lead actresses and most of its original cast intact, the show transferred to Broadway in November 2006 where it won Tony Awards for both Ebersole and Wilson.

The debut on HBO last month of a new non-musical dramatization of the story, starring Drew Barrymore and Jessica Lange, only heightened interest in what has been a much-anticipated Lyric production since it was announced more than a year ago.

"We actually auditioned last July," says deLima of the casting session that insiders say brought out some of Boston's best-known actresses. "That was unusually early and final casting wasn't even announced until last fall. There were many people who wanted to play these roles very badly and were willing to keep these dates open almost a year in advance just in case."

The long stretch between landing and playing the role gave deLima and co-star Leigh Barrett a chance to explore their characters.

"I do believe that Leigh knows more about the Beales and the Bouviers than anyone else in America today," says deLima with a laugh. "I listened to the New York cast album for a little while, but then I put it away, because I didn't want to be too influenced by Mary Louise. I've also avoided the HBO movie so that I can keep the real Big Edie in my head. The character is very specific. She's a total physical package. She was a big, fleshy older woman. Her voice, her hairstyle, and her glasses are very familiar to a lot of people from the documentary. I knew if I made her too different, some people would be disappointed. You can't just do an impersonation, though, so you have to find another way to get at the character, which has been a great experience for me as an actress. I mean, this is a woman who was once a part of New York society and who, years later, spends her days eating ice cream in bed, surrounded by filth and squalor, but still holding the spoon in a lady-like way. In this show, I'm as unlovely and unglamorous as I have ever been in my entire career. It doesn't bother me at all, though, because I'm a character actress and this is such a wonderful role."

The Lyric Stage Company will present "Grey Gardens" at the YWCA Building, 140 Clarendon St., Boston, through June 7. For tickets and information, call 617-585-5678, or go online at lyricstage.com.

Norwegian Spirit gives Boston to Bermuda cruising a boost

By Fran Golden

Boston — Cruising with Norwegian Cruise Line (NCL) from Boston to the pink sands and turquoise seas of lovely Bermuda is a popular vacation choice. You can drive right to the ship (for out-of-towners the cruise is also an excellent add-on to a Boston visit) and fares for one-week sailings, offered May to September, are priced from only $499 if you snag a sale fare. Until this year, the only downside was the Norwegian Majesty, the vessel on the seasonal route since 1994 (first as the Royal Majesty), was getting a bit, ahem, ragged.

Problem solved. NCL this year has given Boston the gift of the Norwegian Spirit, nearly twice as big as its predecessor and so much better.

The Spirit is not a new ship. The 75,338-ton, 2,000-passenger vessel was built 10 years ago — middle-aged by cruise ship standards.

But the ship recently underwent a multimillion dollar renovation and its 13 passenger decks are downright sparkling. You won't find a rock-climbing wall or bowling or some of the other whiz-bang features bigger and newer ships offer. But enjoyment doesn't always have to come in an ultra modern package — and this lively, friendly ship serves up a very enjoyable vacation experience.

The ship was originally built for the Asian market and still boasts a pleasing, Asian-inspired decor including artifacts on display. Staircases have wood and iron railings, the atrium has glass elevators and waterfalls, and there's a real wide wooden promenade that wraps around the entire ship — something you rarely see these days. The overall effect is more elegant than you might expect from the mainstream NCL line. Excellent service by the crew enhances the experience.

IF YOU go...

ARRIVING THERE: The Norwegian Spirit docks at the Royal Naval Dockyard, a historic former base now boasting art galleries and crafts makers, restaurants, shops and museums. From there, you can book a shore excursion to visit beaches, swim with dolphins, go scuba diving, or a variety of other options. But you can also easily explore on your own. Cabs take passengers to popular Horseshoe Bay beach in Somerset for about $25. Ferries and public buses make it easy to get to Bermuda's capital of Hamilton or historic city of St. George. Fares for both are $3 each way, with multi-day passes offering a discount – buy transportation tokens or passes at the ship pier.

ONBOARD ACCOMMODATIONS: Cabins are on the small side, as are the balconies. There are suites available for those who want extra space (suite guests also enjoy concierge service and breakfast and lunch at Cagney's). Cabins are equipped with coffeemakers, a nice touch. But bring your own toiletries unless you like peppermint soap from a dispenser. Those worried about seasickness should be prepared with medication (consult with your doctor), as seas can be rough, though they can also be very calm (we experienced both on the early May cruise).

CRUISING THERE: The Norwegian Spirit departs Fridays from the Black Falcon Cruise Terminal in Boston's Seaport area (close to Logan International Airport). For reservations, visit www.ncl.com.

The ship works well for what NCL calls Freestyle Cruising, meaning passengers can do what they want, when they want.

There are, to be clear, a lot of people onboard — from little kids to 20-somethings to great-grandparents (and most age groups in between), the crowd not only youngish by cruise ship standards but very Boston-oriented (Revere jokes delivered by comedians went over well).

On the first cruise of the season earlier this month, everyone seemed to be outside vying for open deck space on a sunny day. The main pool, where tent-like awnings provide shade for those who want it, had an amusement park-like atmosphere with live bands performing on a stage and poolside games. Squeals of delight could be heard in the equally bustling aft water park area, complete with water slides, sprays and kiddie pool, a magnet for the family crowd.

The ship has outdoor lounging areas on multiple tiers, but if you want a quiet place to read a book, you'll want to splurge on a cabin with a balcony and grab your own private bit of outdoor space — or head to one of the few traditional wooden deck chairs on the promenade.

Bermuda is in the North Atlantic, some 600 nautical miles from Boston, and the route allows plenty of time to explore both the ship and the island, with three nights in Bermuda and three full days at sea.

Personally, I love sea days when you have nowhere you have to be. The Spirit acknowledged this plus in its daily newsletter — printed across the bottom was "OK, we know this looks like a schedule (gasp!), but remember you're free to (do) whatever!"

Passengers took the advice and while some sat in the sun, others worked out in the gym, in the ship's indoor swim-against-the-current pool, on the basketball court or the jogging track — while others gave their pocketbooks a workout at the ship's shops, with frequent sales of jewelry, perfume and logo wear also held in the atrium. Others indulged at the ship's oversized Maharajah's Casino — with 14 tables and dozens, if not hundreds, of slots — or participated in frequent bingo tournaments and art auctions. Some indulged in treatments at the Roman-themed spa (massages from $129) or took NCL U seminars in things like pairing beer with food ($15). To be clear, NCL U is not a particularly intellectual activities program, though a seminar on the History of Magic with a Master Magician drew a big crowd. Young cruisers were well occupied in the Kids Cruise program for age 2 and up. Teens hung out in their own club high on top of the ship (and at the opposite end then the little kids' playrooms).

The Freestyle Cruising philosophy includes an acknowledgement that many people don't like set times for dinner and not everyone wants to get dressed up at night. There are eight restaurants on the Spirit, and cruisers can dine when they want and with whom they want. All are casual except for the pretty Windows (one of two main dining rooms) where every night is dress-up night. Several of the restaurants, including the sushi bar, Cagney's Steakhouse and Le Bistro (serving French Mediterranean cuisine), have an extra service fee of $10 to $25, and reservations are recommended. For me, the $15 for all-you-can-eat sushi is one of the best bargains going. Another popular choice is the Teppanyaki, where the chefs prepare a stir fry meal before your eyes, flipping knives in the air in the process ($25). A special Jazz Brunch was a nice indulgence, eggs benedict served with live Big Band accompaniment ($15).

You can also eat for free, 24 hours a day, and not feel at all deprived in terms of quality or quantity. In the main dining rooms there are even dishes designed with Cooking Light magazine for those watching calories. The Raffles buffet offered impressive variety — at lunch everything from deli to Indian vegetarian, and at breakfast you can choose buffet items like thick French toast or have waffles or eggs made to order.

Raffles is also the place for the extravagant Chocoholics Buffet one night — more sweets than you can imagine (it's like a scene out of "Willy Wonka and the Chocolate Factory".

Freestyle also brings an impressive array of entertainment — with live music happening all over the ship at night — a piano player at the champagne bar, a guitarist/singer at Henry's Pub, a dance band in the Galaxy of the Stars lounge — walking around you could always find an act. Show productions including one featuring Broadway tunes were performed by four singers and eight dancers and fun to watch in the gorgeously renovated Stardust Theater, with plush red velvet seats. Members of the Chicago-based improvisational comedy troupe Second City (the same troupe that brought the world the likes of Tina Fey, John Belushi and Mike Meyers) perform several times and even offer a really fun and complimentary NCL U class in improvising.

Some of the entertainment is clearly adult-oriented like the late-night Le Cabaret Glamour Party, a not-to-be-missed re-creation of a European cabaret complete with drag act and male Chippendale-ish dancers who don't quite do a Full Monty but do bare their chiseled chests. A show by the international crew that included Indian and Filipino dance routines was another crowd pleaser, as were performances by a guest a cappella group, Cat's Pajamas.

Many passengers I encountered onboard had earlier cruised on the Norwegian Majesty. And all declared the Norwegian Spirit, on its first outing from Boston to Bermuda, a real winner.

Pit bull problem escalates

Dog now being held in secure location

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

When heavyweight champion boxer Mike Tyson ended his 1997 rematch with Evander Holyfield by biting his opponent's ear, he went too far.

A pit bull, who shares Tyson's same name, also went too far this past weekend.

Since late February, a pit bull named Tyson has been causing concern throughout the Highland Court neighborhood. Those concerns came to a head this past weekend when the dog bit a young girl. Then, on Monday, when the dog was on its way to be euthanized, the 18-year-old who purchased the dog allegedly assaulted two Animal Control Officers.

It has been a rollercoaster of events for Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy, the neighbors and the family who owns the dog. And it is not over yet.

After receiving a series of letters from neighbor in the Highland Court area, located behind St. Stephen's Church in the village, the town was taking steps to address the neighbors' and Murphy's concerns. A preliminary dog hearing was held last Tuesday with about 20 neighbors and the dog's owner Amyra O'Connell Chase of 17 Highland Court.

Letters sent to the animal control officer enumerate ongoing concerns and recurring incident. The eight-month-old neutered male pit bull roamed the neighborhood without owner supervision. On a particular evening, he

Old Colony Square well under way

Developers looking for service retailers

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

From the dusty remains of an old boatyard and an aging strip mall has risen a mammoth of a building, currently just steel framing, but will eventually be a bustling commuter oriented shopping district and apartment complex.

Next door to the Greenbush commuter rail Cohasset station, the Old Colony Square development — a mixed-use development of restaurants, shops and apartments — is making progress day by day.

The developer, Connell Cohasset Greenbush LLC, an affiliate of New Jersey-based Connell Real Estate & Development Co., received approval from the Planning Board for the town's first — and only — transit oriented overlay district, or TOD. The mixed-use project got the green light in the fall 2007 and broke ground last fall.

Right now, the site has no signed leases for the roughly 32,000 square feet of first floor retail space. There is also a free-standing 3,400 building with drive-through available.

Matt Curtin of The Dartmouth Company, which is heading up the effort to lease the space, said they anticipate having some signed leases by the mid-summer. They are aiming to deliver signed leases for one-half to three-quarters of the space by the late fall.

"We're looking for service retailers," said Curtin giving examples of dry cleaners, quick serve restaurants, day spas and coffee shops. "Things that will serve the community."

Curtin said optimistically some retail could open before Thanksgiving, but it is more likely businesses would open in early 2010.

In addition to the first floor retail space are 16 residential apartments on the second floor. There will be a mix of one- and two-bedroom units; two of which will be considered affordable housing. According to the development's website, the "luxury residential apartments" feature open floor plans with lofts, hardwood floors, gourmet

Class of '09 is 'hard-working'

Commencement is Sat. at 1:30p.m.

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A new beginning, an ending, a milestone.

For the Class of 2009, Saturday will be a day to remember, to celebrate and to look toward a bright future. A total of 97 graduates donning blue and white caps and gowns will receive their diplomas from Cohasset High School underneath the South Shore Music Circus tent.

Commencement exercises will begin at 1:30p.m., Saturday, under the green and yellow big top. Families will vie for seats close to the graduates and the stage in order to get the best view of their son or daughter as they cross that stage into adulthood.

Members of the administration, as well as valedictorian August Oddleifson, salutatorian Jessie Fitts and class president, Anna Roberts, will address the Class of 2009 with a few words of wisdom.

The overwhelming feeling about the Class of 2009 is they are a good group of kids – well-rounded, talented, friendly and smart.

Salutatorian Jessie Fitts describes her class as hard working with many of the students participating and excelling in both athletics and academics.

Class President Anna Roberts said the group has bonded, especially in its senior year.

"Definitely our grade has gotten so close this year. We really came together with school spirit," said Roberts. Spirit week, held during the fall, had widespread participation, she said. Each day during spirit week students are asked to dress to a theme. This year's themes included "safety" (students wore various safety gear like knee and elbow pads), pirate, country club and the eighties.

Members of the Class of 2009 helped bring the school glory by winning state championships and league championships. The class has had many accomplishments on the field, on the stage and in

Cohasset police launch email alert system

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Cohasset Police have launched an Email Alert System, dubbed EMAS, in order to keep the public better informed through "alerts" about housebreaks, other potential crimes and general information.

It is similar to the EMAS system used successfully for several years by Hingham Police.

Police are inviting all residents who have access to email to sign up for EMAS. It is a great way to provide community policing.

You can sign up by visiting the Cohasset Police Department Web site: www.cohassetpolice.com and click on the email newsletter prompt at the bottom of the homepage.

Police say when the town is subjected to criminal activity, the faster they get the word out, the better the chance the public will be of assistance.

They promise not to share your email address with others.

Here is some information about what you may receive:

〈 Alerts: Information about current criminal activity with enough appropriate detail to help develop leads. For example, someone attempts to abduct a child. Police may disseminate information as to general location, any vehicles they may be looking for, or description of the suspects.

〈 Follow-ups: Follow up information, when appropriate, on the disposition of incidents reported earlier. For example, information on any arrests or other new appropriate details.

〈 Messages: Occasional information on meetings, events or classes related to community safety.

Chief James Hussey said the EMAS system is another tool for the police department to improve communication with our residents.

"The ability to provide and solicit information in a timely manner will help solve crime and improve safety in the community," Hussey said.

"The ability to provide and solicit information in a timely manner will help solve crime and improve safety in the community."
— Chief James Hussey

Alcohol arrest

At about 11 p.m. on Saturday (May 30) a Cohasset police officer saw three people walking down the middle of Atlantic Avenue by Whitehead Road, Chief Hussey said.

As he pulled up behind them, the officer saw one of the trio toss what looked like a bottle to the side of the road. As it turned out, the bottle was half-filed with rum. The same man also tossed an electronic scale to the side of the road, police said. The 20-year-old Hull man was arrested for being a minor in possession of alcohol. Further investigation revealed he also had a small amount of marijuana and was issued a civil citation for possession of marijuana.

Chief Hussey said it appeared the three might have been drinking; they did not have a car, police said. None of the men were 21.

MV crashes

• At 8:48 a.m. on Monday (May 25), a 2007 Nissan being operated by at 37-year-old Cohasset woman crossed over the road near 20 King St. and struck a pole. The woman told police she could not remember what happened. She was transported to the hospital her car was towed and the accident remains under investigation, police said.

• At about 1 p.m. on Saturday (May 30), an accident occurred on Route 3A by Tedeschi Plaza involving a 2002 Saab and a 1978 BMW motorcycle, police said. The Saab, which was being operated by a Cohasset man, was pulling out of the plaza when a vehicle traveling in the right-hand lane and headed north may have obstructed his view. The Saab was exiting to head south (toward Scituate) when it crossed over a lane of traffic and hit the motorcycle in the inside lane that was headed north. The motorcyclist was not transported although his bike was towed, police said. The driver of the Saab was cited for failure to grant the right of way.

Dog walker

Chief Hussey said Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy, who will follow up with the concerned resident, and will try to identify the dog-walker who takes his dog to Woodside Cemetery in the mornings where it urinates on the gravestones and defecates in the cemetery. The walk-in reported the man does not pick up after his dog. He provided a description of the man and his gray Volvo.

"We expect people to clean up after their dogs," Chief Hussey said.

Hitchhiking

Police received a complaint about a hitchhiker last week. Chief Hussey explained that there is no law prohibiting hitchhiking in Massachusetts but police discourage the activity. He said police think it is unwise to pick a stranger up and visa versa, it is unwise for someone to get into a strange car.

Plants vandalized

A resident asked police to log in the fact that four of her plants were torn up in her front yard last week. The North Main Street woman did not want to see an officer.

Australia

A young man, who had traveled to Australia, made contact with his mother while she was talking to a police officer last week. The woman was upset that her son did not arrive in Australia as scheduled. The airline told her to contact local authorities. "While the officer was there the call came in from Australia," Chief Hussey said.

Post-prom

Police said a post-prom party being held at the house at the corner of Ripley Road and Sohier Street was supervised by adults and had been planned for some time. Police received a call from a concerned resident that attendees at the post-prom party that had been organized by the post-prom committee were trying to leave to attend the private party. Police said those who left were picked up by a parent. Police had no complaints about the party at the private home about noise or other activity.

Firearm

Police encourage residents who have an unwanted firearm to turn it into police. A resident last week turned in a firearm that he had found in his attic. As it turned out it was a BB gun and was not technically a firearm, police said. Police will send it off to be destroyed, Chief Hussey said.

Smoking pot

Police responded to a complaint from a motorist last week about a car being driven in front of her in which the occupants were smoking marijuana and drinking. She said she could smell the marijuana as they pulled into the Stop & Shop parking lot. She provided a plate number but police could not locate the car that night. They contacted the registered owner, however, to notify the owner about the complaint.

Fireworks

Police warn residents that fireworks are illegal in Massachusetts. There was a complaint Saturday (May 30) about fireworks being lit on the soccer field off Bancroft Road. Police went to the scene, spoke to those on the field and had no further problems. Chief Hussey said the reason fireworks are illegal is that fireworks can pose a safety issue. "We are concerned for people's safety," he said.

Police received a complaint Sunday (May 31) about kids being left in a Ford Expedition in a parking lot with the windows rolled up and no adults around. Police responded and did not find the SUV. However, Chief Hussey asks that people do not leave their children unattended in the car no matter how short their errand might be. He also asks that concerned residents continue to call if they see unattended children left in cars. "The caller did the right thing by reporting this to us," he said.

The development includes a vehicle and pedestrian connection to Cohasset Station. There are other pedestrian-friendly design elements including bike racks, walking paths to the train station and convenient access to Wompatuck State Park via an adjacent bike path across the street. Traffic lights are also slated for the intersection to aid people coming in and out of the train station and shopping complex.

The project will be the town's first and only transit-oriented district project. The development has done its best to comply with the spirit of the TOD bylaw, as defined in the town's zoning bylaws and as encouraged by the state's "smart growth" initiative. The intent of TOD developments is to encourage sustainable living by locating a high-density, mixed-use center near public transportation. The idea is to take cars off the road and create pedestrian friendly living.

"We're looking for service retailers, things that will serve the community."

— Matt Curtin, The Dartmouth Company

The complex is creating a brand-new entrance to Cohasset. The architecture, which received praise during the Planning Board's site plan review hearings, has varying roof heights, different storefront façades, cupolas and a clock tower centerpiece.

the classroom. Principal Antolini will highlight the graduates many individual and collective achievements at the ceremony.

For the vast majority of the 97 graduates this is not the end of their educational journey – 93 percent will go on to higher education; 89 percent will head to four-year schools, 2 percent intend to go to a two-year school and 2 percent are heading to prep schools.

The students are looking forward to being all together one last time before the graduates all go their separate ways.

"I'm looking forward to hearing the speeches, seeing everyone for the last time," said Fitts.

Valedictorian August Oddleifson said graduation is a culmination of a lot of good memories.

"It's one of those times when the whole community comes together…everyone you've ever known is there," said Oddleifson.

"Definitely our grade has gotten so close this year. We really came together with school spirit."

— Anna Roberts, Class President

Along with the graduating seniors, three retiring staff members will "graduate" with the Class of 2009: Director of Student Services Mrs. Linda Gill, Guidance Counselor Mrs. Anne Porter, and Grade 4 Teacher Pamela McNamara.

The Class of 2009 commencement ceremonies will be held at the South Shore Music Circus on Sohier St. on Saturday, June 6 at 1:30p.m.

Pit bull 'owner' jumps into the ring

barked unabated for over two hours. Incidents were detailed describing the pit bull fighting with other dogs on private property and even aggressively barking at a neighbor who had to retreat to her car for safety.

They cited the family's "extensive and well-documented record of irresponsible dog ownership" as a reason for concern combined with the notorious reputation of the pit bull breed. The Chase's other dog, Marcos, a shepherd/husky mix, has been the subject of numerous and regular complaints from people in the village. Marcos is often found roaming free in the village and in the neighborhood.

"This is completely unacceptable to put people at risk for the sake of one dog," stated one of the neighbor's letters. The neighbor requested anonymity. The neighbor's primary concern is over the neighborhood's many young children and their safety while playing in their own front yard.

"Is the law designed so that one of our children has to be seriously injured before action is taken to remove the dog from the property?" stated one of the letters dated May 1.

Town Manager holds hearing

Town Manager Bill Griffin, who serves as the town's dog hearing officer, held a hearing on Tuesday, May 26. About 20 residents attended the lengthy meeting where the neighbors' and animal control officer's concerns were aired. Griffin has the responsibility to recommend to the Board of Selectmen what order, if any, should be issued against the dog in question.

Following the dog hearing, Griffin drafted a letter to be delivered by Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy requiring the Amyra O'Connell Chase, the property owner where the dog resides, to secure a behavioral evaluation of the dog and an evaluation of the suitability of the family's ownership of the dog.

Murphy, who was away at a conference on Friday, was not able to pick up and deliver the letter outlining Griffin's decision. Murphy intended to deliver the order personally on Monday.

However, things changed over the weekend.

Dog bite

On Friday night, the pit bull, along with the Chase's other dog, Marcos, a shepherd-husky mix, attacked a neighbor's dog.

"This whole thing is an unfortunate situation, but it could have been much worse."

— Mother of bite victim

The police responded and wrote a report.

On Saturday evening, the situation escalated further. A friend, who was playing with the Chase's nine-year old daughter, was bitten in the face by the pit bull. The family of the girl called the police while in route to South Shore Hospital. Police responded to the Chase's home where Officer Frank Yannizzi was told the dog was going to be taken to the Holliston area to live with a friend.

The young girl who was bitten is recovering, but her mother said she would have some scars, both physical and emotional because of the attack. The mother of the girl, who requested she not be named, did not know there was a pit bull at the house when she allowed her daughter to play there.

"I don't think pit bulls belong in people's families. I don't support any kind of dog with a vicious temperament. This whole thing is an unfortunate situation, but it could have been much worse," the mother said in a phone interview.

Animal Control Officer Murphy said once a dog bites a human, the situation ratchets up and different rules come into play. Under state statute the dog must be quarantined for a 10-day period.

Murphy arrived at the Chase's home on Sunday morning and was told the pit bull was no longer on the property and had been brought to a friend's home out of town.

After some discussion where Murphy said he described the insurance liability with having an aggressive dog and possible lawsuits now that the dog has bitten a child, O'Connell Chase signed papers authorizing the dog to be put to sleep. Chase dropped the pit bull off at All Four Paws kennel on Route 3A on Sunday night and Murphy intended to bring the dog to be humanely euthanized on Monday evening.

"She signed over the full order, and agreed to have the dog humanely put down," said Murphy.

When Amyra O'Connell Chase was reached Tuesday, she confirmed she agreed to have the dog put down.

"I am so grateful that the bite was not bad. It's a sad situation, but I am very grateful," said O'Connell Chase. She said the decision to have the pit bull, Tyson, humanely euthanized was not one that came easy. "It was a very difficult decision, but it was really the only option."

Assault and remaining questions

Animal Control Officer Murphy scheduled the pit bull to be humanely euthanized on Monday evening. However, Chase's 18-year-old son Logan, who purchased the puppy and considers himself the owner, showed up at All Four Paws as Murphy and Hingham Animal Control Officer Leslie Badger were getting the dog ready to be transported to the veterinary office.

According to the police report, Logan attempted to intervene with the animal control officers who were putting the dog into a van. Logan grabbed the rabies pole, which was being used by Badger to restrain the pit bull, and used it to strike Badger in the stomach several times.

Murphy called 911 and three officers responded.

Police said they found Logan in an agitated state, he swore at the officers and grabbed the pit bull's collar preventing the animal from being moved. Logan insisted he was the dog's owner and said, "you are not killing my dog." The pit bull was also agitated and barking.

"We were trying to keep from getting bitten," Murphy said.

Eventually, Logan let the pit bull go, retreated to his car and the dog was loaded into the van.

Police officers told Logan he was under arrest and he refused to get out of the car. He attempted to take flight and after several warnings, officers had to pepper spray him to get him under control.

Following the incident, Badger was transported to South Shore Hospital with minor injuries.

Logan was arrested for assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, assault and battery on public employees and resisting arrest. He was brought into the station, booked and released on bail. He was arraigned in court on Tuesday morning.

After the incident, Murphy did not proceed with the euthanasia because of the question of ownership. Although O'Connell Chase signed papers agreeing to have the dog put down, it's legally unclear whether she is the owner because the son, Logan, purchased the dog.

"I want to make sure everything was legally correct," Murphy said. Town Counsel advised a full hearing before the Board of Selectmen, who has the authority to decide what to do with the dog, was prudent.

The dog is currently being kept in protective custody in an undisclosed, secure location outside of Cohasset, Murphy said.

The date of the hearing will be determined at the Board of Selectmen Monday, June 8 meeting.

The Selectmen have three choices, Murphy said. The dog can be removed from the town. The dog can be ordered to be under total and full restraint at all times. Or the dog can be humanely put down.

Drawing from his 31 years of experience with animals, Murphy did not see a happy ending to this situation.

"The dog came from Lowell, Lawrence area as a puppy — Lowell is not known for breeding lap dogs," said Murphy, indicating the area has a recurring problem with pit bull and dog fighting.

"This dog has exhibited very aggressive behavior toward other dogs and people," said Murphy. While he said putting the dog down is an "extreme measure" in some cases it is the right thing to do.

"We'd be relieving a real threat from the neighborhood," said Murphy, adding the decision is ultimately up to the Board of Selectmen.

Pit bulls need a 'special owner'

Police Chief James Hussey said pit bulls are a special breed that need a very special owner.

"There are all kinds of different breed out there, but the pit bull has a reputation. Anyone who is considering getting a pit bull should really consider the responsibility that goes along with the breed," said Hussey.

A pit bull needs a proper place to run, like a fenced in yard, "they can't be allowed to roam free," said Hussey. They also require a high level of supervision and training.

"They are not recommended as your typical household pet," Hussey said.

Currently, there is no special bylaw governing the ownership of pit bulls in town. The Board of Selectmen discussed a bylaw on pit bulls previous to the 2006 Annual Town Meeting, but it never made it to the Town Meeting warrant.

Historical Society museums ready for summer

Wilson House and Maritime Museum open June 13

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"If people haven't been in the museum since the renovation, they really should come down."
— Becky Bates-McArthur, museum director

Want to learn about how a family lived in the 19th century? Want to see what the original Minot Light looked like? Or to discover something you may not have known about Cohasset?

On Saturday, June 13, the two Cohasset Historical Society museums will officially open for the summer. The Captain John Wilson House and Maritime Museum, both located on Elm Street across from the hardware store, are two local historical gems.

This year, the Historical Society would like to increase the visibility of the museums. They are encouraging residents, families and visitors to put a trip to both museums on their summer to-do list. A new museum director, Becky Bates-McArthur, and a strong group of volunteers are expected to breathe new life to the museum.

To kick off the season, the Wilson House will host a kid-friendly grand opening event with refreshments and an arts and crafts project. The event to be held Saturday, June 13 from 10a.m. to 2p.m. will be the first of several monthly events designed to bring new and different visitors to the museums.

"It's very important to us to open up the buildings and make them available because so much of the Wilson House restoration work has been done through Community Preservation funding," said Kathy O'Malley, president of the Historical Society.

In July the Wilson House will celebrate the "good old summer time" with toys and children's clothing from the 1800s. On July 11, kids can come see the Wilson House and paint their own wooden boats.

In August, the Wilson House will put together a special exhibit on the history of Cohasset's schools.

The Wilson House was completely re-designed and re-interpreted by a Harvard University graduate student two years ago after a four-year-long restoration project. The complete restoration corrected the drainage issues that had plagues the residence for over a hundred years. The floorboards were taken up, numbered, restored and placed right back where they belonged.

"If people haven't been in the museum since the renovation, they really should come down," said Bates-McArthur. A DVD plays on a look chronicling the restoration of the Wilson House. "It's a great place to learn about the history of the town…I don't think people know what we actually have in the museum."

Volunteer Jan Todd said they are working to raise the awareness of the museums throughout town and beyond.

"We want people to know the museums are a part of Cohasset," said Todd. When people think about Cohasset she'd like them to think of the harbor, the common and the historical society.

Both the Wilson House and Maritime Museum are listed on the National Historic Register.

The prime piece of real estate at the juncture of South Main Street and Elm Street has displays to represent a storied history of the Wilson family, Cohasset and the typical 19th-century family.

In Captain Wilson's day, the one room first floor served as a ship's chandlery. Now, the first floor is devoted to the life and objects of the Wilson family and how this one family fit in to the larger fabric of 19th-century Cohasset.

Captain Wilson's maritime tools represent a booming fishing trade; Cohasset was one of the largest in Massachusetts during its heyday. A display case houses a British Marine's cutlass that was mistakenly left on Captain Wilson's ship when the British boarded it during the War of 1812. A letter from an Army Corps of Engineers captain, William Swift, concerns the precarious structure of the original Minot Light. A small section is dedicated to the second and third generations of the Wilson family who also lived at 4 Elm Street. Then, a small table shows the many faces of the Wilson house — a teahouse, a photographer's studio, a tailors shop, a candy store and an ice cream parlor.

On the second floor, the house has been interpreted as a typical early 19th-century home. What was once a "catch all" for historic household objects, says Abrams, has been re-designed to incorporate pre-1860 pieces. A children's room, a kitchen, a sitting room and a tiny "master suite" all feature period objects gleaned from the Historical Society's vast collections. Although none of the second floor objects are linked to Captain Wilson and his family, all illustrate a life the life they (and other Cohasset families) lived.

"Knowing the history of the town and seeing the older things offers a different perspective," said Todd.

Both the Wilson House and the Maritime Museum will be open after June 13 on Wednesdays, Thursdays, Fridays from 1 to 4:30p.m. and Saturdays from 10a.m. to 2p.m.

Admission is free, but donations are always welcome. For more information, visit www.cohassethistoricalsociety.org or call 781-383-1434.

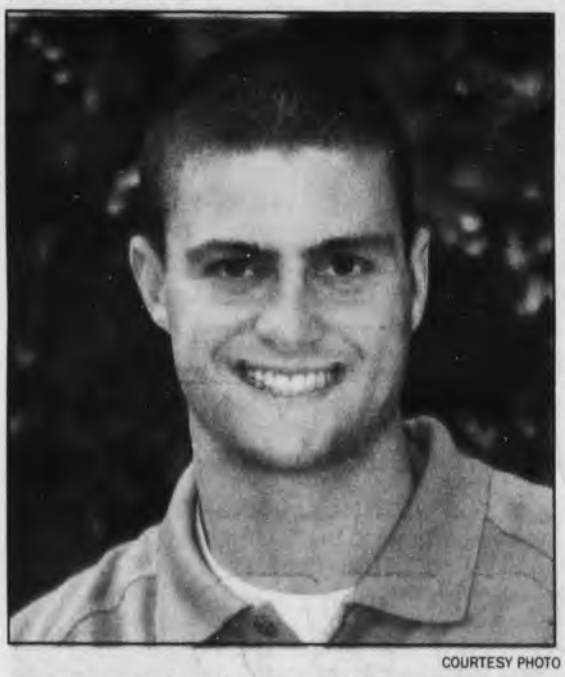
AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

JUNE!



Hello Cohasset. I cannot believe I get to say finally, "June has officially arrived!" The weather is nice for the most part, children and adults alike are graduating from all types of programs and schools, I love when the summer is here. Congratulations to all of you who are graduating from Preschool, High School and College. Everyone is proud of all who have made these many accomplishments in their lives.

MEMORIAL SERVICE

A wonderful woman, the former Director of the Cohasset Senior Center, Linda Elworthy, has passed away. A Memorial service will be held on Saturday, June 13 at 11 am at St. Anthony's Church. All are welcome to remember and honor this amazing lady who gave so much to so many people each and every day. A reception will follow at the Parish Center at St. Anthony's.

NOBLES

Cohasset resident Robert Troy recently graduated from Noble and Greenough School in Dedham, a co-educational day and partial boarding school serving grades 7-12. Congratulations Robert and good luck with your future as you move forward in your life.

DEAN'S LIST

Congratulations to Meredyth Evans, daughter of Christopher and Melinda Evans, who was recognized at Bucknell University for achieving dean's list for the 2008-2009 Spring Semester.

A student must earn a grade point average of 3.5 or higher on a scale of 4.0 to receive dean's list recognition.

PHI BETA KAPPA

Here is another great piece of news about a recent graduate. Molly Ogrodnik, a graduate of Cohasset Junior-Senior High School, received a Bachelor of Arts degree from The College of Wooster during Commencement exercises on May 11th. While at the College of Wooster, Molly was a member of the Dance Company and the Irish Blackbirds dance team. In addition, she was named to the dean's list all four years, and was a member of the Phi Alpha Theta history honor society. Molly was also inducted into Phi Beta Kappa, the nation's oldest academic honor society; received the Henry J. Copeland Fund for Independent Study, Wooster's nationally acclaimed undergraduate research program; and won The Cummings-Brumbaugh History Prize. Molly is a history major who graduated magna cum laude.

ART ALL STATE

Emily Bertovich of Cohasset participated in the 22nd annual Art All State at Worcester Art Museum on May 29 and 30. For two days, 145 artistic high school juniors from around the state scoured the museum's galleries for inspiration and worked in groups led by professional artists to create a work of art. Parents, friends, family and their art teachers viewed their creations during a reception at the museum on Saturday in the studios of the Higgins Education Wing.

AUTHORS!

Buttonwood has been hosting the "Coffee with the Authors" for 16 years. The "Coffee" offers an opportunity to hear contemporary authors discuss their latest work. The panel this year is exceptionally fine. Lisa Genova for "Still Alice, Scituate author Lynne Griffin discusses "Life Without Summer and Cape Cod author Anne LeClaire describes being silent in "Listening Below the Noise." The event is at the Atlantica Restaurant on Tue. Jun. 9, from 9:45 –11:30 a.m.. Reservations and tickets ($16 per person) are necessary. Call Buttonwood at 1-781-383-2665 to reserve.

ROWING

Learn the art of rowing, America's fastest growing collegiate sport and a lifetime of fun. CMI is sponsoring a three-week program in July, taught by our college rowers to introduce students to rowing for fun and, if desired, competition. The Program will run July 7 - 2,. Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday mornings from 9 - 10:30 a.m. and 10:30a.m.- 12 noon. Applications are available on the website www.rowcmi.com. RELAY IS 25

This year marks the 25th Anniversary of the Relay For Life Fundraiser held at the Alumni Field at the Cohasset High School on Pond Street. This event begins on Friday, June 12 at 3 pm and runs throughout the night, ending at 10 am on Saturday, June 13th. If you would like to come and purchase Luminaria Bags to honor or remember a loved one for the Relay For Life, you may come to the Our World Museum and purchase the bags you would like or need and then, if you would like, you may decorate them here at the Museum or bring them home to decorate. The Schedule to date is as follows. Starting on Friday, June 12 at 3 pm, the Relay begins and team registration begins. The Children's Tent, with a "Celebrate the 25th Birthday of the Relay" is from 3-6:30 p.m. with fun party hats to decorate and birthday games to play. At 5 p.m., the Survivor Registration is open and the Children's Lap will begin at 5:30 for children and families of all ages. The Opening Ceremony begins at 6 pm with a music selection to be performed by the Hingham High School Chorus and will be conducted by Joe Young. This will be followed with a song by Lisa Battista and Steven Gilbert and a solo by Kelsey Gilbert. The Opening Remarks will be shared by Harry St. Onge and a Survivor's story will be shared by Craig Coffey.

At 6:30, the Survivors and Caregivers lap will happen with a song to honor all of the people who have survived and the many who care for those who are dealing with cancer sung by Cohasset's own, Lily Sestito. At 6:45 pm, the entertainment will be led by the Rusty Skippers Band with the Taste of The Relay being held from 6:45-8 pm. The Bagpipes and a Luminaria ceremony will happen at 9 pm and all will be followed with the popular gaming system being played for a "WII Relay." This truly is a special two-day event that is held each year to raise money to help find cures for this dreaded disease and to remember and honor all those who have dealt with this sickness in their lives. It is a family event that we encourage as many of you who can attend to be there.

That is the news for now Cohasset. Please send in any news, event information etc. to me no later than Tuesdays by 5:00 pm.

All facility stickers to expire June 30

The expiration date of the beach and Recycling Transfer Facility permits is June 30. A copy of a current registration is required. If leasing a vehicle, people will need proof of residence in addition to the registration. Stickers will be on sale starting Monday, June 15, during normal business hours at Town Hall. Stickers will also be available at the DPW garage on weekends from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., starting June 20, and during the week starting June 15, from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. Sticker prices will remain the same as last year - $50 for residents under the age of 60 and for $15 for seniors.

This sticker will allow access to the Recycling Transfer Facility, Sandy Beach, as well as, parking at all areas in town that require a sticker. In addition, residents will be required to purchase special bags in which to dispose of all trash that cannot be recycled. These bags will be offered at the Department of Public Works building and various locations throughout the town. All commercial contractors and vehicles registered in a business name should pick up their stickers at the Department of Public Works. People are encouraged to purchase stickers through the mail by providing the appropriate fee, a copy of a current registration and a self-addressed return envelope.

Seat open on Rec. Commission

Recreation Commission member Lisa Lojacono resigned from her post leaving a vacancy on the seven-member commission. The remaining members of the Recreation Commission and the Board of Selectmen will have to appoint a member to fill the seat until next April's town election. At the 2010 town election, the one-year seat will be available for candidates.

Interested citizens can send a letter of interest to the Town Manager's Office at 41 Highland Ave, Cohasset.

- UP FOR AUCTION -

Painting is a part of history

Cohasset watercolor could fetch $25K

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

It's no secret Cohasset is rich with history. But, could you get rich with history?

For those with the right kind of artifacts, it's possible.

This weekend, a circa 1832 watercolor depicting a Cohasset family mourning the loss of their mother could fetch a pretty penny for its owner.

Skinner, the Boston-based auction house, is set to auction off the 19th-century Lothrop family "mourning picture" as part of its "American Furniture and Decorative Arts" auction Sunday (June 7).

The prevalence of mourning pictures has long since past, but they were common in the 1800s and are typically wrought with symbolism. The particular piece commemorates the 1832 death of Mary (Snow) Lothrop, the wife of Caleb Lothrop, and mother of seven children.

The appraisers at Skinner estimate the value of this particular mourning picture to be between $15,000 and $25,000.

The Lothrop mourning watercolor will go up for sale alongside hundreds of other pieces of Americana, but LaGina Austin, an Americana specialist for Skinner, said she expects this painting to be a highlight.

"This is a really good example of what it is," said Austin. "It has everything you would want in a watercolor and American folk art."

The piece is so striking that the creators of this weekend's auction catalog used a close up of the painting for the front cover.

According to Austin, the mourning picture art form was common in the 19th century and was often completed by girls at private schools. This particular watercolor is unsigned and the artist is unknown. The provenance is from Everett Warren Gammons, a descendent of Mary Lothrop and stepfather to the current owner.

"The more involved the painting is, the more valuable is it going to be. We've had similar paintings go for $20,000 with not so much going on," Austin said.

The forefront of the watercolor depicts a scene with seven mourners beside an urn-topped monument inscribed with a epitaph: "In memory of Mrs. Mary, wife of Mr. Caleb Lothrop, and daughter of Capt'n Ephraim Snow, who died Aug't 28th 1832. Aged 31." And the verse, "Wife, Mother, Daughter, Sister; names how sweet; How precious each; how lovely when they meet; Farewell bright Orb, life's cloudless day/Has clos'd with Hope's mild arch at even/Go rise and shine with purer ray/Amidst the kindred orbs of heav'n."

— LaGina Austin, an Americana specialist for Skinner

The beauty of the painting is in the symbols and details. There is the Lothrop House, which still stands on Summer Street, where the Mary and Caleb raised their family. To the left of the tomb is a weeping willow, a common symbol found in mourning pictures. The tree mirrors the bowed shape of a mourner and often represents rebirth. A cherub hovers over the scene holding a banner inscribed, "Blessed are the dead." A tall ship under full sail is flying an American flag is on the harbor.

"This painting really is beautiful," said Austin.

Overall the watercolor is in very good condition, Austin said. Nearly miraculously, there is little fading of the colors that typically goes along with moisture or sunlight exposure.

"The colors are great," Austin said. They believe the frame is original.

The only flaw is a small tear, about one and a half inches long with a small piece of paper applied to the tear on the reverse. The paper is not laid down on a board backing, which Austin said was a good thing.

This isn't the first time this year Cohasset artifacts were on the table to fetch a pretty penny on the auction block. In January, several sets of silver beakers and an antique chair from the First Parish Church went up for auction at Sotheby's in New York.

The two pairs of Deacon John Jacobs beakers by silversmith Jacob Hurd that date back to 1728 were sold for $85,000 each. The Susanna Lewis beakers, dated 1824, were sold for $8,750 to a Cohasset resident. The Important William and Mary carved and figured maple chair that parishioners had been sitting on for years sold for $56,250.

Given the strong Cohasset connection, Austin hopes a buyer comes forward from the town, "that's where this piece belongs."

But, interested buyers better come with a hefty checkbook.

"We expect a lot of interest in this piece," said Austin.

Interested buyers can submit bids in person, by phone, or online. There are several opportunities to view the mourning watercolor and the other lots up for auction including a reception and gallery walk tonight (Friday) from 5:30 to 7:30p.m., tomorrow, Sat. June 6, noon to 5p.m., or Sunday, June 7 from 8 to10a.m.

Similar examples at the Historical Society

The Cohasset Historical Society possesses four examples of primitive watercolor paintings done in a similar style and in similar colors.

Two are mourning pictures, one unsigned and one done by Susan Stoddard. Both have a tomb, a willow tree and a tall ship in the water off in the distance. The unsigned watercolor depicts a large tomb and a willow tree and commemorates two Lothrops – Thomas and John Jacob.

The other two paintings depict a more light-hearted scene with children playing, sheep lounging and men fishing.

The life of Mary Snow

Mary (Snow) Lothrop was born on May 7, 1801 in Truro, Mass. She was the daughter of Captain Ephraim Snow. The name of Captain Snow's wife is unknown. On November 28, 1819, Mary married Caleb Lothrop, son of Peter and Betsy Tower Lothrop of Cohasset. The couple resided in Cohasset, where Caleb was ship-builder and businessman and together they had seven children. The house portrayed in the picture was their Summer Street home in Cohasset, which is still standing and was once the home of the Cohasset Historical Society.

No new information comes in

"You're asking us to make a decision on something that we haven't seen."
— Zoning Board member Kathleen Hunter

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

In a highly unorthodox move, the applicant for the 25 Ripley Road 40-B requested an approval of the project with an order of conditions – without providing a corresponding site plan.

The Zoning Board of Appeals gave a polite but firm "no way," but opted to give the applicant another month to produce the plans and additional information they requested.

At the previous hearing on the project, held in early May, the Zoning Board gave the applicant specific items they wanted to see by the next hearing – a updated comprehensive site plan, a parking plan, a landscape plan, a lighting plan, a septic determination from the Board of Health, to name a few.

The filing, put forth by Cohasset resident, property owner and developer, Will Charles, proposes transforming the current single-family residence at the corner of Sohier Street and Ripley Road into seven condominium units, two of which would be deemed affordable by state standards.

"Everyone knew this application was financially strapped," said Robert Barrett, the attorney representing Will Charles. Charles was not in attendance at the meeting. Barrett said his client wants to do a project the board would approve and would be willing to provide plans with all the conditions required of the board.

"Once it is approved with conditions, he can get access to funds," said Barrett.

The Zoning Board didn't buy it.

"You're asking us to make a decision on something that we haven't seen," said Zoning Board member Kathleen Hunter. She said items like screening and lighting were concerns of the neighbors and the board and she would need to see a plan to ensure it is adequate.

Barrett argued there would not be many "real changes" to the exterior of the building, "he's using the existing building and what he has to do inside is governed by the building code."

Zoning Board chairman Woody Chittick said that wasn't entirely the case. The project as it has been presented would require several waivers from the board from the number of parking spaces to a proposed farmer's porch.

"A 40-B is a very serious applications, and this application required a number of waivers. (To approve the application) without consistent plans would be irresponsible of this board," Chittick said.

Barrett asked the board to enumerate the conditions they would like to see and that the application would comply.

"Our job is not to do your job for you," said Chittick.

Zoning Board member Peter Goedecke chimed in, "we are not your engineers."

Barrett said it was a "chicken before the egg" issue. Because of finances, the applicant could not spend more money on plans the board would not approve.

Chittick then made himself perfectly clear, "without the submission of a set of coherent, clear and comprehensive plans, we're not going to approve (the application)."

Chittick then asked the board to consider giving the applicant another month to comply with the board's requests for information.

Objections were made by Hunter and Goedecke. Goedecke felt the applicant has wasted enough of the board's time and had not answered a number of questions posed by the board. Hunter said she did not see giving another month because the applicant wasn't asking for another month.

Zoning Board member Susan Kent said she was okay with giving the applicant another month, but wanted to be sure the board received the information it requested.

"Your client needs to hold up his end – that's only fair," said Kent.

The Zoning Board voted 4-2 in favor of continuing the hearing until Tuesday, July 7 at 7:30p.m.

Waiting to hear from DHCD

About a month ago, the Zoning Board of Appeals wrote to the Department of Housing and Community Development (DHCD) to see if the town of Cohasset could be relieved from approving additional Chapter 40-B housing until the already approved Avalon apartment complex came on.

"There is a provision under Chapter 40-B if the town is undergoing a significant expansion of 40-B housing, the town can take a year off of approving new projects," said ZBA Chairman Woody Chittick in a phone interview Thursday morning.

DHCD has not ruled, but the Zoning Board expects to hear back within the next couple of weeks. If given the okay by DHCD, the zoning board could deny the 25 Ripley Road application on those merits.

The Cook Estate house may not be moved after all.

Cook Estate move probably won't happen

It seems the idea of moving the 5,200 square foot once residence of Jane Bancroft Cook to town-owned property has fallen flat.

Clark Brewer, who first brought the idea to the Board of Selectmen in late May, said this week it doesn't look like there is support or time to bring the project to fruition.

After meeting with the Selectmen, he shopped the idea to both Elder Affairs and the Housing Trust. Issues with the targeted locations and feasibility of funding and time made both groups to not give their support to the idea. Potential uses included a new senior center and affordable housing.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Sign of the times

While Cohasset's TOD (Transit Oriented District) is literally rising before our eyes off Route 3A by the Cohasset Greenbush Station – we are hoping for the best.

By "the best" we mean the return of a vibrant economy during which retailers clamor for space; folks have to wait for seats in restaurants, and the empty storefronts and commercial space along the Route 3A corridor and in the village are relegated to history.

Wishful thinking? Probably. But we can still have hope.

But property owners and developers know all too well that hope is not enough. They need real businesses and real businessmen and women to be economically viable enough to want to move in and sign leases.

Cohasset Hardware, with its torn awnings and a boarded-up window, remains the centerpiece of the downtown area and is still sadly empty.

There is plenty of retail/office space along Ripley Road and Depot Court waiting for tenants.

Route 3A has the empty former car dealership near the Scituate line with another smaller, dealership across the street that looks vacant. There is a lot of other commercial/business space available along the highway.

One can see what was once Cedarmere off Route 3A through the rubble not far from the 3A/Beechwood Street intersection. Remember the proposed Cedarmere? It was an architectural wonder of about 100, near million-dollar condominiums in a pristine setting so well suited for well-off seniors! Seems almost bizarre to think of "those days" just a few years ago when such a complex would have been viable.

We also wonder right next door in Scituate what will fill the 10,000 square feet of commercial space in the still-being-restored Welch Company building in the harbor.

What we hope is not the case is that we are locked into a downturn that could take years to correct itself. That would mean that "empty" feeling could continue for sometime.

What we have to guard against is getting used to areas that do not look that great because of tough times. After a while, it is easy not to notice eyesores because they have been there a while. We never want eyesores to turn into pockets of "urban blight."

We hope those with vision and determination in Cohasset can help the town maintain its "looks" – even if places have to remain unoccupied.

Times are cyclical and bad times will become good times once again. But we need local leadership from public officials and private citizens to think of creative ways to ensure we do not slip into a visual malaise that ultimately hurts the character of our town.

They apparently all use the same landscaper around here

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Appreciation for a 'magical event'

TO THE EDITOR:

Cohasset is an amazing town. It is a special place where people routinely come together to share their talents, inspiration and hard work to make magical things happen. Such was the case last Friday when the Pre-Prom Committee and its volunteers and supporters presented the annual red carpet event for our Class of 2009 Senior Prom goers and their dates. It was a beautiful event that was enjoyed by all.

On behalf of the committee, I would like to thank the many people who gave their time and talent to contribute to the event's success. Very importantly, Pre-Prom Committee members Patti Smith, Margie Masotta, Catherine O'Callaghan and Dianne Landon who worked over the last several months to pull the event together. Thank you to Barb Mullen who chaired an outstanding Post-Prom Committee to which we were fortunate to be a part of and who gave support and assistance in so many ways. To Gary and Judy Ritts who offered and operated the sound system, Jenn Oram and the Board of Selectmen's office who worked in providing the facility, Annjean and Marcia, two very talented members of the Cohasset Garden Club, for assisting with the outside decorations provided so generously from The Village Greenery. Thank you also to Stop & Shop for the donation of bottled water for our attendees and volunteers, Roving Report Rich Ofsthun for emceeing the event, Dan Leahy for professionally photographing couples and Nobles for providing them with gorgeous 5 by 7 photo copies. Special thanks to Leila Hill, Judy Collins, Melissa Boimeister, Jean and Lily Astino for assisting with the event production, to Derry, Jim and Alex Schwantner for assisting in the video production of the pre prom video, to Dan Martin, Cal O'Callaghan, Ross Smith, Rich and Ben Masotta, Mark Flibotte, Patrick Horigan, Colin Smith, Chris Mills, Robert Sylvia and Patrick Doonan for their hard work transporting and moving about heavy plants, and lastly, to Lisa Pratt and Mark Bonono for single-handedly keeping the rain away!

To all, thanks again, it truly was a magical event that our senior class members, and their loved ones, will remember for a lifetime.

Pat Martin, Chair
2009 Pre-Prom Committee

Post-Prom gets rave reviews

TO THE EDITOR:

The reviews are in – the 2009 Cohasset Post Prom Party was a huge success! One hundred thirty guests enjoyed an evening of music, dancing, prizes and fun, This Cohasset tradition, now in its 13th year, was the collaboration of so many parents. First, thanks to the many high school parents who made donations to this worthwhile cause. Our amazing chaperones, Johanna Quinlan, Rita Barry, Lisa Cooper, Cheryl Whetstone, Kathleen Sullivan, Beth Marsden, D'Anne Avotins, Jim Fitzgerald, Suzanne Waters, Cindy Schubert, Paul Queenan, Steve MacCormack, Sue Mavilia, Sean and Laura Curry, kept things running smoothly all night long. Suzanne Gunderson, Janet and Mark Rattenbury, Laure and Brian Kimla, Kim Canney, Andrea Kinnealley, Wendy Erler, Jeff Pratt, Jean Roche, and Christine Martini provided support behind the scenes. Special thanks to our consultants Lucia Flibotte, Adrienne MacCarthy and Ann Kelly.

Then there were the senior parents – too many to list! Putting together an event like this takes incredible teamwork, and so many parents contributed their time and talent. Special thanks to Sherry Sturino, Charissa Roberts, Rich Ofsthun, Kathy Ofsthun, Nancy Froio, Heidi Salerno, Pat Martin, Claire Cahill, Maura Dunn, Sheila Toomey, George and Barbara Baumgarten, Eileen McBride, Ronnie Goodwin, Dan Leahy, and Chris Haracz, who kept us all in the loop! What a great way to come together to support our seniors and their guests.

Having known the students and parents of the Class of 2009 since the first day of kindergarten, it's no surprise at all that this event went off without a hitch. It was an honor working with you all!

Extra, Extra Credit!

TO THE EDITOR:

There are exciting changes ahead for the Cohasset Education Foundation's Teacher Appreciation Program, Extra Credit. Funds raised through Extra Credit are now earmarked for both professional development and classroom/program grants. And, all those lucky Extra Credit recipients will be entered into a raffle to win super prizes, including a Del's Lemonade party for their entire class! We can't wait to roll out these improvements to our wonderful teachers and administrators and to the Cohasset community.

Extra Credit applications must be received by June 10 to be entered into the raffle.

Heartfelt thanks for caring response

TO THE EDITOR

Most residents are aware of our recent, devastating, fire that resulted in six families losing their homes. As the Community Outreach Coordinator for the Hull Board of Health, I am working with the support of many kind people in the community, to assist these families in prioritizing their next steps for a fresh start. I am pleased to share the news that all six families now have new housing.

I was so grateful, but not surprised, to hear from our State Representative Garrett Bradley, who offered to do anything he could to help. This is not the first time he has offered his help and support. In this case, he quickly provided very generous gift certificates for each of the families, which allowed them to purchase necessities.

His compassion is what sets Representative Bradley apart from so many others in similar positions. He and his staff are accessible in a way that government often unwittingly circumvents. He is a genuine friend of the people and an invaluable resource for the Town of Hull's Community Outreach and Family Support Services.

The concern and thoughtfulness with which he acted was heartfelt and I want to take this opportunity to publicly acknowledge that and thank him for his caring response.

Guardrail relocated, mysterious signs popup

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Greenbush – The Greenbush Project continues with the final polishing of the items on our Greenbush punch list. We have mentioned in the past, that the Town had received a grant to construct a sidewalk from the Forest Avenue/North Main Street intersection to the Greenbush Rail Station. Over a year ago we completed the sidewalk as far a Route 3A and had to stop our work. When the MBTA undertook their project to add extra lanes to the Route 3A/Lower King Street intersection, they very kindly relocated their new guardrail on top of the place where the side walk was to be built.

This past week, the MBTA finally had CBB, their contractor; relocate the guardrail to its proper location. Now, this new guardrail location will leave enough space for the Town to construct its sidewalk behind the guardrail. This will safely separate the pedestrians from Route 3A traffic and allow us to avoid serious wetland encroachment that would have significantly raised the sidewalk cost. The ironic thing about this whole exercise is that the new guardrail location is about the same location that existed before CBB did any work in the area.

COURTESY PHOTOS

Route 3A guardrail gets repositioned.

New undercover North Main Street sign.

The ironic thing about this whole exercise is that the new guardrail location is about the same location that existed before CBB did any work in the area.

Mysterious Signs – As we travel around the Town we have received several inquiries regarding the new signs that are sprouting up around Town. Since the signs are all covered no one knows what they are for. So we went on a quest to find the story.

You may have seen several articles over the past year in this paper about the fact that there is a project underway to rebuild the bridge that carries Route 228 over the channel that connects Straits Pond to the Weir River. This is a complicated project location since the area that will be under construction is in three towns, Hingham, Cohasset and Hull. The Town of Hull is acting as the lead town for the project. In order to do the project, Route 228 will be closed, just North of West's Corner. (West's Corner is the intersection of Route 228 and Jerusalem Road and is named for Mr. West who had a store there for a number of years.)

When Route 228 closes for construction, the traffic will need to be detoured around the construction area. One of the marked detour routes will be from Route 228, just north of the Route 3A intersection, down East Street in Hingham (which becomes North Main Street in Cohasset) to Forest Avenue. Then the detour proceeds down Forest Avenue and across Jerusalem Road into to Hull.

So, the question you are probably asking is when will this detour start? We are told that the project won't start until after Labor Day, so we will be spared most of the very heavy beach summer traffic. That's a very good thing! It's interesting that the Massachusetts Highway Department (MHD) insists that the detour signs go up months before the project actually starts. That's why the signs are sprouting up around Town now. We are also told that MHD limits detours, such as this, to 45 days maximum. That's also good news.

Other Miscellany – The streets of Bailey Road, Ridgetop Road, Pond Street, Arrowwood Road, Locust Road, and Stanton Road that were ground last week will be paved this current week. So again, by the time you read this, these residents should be traveling on their new smooth roads. Of course we must add our standard paving caveat, "weather permitting."

'Short life reads like a fairytale'

FAMOUS BIRTHDAYS

MARY KENNEDY

Alexander Pushkin: Born June 6, 1799

Russians have always revered Pushkin. Even today, most Russians can recite some of his lines by memory.

At boarding school his teachers dismissed him as an "intelligent, but frivolous scamp." His friends teased him as "half monkey, half tiger." At age 14 his first poem was published in a St. Petersburg newspaper. A few days later in July 1814, his class attended a reception for Tsar Alexander upon his victorious return to Russia after Napoleon's disastrous retreat. To "commemorate" the event, Pushkin drew a cartoon of a very fat Tsar approaching the city's Triumphal Arch while his frantic generals rushed ahead to widen the arch with their swords. Both pieces – the poem and the cartoon – would perfectly characterize Alexander Pushkin for the rest of his life: genius and irreverence for authority.

The details of his short life read like a fairytale: his family of impoverished nobility; his great-grandfather an Abyssinian prince who became a favorite of Peter the Great (Alexander was always proud of his African ancestry). His father was irresponsible, his mother authoritarian. Alexander, however, was blessed by having a nurse who dearly loved him. A simple countrywoman, illiterate but knowledgeable, she was a wealth of old proverbs and folktales. From her he gained a profound love and appreciation of Russian life and customs. Later, in poetry and stories, he could describe brilliantly the glittering whirl of St. Petersburg society and yet evoke, just as vividly, the smell and feel of the countryside, the plunging horses, the snowy fields. He once said of her "Sometimes she is cleverer than I am because her impressions are more direct, and she is closer to the truth."

At age 21, his brilliant narrative poem "Ruslan and Ludmila" made him famous throughout Russia. Always a free spirit, he believed that individual freedom must be preserved if life was to have dignity. Tsar Alexander, however, thought otherwise, and, after reading several of his revolutionary verses, promptly exiled Pushkin for a time to the Black Sea coast.

Back once more in the fashionable world of Russian society during the 1820s he found much in the way of entertainment: drinking, gambling, fist fighting and romancing. One friend wrote, "Pushkin fights duels every day; thank heavens they are not fatal and the adversaries come back unscathed." It would not always be so.

Banished in disgrace once again (something about a love affair with the wife of a count), Pushkin spent four years on his family's estate in the countryside. For companionship, his old nurse; for entertainment, reading (he admired Shakespeare greatly); and writing. His first great creation was "Boris Godunov," a long play in verse about the political intrigues and social turmoil of the early 1600s, featuring a feeble-minded Tsar and a pretender to the throne. And then "Eugene Onegin," a novel in verse, now considered one of the world's greatest poems. (The movie "Onegin," starring Ralph Fiennes, was filmed in Russia in 1999). Back in St. Petersburg Pushkin was hailed as "the Byron of Russia," the greatest poet of the land.

When he was almost 30, Pushkin fell in love again (for the 113th time by his own accounting). He married Natalia Goncharova, a 16-year-old beauty who loved dancing and "preferred the glitter of the ballroom to all the poetry in the world." Still a gambler, but no longer a romancer, Pushkin fumed while his wife flirted. The inevitable occurred. The dashing French officer, the beautiful wife, the jealous husband, the gossip, the duel. Two days later, at age 37, Alexander Pushkin was dead.

Russians have always revered Pushkin. Even today, most Russians can recite some of his lines by memory. As a literary hero he has been admired by Tsars, Communists and the leaders of post-soviet Russia. Perhaps that is because he never stated a clear-cut political or spiritual belief. He once wrote "I, of course, regard my country with the utmost contempt, from top to bottom, but I don't like it when a foreigner shares this feeling with me."

Pushkin's genius was his use of the colloquial style of Russian, speaking directly to his readers in a fusion of thought and verbal poetry. Unfortunately, in translation, many of his most subtle and original ideas become platitudes. One writer suggests: "Imagine a Pushkin opera with an English libretto written jointly by Jane Austen and Coleridge, with music from both Mozart and Stravinsky, and with settings by Vermeer, and then you will have some notion of this poet's unique flavor." To read Pushkin is a reason to learn Russian.

Don't give up on Latin!

COMMENTARY

MARY JANE HANRON

Many are of the misperception that Latin is no longer spoken thus it is a waste of time to study it. Nothing could be further from the truth.

The years spent in high school are fleeting as they pass without regard for youth or adherence to moments savored. It is right to invoke the words of the great ancient Romans: tempus fugit. Because of the inevitable passage of time it is even more vital that the precious years of a youngster's life spent in secondary school be used to build a foundation of knowledge, critical thinking, broadening curiosity and solid, classic learning that will transcend the years ahead.

Young minds are absorbent and impressionable, eager for knowledge and with the right motivation, anxious to discover and grow. These results are achieved by exposure to influences from all areas of life. Proper values and respect are learned beginning in the home and should be reinforced in other areas of the community. Teamwork and cooperation are practiced in play, in organizations, within families, and involvement in community activities.

The role of the school is to provide an educational foundation elaborating on core values hopefully being reinforced in the various aspects of a child's life every day.

In today's world of lightening speed technology, twenty-four hour communication and lack of personal responsibility, providing students with an appropriate traditional education is a daunting challenge.

The recent controversy about the elimination of the Latin program in Cohasset exemplifies this dilemma and unfortunately depicts a misguided philosophy of those making the decisions. It is another example of town government making choices that might seem acceptable at the moment while ignoring the negative and harmful effects they will have on the future. Of course, it is likely much more desirable to defend the existence of an engineering lab or soccer team than the study of Latin. After all, "high tech" labs and winning sports teams sound much more prestigious than studying a "dead" language.

The prescient and articulate thoughts expressed in the Mariner by Cohasset High students about this action recently were accurate and wise. Their suggestion when asked what should be eliminated instead of the Latin program was intelligent and true. Almost anything removed from the budget in place of Latin would cause less harm academically. Extracurricular, administrative and maintenance operations hopefully all were considered for reductions in funding prior to the elimination of Latin study. Maybe reform and consolidation in these and other areas have been reviewed for budget waste but to remove such a vital subject is a loss for the children of Cohasset. After all, no one would consider the elimination of a Math Department. The same should be true for Latin. In a day when "non-words" like "incentivization" and "efforting" have crept into regular conversation, it is even more vital that people, especially youngsters develop a respect and appreciation for the beauty of language and the significance of learning and using proper words. Too often today due to laziness, ignorance or a faulty effort to sound grandly erudite, invented words clutter conversation and ultimately degrade and destroy the English language, as we know it. The study of Latin instills the history of words in students, encouraging them to search for proper ones and use them when speaking.

Ideally all these programs should remain in place as they all offer benefits to students. But these are extraordinary times in which we live. Difficult choices must be made.

Many are of the misperception that Latin is no longer spoken thus it is a waste of time to study it. Nothing could be further from the truth. As one who studied Latin for five years beginning in seventh grade, this writer can attest to the priceless value of this most traditional topic included in any truly outstanding classic education.

This realization is reached slowly as the years pass and one becomes aware that of all the subjects studied in secondary school, Latin is the one that is most valuable coming into use in numerous ways every day. Needless to say, attempting to convince 12-year-olds besieged by the declension of "puella, puellae," (girl) or the conjugation of "vinco, vincere," (conquer) is a difficult challenge. By the time they are studying Latin literature and translation, struggling with the works of Cicero, Virgil and Ovid the power of persuasion insisting that we'd "be grateful someday"...for all our knowledge of this classic language was not taken lightly.

Latin is the underpinning of the foundation of education. As eloquently stated by Cohasset students, the lessons of this subject benefit almost everything else one studies. Individuals who are able to write clearly and concisely use a myriad of scholarly and highly descriptive vocabulary words. Such writings generally are grammatically correct and well developed. When this writer sat in Latin class daily at what was then Girls Latin School in Boston, the entire first term was spent diagramming sentences and reviewing parts of speech....in ENGLISH! Without a grasp of these facts the study of most languages, both classic and modern becomes much more complex.

Interspersed with study of the language is a great deal of cultural background, history, analysis of life then and its relationship to the world today. As ancient Rome was a highly political society, opportunities to discuss the evolution of the political process is enlightening and fascinating. Even the beginnings of ancient religious conflicts and practices provide a realization of the complexities of today's global situations.

Once grammar and translation are mastered and the study of literature begins, some of the first truly in depth questions about the world, human nature and expression are posed and pondered. These exercises challenge the thought process, preparing students to lead a well informed, thoughtful life with the ability to make educated choices and contribute to the good of society.

The positive effects that Latin study has on SAT and/or College Board results are well known. The mastery of root words, parts of speech and knowledge of language concepts are invaluable to such success.

Of all things to be eliminated from the school system the Latin class should be one of the last to be sacrificed. Classic language study provides such a powerful basis for learning, it could be studied as a core subject since all other subjects cover topics for which Latin has supplied the intellectual tools.

It did take a couple decades, but this writer is proud to admit that, as we were told as little seventh-grade girls, "Someday you will be so grateful that you studied Latin and you will use it every day." This prophetic comment stated the truth. Where would we be had we not studied Latin? It is impossible to answer this question. However it is most likely that the ability to analyze language and action and generally think both critically and imaginatively would not exist to the extent that it does. This writer feels fortunate to have studied Latin and would do it all over again. Et tu, Cohasset?

Step up to plate for wind energy

SUSTAINABLE COHASSET

KATHRYN EARLE

What would make me proud is that we Cohasset citizens take the time and the trouble to show up on Thursday evening, June 25, at 7 p.m., at Town Hall and vote "no" on the wind turbine moratorium

I am writing on the subject of wind energy in Cohasset and to ask what will make you proud of our town and more importantly, of yourself as a parent, family member, friend and neighbor over the next few weeks and years. The town's Alternative Energy Committee already has done a very thorough and admirable job of learning and discerning the facts as they relate to the recently proposed project and the town bylaws. Members of Sustainable Cohasset tend to support the idea of wind turbines, and you will find a Q-and-A section on the currently proposed wind turbine project on our Web site at www.sustainablecohasset.com that will give you the benefit of the understanding of our most-knowledgeable Sustainable Cohasset members and their colleagues.

So – "What will make you proud!" In our Town Meeting just last year, the current wind bylaw was virtually unanimously adopted, evoking widespread applause. Since then, the Town Planning Board has been approached with a wind turbine proposal that seems (to many of us, including three of the four voting board members) to meet the criteria set forth in said bylaw. It is my understanding that the immediate business abutters, Hingham Lumber, Avalon and Sunrise, publicly have expressed very little, if any, opposition. However, this proposal has suffered intense, persistent opposition by a small percentage of Cohasset residents. I will ruefully share the blame for the lack of a well-organized campaign to ensure everyone's well-balanced understanding of the facts and the setting of concerns in the proper context of all residents' public and long-term interests.

We now face the following scenario. A citizens' petition has triggered a special Town Meeting that will be held at 7 p.m., on Thursday, June 25, at which we all will have a chance to vote on an article calling to suspend the issuance of permits – essentially, an indefinite moratorium. Although their commentary suggests that the bylaw could be amended, the actual article contains no recommendations. The wording of the article is ambiguous enough that it could eliminate any future possibility of wind energy in Cohasset. Why would we want to replace the bylaw that made us so proud, last year, with one that may prevent us, perhaps forever, from entertaining even the very best proposals for wind energy in Cohasset?

What would make me proud is that we Cohasset citizens take the time and the trouble to show up on Thursday evening, June 25, at 7 p.m., at Town Hall and vote "no" on the wind turbine moratorium. Wind turbines are part of a set of sustainable energy options that will offer us, our children, and our children's children, a better place to live. The sight of wind turbines in Cohasset and other South Shore towns must become an icon of social and economic responsibility – beautiful complements to our priceless and irreplaceable seaside heritage. Let's keep the dialogue going, and allow ourselves the opportunity to find the right answers for our wonderful community, together. Please vote "no" on the moratorium and say "yes" to the possibility of a more sustainable future for all of us.

At 54, Festival never gets old!

Every Father's Day weekend, a sprawling eight-pole tent, hundreds of artists and a hive of activity transform the oceanside town common in Cohasset, into one of New England's premier arts festival. South Shore Art Center's Arts Festival has become a highly anticipated three-day event, greeting summer with something for everyone — art exhibitions, handmade crafts, and performances.

The centerpiece of the Arts Festival is the Main Exhibition Tent, showcasing hundreds of artists in a Juried Exhibition and a Members' Show. In addition, nearly 100 juried craft artists offer unique handmade jewelry, ceramics, clothing, fine art, photography, and home and garden products. Art comes to life as ceramicists, wood carvers and painters demonstrate their work. The popular KidsTent, sponsored by LemonLime/Aveda Salon and Yachting Dog, showcases a Young Artists' Exhibition and offers children the opportunity for hands-on creativity. Musical entertainment ranges from singer-songwriters to bluegrass to the popular "O'Reilly's". Fresh lobster rolls and homemade strawberry shortcake sold at the churches on the common are part of the festival tradition.

Among the artisans participating in 2009 are jewelry designer Betsy Frost of Ipswich, Frieda Grotjahn, of Gloucester, who makes bags and totes out of old sails; Jennifer Ecker of Vermont's well-known Fat Hat Factory (clothing); and Richard Reynolds' Tide Clocks, of New Hampshire.

Festival hours are Friday, June 19, 2 to 7 p.m.; Saturday, June 20, 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.; and Sunday, June 21, noon to 5 p.m. A free trolley shuttles visitors from parking at South Shore Music Circus. A $5 entrance donation is requested. For a complete schedule of events, visit www.ssac.org, or phone 781-383-2787.

Swimming lessons walk-in signups

Swim lessons will be offered in four two-week sessions: Session I: June 22 - July 3, Session II: July 6 - July 17, Session III: July 20 - July 31, Session IV: August 3 - August 14. For more information come visit us online: www.cohassetswimcenter.com

For those who miss the May 25th deadline, walk-in registration for swim lessons will be June 13th at the Cohasset Swim Center, off of Sohier Street, from 9AM to noon. Members at that time, may sign up for any one of the four, two week sessions. Non-members may sign-up on June 13th for session I only if there is space available. All classes will be filled on a first come first serve basis. Please note: We will not be mailing a brochure.

Cohasset Harbor will soon be buzzing with activity as summer approaches.

Get out on the water!

Harbormaster reminds boaters to stay safe

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Harbormaster's office monitors and manages about 225 moorings in Cohasset Harbor. The three private marinas – the Old Salt House, the Yacht Club and Cohasset Harbor Marine – offer dock space and slips.

It's finally here.

After a long winter with snowstorm after snowstorm and freezing temperatures followed by a here one day and gone the next spring, summer has arrived.

With a couple of weekends of nice weather behind us many in Cohasset are gearing up to answer the ocean's call. Over the last couple of weeks the harbor has been filling up with powerboats and sailboats looking to get a jump on the boating season.

With June here in all its glory Harbormaster Lorri Gibbons anticipates more weekend boating traffic in the coming weeks.

"People are definitely out using their boats," Gibbons said, who is beginning her fourth summer at the harbormaster post.

The Harbormaster Department has busily been preparing for the season. The boats have been in the water since mid-May. The Harbormaster's mantra for this summer and every summer is simple, "we want everybody to have a fun and safe summer," Gibbons said.

The Harbormaster's office monitors and manages about 225 moorings in Cohasset Harbor. The three private marinas – the Old Salt House, the Yacht Club and Cohasset Harbor Marine – offer dock space and slips.

The waitlist to moor your boat in Cohasset Harbor is staggering. About 500 names, a combination of recreational and commercial boats, are on the list. Thirty-five names are requests for a commercial mooring. It can take more than a decade to reach the top of the list.

Although she didn't have the exact breakdown, she guesses about one-third of the boats moored in the harbor are sailboats and two-thirds are powerboats.

Over the past few years Cohasset has grown its transient boater business. Traveling boaters can stop into the harbor, moor for the night, have dinner, explore the shore, and then head on their way down (or up) the coast.

The town has three dedicated transient moorings and Cohasset boaters going off traveling typically let Gibbons know so their moorings can be used for those visiting yachts.

"In total last year we have about 200 nights of rentals. Some weeks there were more than others," said Gibbons. The business is win-win: it brings in additional revenue for the department and additional visitors to the town. Gibbons said the growth in the number of requests for transient moorings is simply due to word of mouth. The fee per night is $35.

Each summer Gibbons finds herself constantly reminding boaters of two rules.

"All children under age 12 must have a lifejacket on as well as zippered up and bucked up. It's federal law," Gibbons said. The second?

"The harbor has a five-mile-per-hour speed limit and no wake all the way out to Whitehead – and that's whether you are in the channel or going over the sandbar at high tide," Gibbons explained, who finds herself trying to get many boaters to slow down all summer long.

Each summer weekend has at least two harbormaster boats out on patrol; on busy weekends there are three boats out. The Harbormaster monitors VHF radio channels 10 (the working frequency) and 16 (for hailing or distress only).

For the twelfth year, the Cohasset Harbormaster has been doing pumpouts of boat waste systems.

Last summer, Cohasset Harbor and its outer waters were officially declared a "no discharge area" meaning all overboard discharge of boat sewage, even if treated, is prohibited. In a no discharge area, vessel sewage must be discharged to a shore-side or mobile pumpout facility.

The only town boat ramp, located at Mariner's Park at the end of Parker Ave., has had some repairs to the sides and bottom since last year.

"We are asking people to try not to launch or take out their boats at low tide," said Gibbons, as it will damage the end of the ramp. "Half-tide or more should be fine."

Come July the harbor gets very busy even on the weekdays when both the yacht club and sailing club hold lessons. During the lessons the harbormaster monitors their radio channels in case there is an emergency.

"We keep an eye on them and an eye on the weather when they are out there," said Gibbons.

Student power alive and well

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

...what do many students do with much of their time in Cohasset? They help the town and reduce its cost of operation.

Possibly, not everyone knows the extent to which young folks in Cohasset help the town during their process of growing up. At one time, each of us learns about some of the things our individual sons and daughters do in support of town programs. But rarely do we clearly see the collective contribution of youth to the town as real quantifiable benefits to our infrastructure, to our public service staff and to the town's bottom line.

Everyone sees student work in town in a slightly different light: Parents with the first responsibility for the development of their offspring see the experience of public service as a necessary adjunct to their children's assimilation of the prerequisites for living in an ordered society; for teachers, perhaps as an adjunct to the learning obtained in the classroom. The general outlook is "good for the kids; good for the town." But the pervasive nature of the public service process places our youth in practically every part of town operations or interest; the Library, the Historical Society, the Board of Health, various recreational pursuits and certainly at CSCR, the Center for Student Coastal Research, a center for taking science out of the classroom and applying it in practical ways to the town's real needs in assessing its environment.

A casual glance into a listing of the CSCR Projects shows the breadth of the student's interests and the breadth and scope of the town's needs for high quality information. Over the last nine years, the role of Cohasset students has changed from youth trying to learn something about nature into a functioning group of young scientists still learning, but now contributing vital needed data to the town.

Wetland Monitoring: The waterfront in Cohasset's harbors and estuaries has changed from a largely saltwater littoral into a fresh-to-brackish waterfront. Certainly, a strong tongue of saltwater invades both harbors and proceeds deep into its tributaries. But it is generally surrounded by brackish-to-fresh water of annually increasing volume coming from the land. Cohasset's young wetland monitors continually assess the progressive alteration of our salt water habitats with its eel grass salt flats and creatures into a brackish environment.

Water Quality Monitoring (harbor and stormwater): An overall data gathering at a number of sites each year to provide an assessment of the change in character of our brackish estuaries.

State of the Harbor Report: A first-time project for 2009 will be a compilation of the overall condition of the harbor, what's going on and what the town should be doing or looking out for. Such a study was done for the Gulf in 2002-3 and provided a roadmap for maintenance and future needs for that estuary.

Beach Monitoring for swimmer's health: Each summer, the Board of Health sends students to all the principal swimming beaches in town to take samples and have them analyzed. This process has been greatly enhanced by students having the ability to perform some of the analysis using split samples taken during their regular rounds.

Catch Basins and Outfall Pipes: Various sites are monitored as required for contamination stormwater during the road, sewer and water pipe constructing going on in town.

Treat's Pond Study: (suspended in 2009) because of conflict by residents.

In 2008, students concentrated on quality of data and meaning of the data, proper data storage and data management. So much data now exists, it's necessary to organize it so that good information may be retrieved from it that can be used in future for comparison and assessment.

Biofilm Assessment: This year, one student conducted a breakthrough study on the value and methods of Biofilm Assessment. Biofilm is the guck that grows and accumulates in natural waters enriched by nutrients. Pond scum and boat bottom fouling are examples. In learning the sources of nutrient supply to biofilm, the student was able to determine that biofilm analysis is not a good means of assessment of the condition of effluent from nearby potential sources of pollution.

So, what do many students do with much of their time in Cohasset? They help the town and reduce its cost of operation. In addition, many students go on to fine colleges and have earned important scholarships, including the prestigious Thoreau Scholarship, collectively worth more than $250,000 over the last eight years.

Register to vote for Special Town Meeting

The last day to register to vote in the Special Town Meeting on June 25 is Monday, June 15. Registration will take place at the Town Clerk's office from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before a town meeting or Election Day may register to vote. There is no waiting period to be eligible to register to vote. People who move may register to vote as soon as they move into a new home. Registration is closed for a brief period before each town meeting and election to allow election officials time to prepare the voting lists. If people register during a closed period, they will be eligible to vote only in later town meetings or elections.

Affordable Housing Law audit released

YOUR REP

GARRETT BRADLEY

For the current legislative session I have filed 14 Chapter 40B related bills, including legislation which would provide for a 3- year moratorium on 40B projects...

This week the Senate Committee on Post Audit and Oversight released the results of their audit - Chapter 40B: Building Accountability Into The Massachusetts Affordable Housing Program. I applaud the work of the Committee, which has shed more light on the serious problems with this affordable housing law. In particular the report noted some developers' abuse of Ch.40B by frequently understating their profits in turn withholding excess profits required to be returned to cities and towns. One estimate by Inspector General Greg Sullivan suggests a loss of $100 million to communities.

I'm pleased to see the report recommended that the Department of Housing and Community Development (DHCD) create a database of all 40B projects undertaken in the state and that they review pending 40B legislation and incorporate the appropriate legislative proposals into state guidelines and regulations. For years I, along with other legislators, have filed numerous bills seeking to loosen the stranglehold this affordable housing law has on communities. Our towns have no control over 40B proposals when considering local zoning, density and type of developments.

My staff and I have been looking closely at Ch.40B this year and I am working toward filing comprehensive legislation to recommend changes and improvements in the law to create affordable housing that is appropriate for our communities.

For the current legislative session I have filed 14 Chapter 40B related bills, including legislation which would provide for a 3-year moratorium on 40B projects, a bill which would provide increased local oversight of 40B proposals, and legislation which allows for senior housing, considered as rental units, be included in a communities affordable housing count.

Past attempts at making Ch.40B a reasonable and effective law that would provide real incentives for construction of affordable housing have not achieved genuine reform. The Post Audit and Oversight report offers some constructive recommendations and I will work toward moving real Ch.40B reform through the Legislature.

As always I value input and thoughts from constituents. Please do hesitate to contact my office at 617-722-2520.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley represents the Third Plymouth District that includes Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and one precinct in Scituate.

'Lock-Up' fundraiser to benefit MDA

Jailbirds will be calling vendors, friends and family members to reach their bail to help send a child to MDA Summer Camp.

Arresting officers from the Muscular Dystrophy Association are on the lookout for community leaders in the towns of Hull, Hingham and Cohasset who have been accused of having a "big heart." Once arrested and taken into custody by the MDA officers, this group of "Most Wanted" professionals will be serving time behind bars – "for good." These voluntary arrests will be made on June 17, when the "jailbirds" will be taken to a mock jail at the Red Parrot in Hull for the Lock-Up event. The prisoners will raise bail for their release to benefit MDA.

The Red Parrot will host the benefit event from10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at 1 Hull Shore Drive. The Red Parrot will provide complimentary bread and water, AKA a lunch, to participants as they serve their time in the cell block. Local businesses in the town will be teaming up to make a difference in the lives of individuals living in the local area that are affected by a neuromuscular disease. Jailbirds will be calling vendors, friends and family members to reach their bail to help send a child to MDA Summer Camp.

MDA is a voluntary health agency working to defeat neuromuscular diseases through worldwide research, services and professional and public health education. MDA maintains 230 clinics worldwide, including local area clinics, local support groups and a summer camp program for kids with muscle wasting diseases.

Anyone interested in "doing time" at the Lock-Up, would like to make a contribution to bail out a jailbird or to volunteer, can call the MDA office in Raynham at 508-821-1533.

Building permit inspections to be conducted

Cohasset Assessors' Office staff will conduct building permit inspections for assessment purposes over the next few months as they prepare for certification by the Department of Revenue for fiscal 2010. The staff will be physically inspecting and/or measuring the properties in town that have recent building permits. Digital cameras will be used to produce exterior photos of the buildings for the database.

The Assessors' staff will be able to produce proper identification. If the homeowner or a person older than 18 years of age is not at home on the first call, a notice will be left asking the homeowner to call for an appointment. Property owners are asked to respond to any notices at their earliest convenience to avoid estimated assessments.

Girls' Tennis

The Cohasset girls tennis team had an adventure on Wednesday on the way to a 4-1 win over Norwell in a Division 3 South Sectional Semifinal match at Norwell.

With two rain delays, more than the average tension because of the tournament setting and two teams that knew each other pretty well, it added up to a big win.

"There was some drama," Cohasset coach Gigi Meehan said. "There were a few differences of opinions on how safe the courts were and some stressful situations in the rain."

Fortunately for Cohasset, the rains didn't have a negative effect.

"When the first rains came we had just won the first set in first doubles 6-4 with Jenny Magruder and Maggie MacGoldrick," Meehan said. "They had been cruising with a 3-0 lead, then all of a sudden it was 3-1, 3-2, 3-3 when the rain came. It was good for them. It was the same for Maddie (Altholtz). She had written a big paper the night before and she was exhausted. When it started she was down 2-5. She fought back to win 7-5. It was good timing for Maddie and first doubles."

For Danielle Sookiasian, it wasn't as fortunate.

"Katie Malloy had beat Lauren (Allen) and Maggie," Meehan said. "She's a strong player who doesn't miss. She's tenacious. We went in with three strategies for Danielle. The rules say you can only talk to a player after every three games. Strategy No. 1 didn't work. She lost three games. Strategy No. 2 didn't work either. She lost the next two. Finally he third plan worked. Danielle started pushing her forward and back. She finally got on a roll."

By the time the rains were coming down, the team's seniors, who had already won, had to leave for Senior Night and Sookiasian's match was just for fun. The teams still decided to let them finish.

Cohasset plays Dover-Sherborne next.

In the opener against Cape Cod Academy, there were some nerves.

"I was really nervous early," Altholtz said. "I was down in the first set 1-3. Then I broke her and got more confident. This was a

Boys' Tennis

OSTERVILLE - The Cohasset Skippers Boys Tennis lost to Cape Cod Academy 5-0 in the semi final match of the Division 3 South Sectional State Tournament today. The match concluded one of the most successful campaigns in recent years for the Boys Tennis Team.

The season highlights included clinching a South Shore League Championship against Norwell 3-2 in the last week of the season avenging an earlier 3-2 loss at Nowell.

There was a stunning 3-2 home court victory over Hingham in early May that ended Hingham's 18 match winning streak in a third set tiebreaker at second doubles. Hingham has not lost since and is now 18-1 this season.

The Skippers won two rounds in the State Division 3 Sectional

The Cohasset boys lacrosse team isn't looking ahead.

It would be easy, with neighboring Scituate, the rival and villain of this season and last season looming, but there's still a couple of things that have to happen before a Harvard showdown.

First and most important, there's tonight's game against visiting Dover-Sherborne.

"We beat them 10-8 during vacation," Cohasset coach Stew Curran said. "But they're playing their best lacrosse. They're 15-5 and recently lost to Medfield 7-5. Medfield might be the best team in the state. They'll be a challenge."

Still, Curran is ready to take his chances.

"We've had good fortune with them the past three years," he said. "We actually thought they've be one of the top few teams in the division."

Cohasset is in good position themselves, due to convincing tournament wins over Ipswich (13-7) and Hamilton-Wenham.

"Against Hamilton-Wenham they were getting a lot of penalties and we capitalized with man-up goals," Curran said. "In all

There may have been other great teams in the past, but going right by the stats, this year's Cohasset softball team is the school's best yet.

The stat that counts most is the win column, and Cohasset has those in abundance this year.

That includes the team's first trip to the Division 3 South Sectional Final, which was just announced as Sunday at 5 p.m. at Taunton High School against No. 2 Nantucket.

Coach Rob Spofford is hoping the town will come out in big numbers to support the team, the same way they supported the basketball teams in the fall.

"I'd love to have a huge turnout for this historic game," Spofford said. "It would be great to have the support."

Cohasset won its way to the final with impressive victories over Hull and Diman.

Naegelin 's big game was important because Hull pitcher Rachel Allen was having a big game.

"It was two of the best pitchers on the South Shore," Spofford said. "The game was a classic

The hole (in one) truth

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

The most memorable shot for any golfer is a hole-in-one.

You don't have to be Tiger Woods to hit the perfect shot, either.

Golf Digest estimated the odds of an average golfer making a hole in one are 12,000 to 1. The odds are 5,000 to 1 for a low-handicap golfer and improve to 3,000 to 1 for PGA Tour players.

Jack Nicklaus has 20 aces, Gary Player 19 and Arnold Palmer 18. Tiger Woods also has 18, and his first came when he was 6. None of them are close to amateur Norman Manley of Long Beach who has 59 or Texan Mancil Davis, who played briefly on the PGA and Canadian tours, who has 50.

Former Red Sox catcher Carlton Fisk won a Lexus on the 155-yard, par-3 with his ace and pitcher Roger Clemens has five. Three presidents have recorded aces: Dwight Eisenhower, Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford. Nixon said his ace was "the greatest thrill in my life — even better than being elected."

Each ace has its own story. Here are some:

Tommy Belcher had been golfing only three days when he got his. The Plymouth 10-year-old did it on the 127-yard 16th hole of Squirrel Run GC in Plymouth. It must run in the family. His cousin, Kevin Gately, got a hole-in-one when he was 10 three years earlier at Southers Marsh in Plymouth.

Belcher isn't the youngest. That honor goes to Nolan Haynes of Clinton, Ohio, who aced an 88-yard hole at Spring Hills CC this year at age 4.

Haynes makes Ryan McGarry of Easton seem like an old man. McGarry is 7. He got his ace last summer at the MGA Links at Mamantapett in Norton. He hit a driver on the 110-yard fourth hole. Sean McGarry, Ryan's father, said his son "just kept repeating, 'My first hole in one! My first hole in one!' " McGarry used his cell phone camera to record the moment. He put the ball in a display case. What did Ryan think of his first hole in one? "It's hard to explain," Ryan said. "I was thinking a lot of things . . . I was excited." This is not the first time McGarry has been in the spotlight. In 2005, he was featured in the Globe as a 5-year-old golf whiz. After the story, "The Today Show" and "The Tonight Show with Jay Leno" featured him.

True aces are rare, but what is even rarer are holes-in-one on par-4s.

Marie Robie of Wollaston scored the longest hole-in-one ever recorded by a woman on a par-4, 393-yard hole. She was playing with her foursome at Furnace Brook GG in Quincy on Sept. 4, 1949 when she carded her ace on the downhill par-4. She couldn't find her drive until one of her playing partners took a look in the hole and there it was.

Seven-year-old Ryan McGarry of Easton, who has been playing golf since he could walk, tries his magic on the wonderful par-3 17th hole at Riverbend Country Club in West Bridgewater. Last summer he aced the first hole at the MGA club in Norton.

South Shore Country Club member Neil Anderson aced the par-4 first hole at the Hingham club.

"We were playing the front tees because it was November and they close the back tees for the season," said Anderson. The first hole is only 277 yards but plays longer. It is up and over a hill to a blind green that has more rolls than a bakery.

John Paredes, Bill Collins, Rod Smith and Jack Gamache were putting on the green when they saw the ball roll up and fall into the hole.

Two great hole-in-one stories at Thorny Lea GC in Brockton involved long-time members John Gorman and Arnold Swartz.

Gorman scored an ace, hitting a 3-iron into the cup on the par-3 17th hole on Oct. 25, 1953. The following day, he repeated his ace.

According to Golf Digest's national hole-in-one clearinghouse, only six golfers, including Arnold Palmer, have ever aced the same hole on consecutive days. Today a plaque sits on the tee to remind everyone what was accomplished on this fearsome par three, the most difficult at Thorny Lea.

The following year Swartz began his "Grand Slam of Aces" at the club, a feat that took 41 years and countless rounds to accomplish. Swartz is the only club member to have aced all four par threes at the club. The magazine's hole-in-one clearinghouse reported that only 45 golfers had ever completed the hole-in-one cycle at any particular golf course.

Brad Hobbs of Abington decided to play golf at Brockton CC, where he is a member, on Easter Sunday in 2006. It was an unforgettable round for the 58-year-old. Hobbs fashioned two holes-in-one – at the 145-yard third hole, and the 195-yard ninth – in the same round. Five club members witnessed Hobbs' shots, which capped a career-best 81 on the par-68 trek. Hobbs told reporters he has the souvenir balls on his desk at home, along with the scorecard of his round. "That's what it was, a lot of luck," said Hobbs, a custodian at a local elementary school. "I just got up and hit the ball and hoped I hit it straight."

Some aces are to die for. Retired milkman Emil Kijek of North Attleboro scored his first ever hole-in-one at the Sun Valley in Rehoboth in 1994. Moments after celebrating the feat, he collapsed and died. Emergency medical workers tried unsuccessfully to revive Kijek, but he was pronounced dead at Rhode Island Hospital in Providence. One of his golfing partners, Morris Dumont, said Kijek approached his ball, rolled his eyes, said, "Oh, no," then collapsed. He was 79.

Leopold captures Hornblower

Tee to Green

Robert Leopold of Potowomut (R.I.) CC fashioned a 1-under 69 in the final round to capture the 45th Hornblower Memorial Tournament last Saturday at Plymouth CC.

Leopold's two-day aggregate of 140 was one stroke better than runner-up Brian Higgins of Franklin and three strokes better than the Tasho cousins, Dave and Steve, of Thorny Lea. Three-time Hornblower champion Steve Tasho posted the best round of the tournament, stringing together a 3-under 66 on last Saturday's final round.

Other top finishers were Mike Cole of Gannon GC (144), Michael Hunderson of Marshfield CC (144), Greg Chalas of Thorny Lea (145), John Hadges of Thorny Lea (146), Phil Smith of Vesper CC (146), Matt Bianchini of Mount Pleasant CC (146), John Drohen of Alpine CC (146), Daniel Falcucci of Cyprian Keyes GC (146), and Joe Toland of Hanover CC (146).

Andy Drohen of Crestview CC sat on top of the leaderboard after an opening round when he shot an even-par 69. But on Saturday, under ideal conditions, he ballooned to an 11-over 80 and finished in 32nd place.

Open invitations

Several local golfers have qualified for the Massachusetts Open Championship, which will be played June 22-24 at Belmont CC. It will be the 100th State Open. Last year's champion, James Renner of Foxborough, is expected to defend his title that he won last year at Stockbridge GC when he shot a 5-under 204. Michael Arter of Lakeville was a co-medalist at a qualifying tournament at The Captains Course in Brewster last week. The 53-year-old Lakeville golfer shot a 2-under par 70 to lead a field of 16 qualifiers. Arter shared the honor with mini-tour professional Tyler Brewington of Orangeville, PA, who claimed co-medalist honors after posting a 2-under par 70. Arter is one of eight amateur players to qualify in Brewster. "Belmont should fit my game very well," Arter told tournament officials. "I hit the ball relatively short but straight. Belmont is a perfect venue for me. It's not too long and I putt pretty well on fast greens." This is his third time qualifying for the Open . . . In another State Open qualifier at Halifax CC, Scott Hawley of Shrewsbury was one of 19 qualifiers. Hawley posted three birdies and two bogies to capture co-medalist honors with fellow professional David Schuster of Hawthorne, N.J.

A course with a split personality

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

Riverbend Country Club in West Bridgewater has given the golfing public two courses for the price of one since the day it opened in 1999.

RIVERBEND COUNTRY CLUB

Few trees impede your journey. The wind, which can blow here, is a major factor in deciding what club to hit.

The wind isn't your only problem from tee to green. There is water everywhere. Few golfers walk up the final green unscathed.

The back nine is totally different.

After the opening holes, you retreat into a cathedral of pines. It reminds me of playing in the Carolinas.

The one constant is the friendly greeting from Lyman Doane II, who has been head professional since opening day.

You need his disposition to play well here. You need to maintain self control and focus on every shot.

To play the first hole is to understand the front nine.

This starting hole demands a courageous tee shot and an accurate approach to the green, a difficult execution for so early in the round.

It is a short par-4 – only 330 yards from the middle tees – but there is water left and water right and plenty of trouble (sand and water) surrounding the putting surface.

Riverbend's front nine demands straight shooting or you will wind up in the water.

Your drive can get you into a lot of trouble here. Some players begin their round with a fairway wood or use a hybrid club. No matter what you use, it is essential that you hit it straight.

Those who play the ball from left to right, which can be anything from a slight fade to dramatic slice if you're a right-handed golfer, won't have fun on the first three holes. The Town River hugs the right side of the fairway and if your ball finds water, you won't find your ball.

The second hole is a short par-5 – 471 yards from the blue markers – where long hitters will lick their chops, thinking birdie. The third is a short par-4 (317 yards from the blues), but it is one of the narrowest fairways on the golf course. If the wind is behind you on those two holes, you could be off to a great start.

On the fourth hole, a 134-yard par-3, you turn back toward the clubhouse. It's a fun shot, but if you stray to the left, you will find water.

The fifth, sixth and seventh holes are strong par-4s, a difficult stretch.

What else do you expect when you play a course that has River in its name?

The eighth is a doozey of a par-3. More than 200 yards to an elevated green fronted by wetlands and whenever we play this hole, it seems there is a stiff win in our face. Like the eighth hole, the par-4 ninth requires a carry over wetlands on your approach shot.

The back nine is not as difficult.

After three par-4s that skirt your journey into the forest of pines, you come up with a juicy dogleg par-4 that bends to the left. Long hitters be wary. It is easy to hit it through the fairway on this short hole, which measures 341 from the blue markers.

No. 14 is a moderate par-3 and is handicapped as the easiest hole on the course. But don't take it for granted. The 16th is the most difficult hole you will face on the back nine. It is a 551-yard par-5 that demands three great shots from tee to green.

After a delightful par-3, you head to the finishing hole, another par-5 where a par is a score well earned.

tough match. I like that. It prepares us."

Altholtz said this team has been an experience.

"I'm having so much fun," she said. "We've had cookouts and pasta dinners. We all get along great. It's a great team."

Sookiasian challenged her way into the second singles spot she holds now.

"I played first doubles last year with Maggie," she said. "We got to the state semis last year. This year I challenged my way up. I've played every spot except Maddie's. I play with her a lot. That really helps my game."

Sookiasian has been one of the players who can play longer matches.

"I get nervous when everyone's watching me," she said. "But it's nice to know they're there."

Lauren Allen and Tina D'Antonio have played second doubles this season.

Allen battled long with D'Antonio to win their match against Cape Cod Academy.

"We knew singles swept, so winning wasn't as important," she said. "But 5-0 does sound better. We really wanted to win to get off to a good start."

For D'Antonio, this was her first tournament experience.

"This is the first tournament I'm participating in," she said. "We were a little nervous, but we had fun. Early I was mad at myself because of some errors, but Lauren gave me extra confidence to push back and we won. It was great. We have a great team. Everybody's been bonding. It's fun."

Magruder and McGoldrick haven't played together much this season, but are hitting a stride now.

"We lost the first set," Magruder said. "Maggie and I hadn't played together in a while, but getting that third set helped. Winning the first round was a good confidence boost. This has been a really good season."

The team was captained by seniors Ivan Sceery, Dan Brady, Luke Brewer, and Victor Hartmann. Victor Hartmann led the team at first singles and compiled a 14-4 record and was a SSL League All Star for the second straight year. Dan Brady won a huge match against Norton to give the Skippers momentum and a quick 1-0 lead in the first round of the playoffs. Ivan Sceery played a pivotal role moving from first doubles to third singles and had big wins against Norwell, Norton, and ORR. Luke Brewer had the second best winning percentage on the team compiling an 8-1 and record and saved his best match of the year for the playoffs clinching the match for Cohasset on Monday this week at Old Rochester. Cohasset won 3-2.

The South Shore League coaches selected five Skippers to the SSL League All Star Team including newly elected captain junior Mike Filbey, sophomores Robbie Hill and Travers Craven, and seniors Sceery and Hartmann. Filbey was instrumental in the Hingham upset winning at three and played terrific matches in playoff wins with Travers Craven against Norton and Luke Brewer at ORR. Robbie Hill compiled an 8-5 record and did a great job at first doubles and second singles. He is one of the team's hardest hitters and developed one of the best serve and volley games in the league.

Adding to the teams depth of talent were sophomores Will Choi and Garret Canney. They added athleticism and firepower. Choi won the crucial match at second doubles with Craven in the third set tiebreaker upset against Hingham after fending off two match points. Garrett Canney compiled a very solid 8-4 record and played his best match of the year today against Cape Cod Academy.

At the Team Awards Dinner held at the Sceery's house last night, the coaches presented Victor Hartmann with First Annual Paul Carroll Memorial Award dedicated in memory of the late great Paul Carroll who coached this team in 2007 and 2008. The winner was selected based on the qualities that epitomized Paul Carroll; sportsmanship, respect, and love of the game.

Special thanks to all of the players, parents, coaches, and Eike Craven for making this season a success.

game between two great pitchers. We got a run in the first, then Rachel mowed us down into the fourth.

That's when Spofford's gameplan took hold.

Early on, he had told his players to be patient at the plate, take pitches and force Allen to throw a lot.

In the fourth, leadoff hitter Kristin Monaco drew a leadoff walk, stole second and eventually moved to third, while Cohasset loaded the bases.

The Skippers didn't score that inning, but the groundwork was set.

"We had the bases loaded and didn't score," Spofford said. "I told the girls not to get down. She threw a lot of pitches and that was going to get to her. If we stay focused it will pay dividends."

The next inning the plan came together.

"Kristen got on," Spofford said, adding that Monaco has a .645 on base average in the tournament out of the leadoff spot. "Meredith Kelly single Kristen to third and then Carly Salerno had the at-bat of the season. If it wasn't 15 pitches it was close to it. She kept fouling balls off and finally worked the count to 3-2. Then she drove the ball into the right center gap for two runs. That was deflating for them. Then we scratched another in the sixth."

While Spofford has been thrilled with the top and middle of his order all season, he's been getting huge production from the bottom of the lineup in the playoffs.

"Our seven-and eight have been delivering for us and Kelly has been mowing people down," Spofford said. "She had 14 strikeouts and one walk. It was a great game. It was really a tough draw for either one of us, but we had the No. 1 seed (and a bye) and that paid dividends."

Monaco had a walk and two doubles while scoring a run and knocking in three from the leadoff spot.

Meredith Kelly was two-for-three with two runs. Carly Salerno was two-for four with two doubles and three RBI. Brittany Dunn was three-for-four with two knocked in. Carly Martin added two RBI and Christine Coner had two hits.

"The 6-7-and-8 spots were 6-for-12," Spofford said. "That has really helped."

Getting to the finals is huge.

"This is the furthest any softball team has gone," he said.

Cohasset is scheduled to play No. 2 seed Nantucket.

"We split with them in the regular season," Spofford said. "They're well coached and have a lot of seniors. It should be fun. We're No. 1, they're No. 2. That's the way it should be."

The game still hasn't been scheduled.

we've been getting great play from Will Wise on the attack. He's got six goals and 12 assists in two games. He's the quarterback of the team and he's stepped up. Dean Driscoll feeds off Will and he's had eight goals in two games."

Dana Valentine and Sam Leahy have also stood out.

Alex Kinnealey has excelled on the faceoff, winning 21-of-24 faceoffs with a couple of goals on the faceoffs, and Jake Kissick has also played well killing penalties.

Curran likes his chances against Dover-Sherborne, and admits that the team has looked just a little ahead.

"We'll be able to have scouts at Scituate/Swampscott," he said. "If Scituate wins, and we win, we'll have a few new things to show. They beat us twice this year and in the finals last year."

More currently though, Curran said he also has weapons in Thomas Flibotte and Jack Murphy.

"Jack makes saves and clears the ball when he has to. Thomas may be the best mid on the South Shore. We'll see what happens."

For Cohasset, the present has become a little more clear because the Scituate game was changed to Monday night from the original Thursday schedule.

With a win Friday they'll be able to completely focus on the next round.

Runners take off from the starting line of the 8th Annual Clark's Run in honor of former Cohasset Athletic Director, Clark Chatterton.

Clark Fund Run hit the streets

The Clark Chatterton Memorial Committee sponsors the run. Clark Chatterton spent his entire life in Cohasset. He and his wife Sally raised their children in town. For more than thirty years Clark was a teacher, coach and athletic director at Cohasset High School.

Clark is also remembered as the Concessions Manager at The South Shore Music Circus, where he spent every summer of his adult life. Clark loved Cohasset and had a special place in his heart for youth sports and community initiatives. It is on behalf of theose things he held dear that the Clark Chatterton Memorial Committee was formed. The primary mission is to raise funds and enhance Cohasset's sports and recreation facilities. The 9th annual Clark's Fund Run was Sunday.

Cohasset Soccer Club electing board of directors

The Cohasset Soccer Club is looking for help and leadership skills as the organization revitalizes its Board of Directors and opens its doors to new ideas and new leadership. All parents or guardians of children playing in the soccer program are encouraged to be part of this revitalization process.

The Cohasset Soccer Club is the not-for-profit organization that organizes and runs the community's in-town soccer programs for pre-K to 4th grade players and the travel soccer programs for players in 5th grade and above. Fall, winter and spring programs are offered, with the goal of providing all players the opportunity to learn the game of soccer, enhance their soccer skills and have fun. The Club currently has approximately 700 children playing in the program with approximately 100 adult volunteers supporting and managing the programs.

The Club is currently seeking to establish a new Board of Directors to ensure continued program success and to set the future direction of the organization. Over the past few years the Club leadership has dwindled such that Club direction and management are now handled by just a few individuals who strongly believe that new leadership is needed to ensure future success. Wallace St. John, in particular, has shouldered the majority of this burden — but he will be stepping down as the President of the organization after this spring season is completed.

As a result, a new Board of Directors needs to be elected and all interested parties are encouraged to become active members of the organization. The goal of this new Board and new leadership is to build on the past successes of the program while setting an optimal course for the future. In order to facilitate setting up this new Club leadership, a completely new slate of Directors will be elected this June, with Club leadership and direction then determined by this new Board. The Board of Directors will be composed of 13 persons, with the only requirement being that the Board members be willing and able to assist and support the Cohasset Soccer Club as it moves into the future. The initial term for new Directors will be one year.

Establishing this new Board of Directors will be a two-step process.

First, all interested parties are asked to submit a brief statement of interest describing why they would like to be part of the Board and what qualifications they may be able to bring to the Board. Extensive soccer experience is not necessary — though experience may help. What is needed is a strong interest in establishing the best soccer programs possible for our children and the willingness to work hard toward this goal. If you are interested and would like to be considered for a Board position, please go on-line to the Club's website — www.cohassetsoccer.com — and click through the " Elections" link located at the left side of the webpage. Submission of statements of interest will be open through June 12, 2009.

Following the submission of statements of interest, a Club-wide election of the new Directors will take place from June 15, 2009 through June 26, 2009. Each family with a child currently in the soccer program will be eligible to vote, with a validation of each vote made prior to counting ballots. Voting will be performed online only, with the ability to review statements of interest and actually vote for the new Board members on the Club's website – www.cohassetsoccer.com — by clicking through the "Elections" link located again at the left of the webpage. Each family will be able to select up to 13 candidates — the number of available Director slots. Voting will close at 5 PM on June 26th. Elected directors will be announced no later than June 28, 2009 and results will be posted on the club website. The first new meeting of this Board of Directors is tentatively scheduled for June 30, 2009.

Further questions or inquiries should be directed to elections@cohassetsoccer.com.

LIFE AT CHS

SEAN MACCARTHY

For the past 37 weeks, all of you "Life at CHS" readers have enjoyed the writings of a wonderful Class of 2009 student by the name of Lauren Mack. Lauren has so brilliantly chosen me, Sean MacCarthy, a man with 2-webbed toes but one big heart, to take over this lovely column in the Cohasset Mariner. Lauren brought CHS life to life through this article and I fully intend to do the same in a more of an unorthodox kind of way. Anywho, let's give this columnist thing a try, shall we?

Living within the Cohasset High School hallways this past Monday, one would have found the school to be half empty and just full of underclassmen as the class of 2009 no longer goes to school (but does not hesitate to torment others about having to go to school) and the class of 2010 was fiddling around the JFK museum and waiting in ridiculously large lines at McDonald's and Burger King. Its okay, the 5-piece chicken selects with the medium French fries and medium chocolate shake were well worth the wait.

This past Tuesday was the day that election results were finally revealed after a ballot blunder was committed by the teachers who run the student council. Therefore, our school has new class officers for the 2009-2010 academic school year (listed in this article from President down). The up and coming freshman Connor Goetz as President and had the other positions removed because of the lack of interest (Step ya' game up freshmen!). Next year's sophomores elected Isabelle Robinson, Aniko Haber, and Morgan McCarthy. The juniors of next year selected Sam Green, Will Choi, Morgan Grasz, and Elise Quebec. The SENIORS of next year elected Sean MacCarthy (I think this is the first thing I have ever accomplished…), Ian Porter, Kevin O'Connell, and Terry MacCormack. James Earle was chosen to be the student council Vice President and Mackenzie Hart is now the President of the School Council.

Wednesday and Thursday was slow going at the school for those who still have to take classes but those who left last week returned to rehearse for senior night and graduation.

Other than that, not much has happened this week with the exception of current juniors stressing out about the dreadful SATs this Saturday. The best of luck to myself and others who are taking it…try not to screw up your future…no pressure…

Ciao

— Your new "Life at CHS" columnist, Sean MacCarthy

Sean MacCarthy is a future Senior at Cohasset High School and is happy to be writing for the Mariner.

Marsh monitors wanted

Attention all middle school science lovers. Would you love to muck around in the marsh and get dirty while exploring the coast this summer? Are you currently in 5th, 6th or 7th grade? If so, CSCR (Center for Student Coastal Research) has the program for you, it's Junior Marsh Monitors. The program will run Tuesdays and Thursdays for four weeks starting July 7. Sessions run from 9-11 am or 2-4 pm. Cost is $150 for the month. Sign-ups will be held at the CSCR Open House at the Lightkeeper's House on Tuesday, May 26 at 6:30 p.m. Space is limited. Email hmurphy@hinghamschools.com or macadoo7@verizon.net for more information.

Extra Credit Cards demonstrate appreciation

Cohasset Education Foundation is a nonprofit organization dedicated to enhancing, enriching and maintaining Cohasset's history of excellence in education.

A donation to CEF is a way to honor a specific teacher or school employee at the holidays or anytime. Donations may also be made in honor of relatives, friends, coaches, grandparents, other special people or as a memorial remembrance. A child's teacher or other recipient will receive a card acknowledging that a donation has been made in his or her honor with a personalized message. The amount of the gift will not be disclosed.

All proceeds from extra credit are earmarked for professional development, classroom and program grants, helping Cohasset's teachers affect and inspire students.

Extra Credit Cards: With each donation, CEF will mail an acknowledgement card to a teacher or other special recipient. Cards are available with a suggested minimum donation of $15 each – $50 for five cards; larger donations are always appreciated. Donations can be for any special occasion and are tax-deductible. Checks should be made payable to: Cohasset Education Foundation, P.O Box 309, Cohasset, MA 02025.

For more information or additional applications, contact sarah.murphy@comcast.net or visit the Web site at cohassetedu-cation.org to print out a form.

Bay Youth Symphony auditions under way

Bay Youth Symphony, sponsored by South Shore Conservatory, is currently scheduling auditions for the 2009-2010 school year. BaYS is a sequential youth orchestra program consisting of three leveled ensembles. Students audition for the Sinfonia, an intermediate level full orchestra, directed by Nicholas Tatarka, or the advanced level Symphony, conducted by BaYS music director, James Vinci. There is also a non-auditioned elementary level string orchestra, Dolce Strings, conducted by Theresa Johnson.

For more information or to schedule an audition, visit the BaYS Web site at sscmusic.org/orchestra, or call BaYS managing director Candace Kniffen at 781-749-7565, ext.32, or email c.kniffen@sscmusic.org.

Byron Aulick is organizing a 35th class reunion for the Class of 1975. The reunion won't be held until July 2010, but in an effort reach all members of the class in preparation for it, he has created a Facebook Alumni '75 page. There are already 50 members of the class in the group and the alumni page gains new members each week. If you graduated in the Class of 1975 and would like to join this group, e-mail Byron at chsadmin@datavault.com or Kay at domaccount@btinternet.com. All CHS 1975 alumni are welcome to join.

The Cohasset Board of Selectmen, acting as liquor license authority, will hold a public hearing on Monday, June 22, 2009 at 7:20 PM in the Selectmen's Office, Town Hall, 41 Highland Avenue, to consider the application of the Cohasset Golf Club to alter its premises at 175 Lambert's Lane, Cohasset. The present licensed premises consists of the clubhouse, which has a basement, main floor and partial second floor. The Bar and Lounge are on the main floor. The application is asking to extend the premises to also include the grounds of the golf course. The public is invited to offer public input on this proposed in writing in advance of the public hearing or in person at the hearing.

NASHVILLE FOR FAMILIES

Candyce H. Stapen
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

NASHVILLE — What's the hidden bonus of a family tour of Nashville? Being able to connect with your kids, especially those hard-to-please 'tweens and teens through music. To the generation that downloads tunes instead of spins LPs, Nashville offers a historical perspective even if country isn't your kids' favorite musical genre.

In Music City the digital generation can discover how folk, country, rockabilly as well as rhythm and blues influenced their hot iPod picks. And even if you yourself came of age in the era of vinyl and eight tracks, you get to be the guide and gain some newfound respect from the kids.

To those kids who have not yet discovered country or don't think it's "cool," just say two words: Taylor Swift. She proves that teens like country music. The best-selling vocalist is one of many headliners at the June 11-14 CMA Music Festival, Nashville's big block party.

But any time of year, begin your magical musical tour at the Country Music Hall of Fame and Museum. Plaques paying tribute to the genre's greats line the rotunda. "Sing Me Back Home," the permanent exhibit details country music's history and features such over-the-top items as Elvis' gold piano and Porter Wagoner's jacket, elaborately decorated with blue beaded wagon wheels.

The Hall of Fame's kiosks are the most fun. That's where you can call up videos and songs. After watching Minnie Pearl decked out in a flowered hat with a price tag attached deliver her lines, kids realize that she was a skit master long before "Saturday Night Live" and fashion, as part of showmanship, started way before Madonna's pointy bras.

You might also gain points with your teens by quietly singing along to Elvis' "Hound Dog" or toe-tapping to Jerry Lee Lewis' rendition of "Great Balls of Fire." To get in touch with performers' style and the decades' standards, have your kids listen to Patsy Cline croon "Crazy" and ask them to compare Carl Perkins' version of "Blue Suede Shoes" to Elvis's hit.

The museum's Experience Music programs offer songwriter sessions where kids can ask questions about the creative process and "petting zoos," where young musicians get to finger guitars, banjos, gourds and other instruments.

From the museum, board a bus to RCA's Studio B, the hallowed hall where Elvis, the Everly Brothers, Eddy Arnold and Charley Pride recorded. Although there's not much to see except posters and the room where Elvis laid down "Are You Lonesome Tonight," the simplicity of the studio underscores that artists before the era of high-tech, really needed to know how to sing. No-lip synching allowed. Elvis recorded "Lonesome" in nearly one take. The ending required cutting and splicing because the back-up singers hit a false note.

More than 100 clubs, most clustered in or near downtown, offer live music nightly, but few admit those under 21. To enjoy live music with your kids, book tickets ahead of time. Check the headliner concerts, the museums' performance schedules and reserve space at one place that does allow kids (at tables, but not at the bar), the Bluebird Cafe. At the 21-table restaurant plus "listening club," artists perform as they might in your living room, without razzle dazzle back-up. Garth Brooks and Kathy Mattea sand here before they became famous. Also, the Stage on Broadway club admits kids accompanied by adults before 6 p.m.

Among the June and July offerings at the Ryman Auditorium are six nights of bluegrass music. The famed concert venue also hosts Elvis Costello June 16 and Chris Isaak July 22. The historic auditorium was home to the Grand Ole Opry from 1943 to 1974.

The Grand Ole Opry actually began in 1925 as the radio program "WSM Barndance." One night in 1927, after the show followed a classical opera broadcast, the announcer introduced the country music program as the "Grand Ole Opry" and the name stuck.

Every Saturday night the Grand Ole Opry, now with its own auditorium, hosts a variety of performances from country to crossover. Headliner shows feature Carrie Underwood June 9. Wynonna appears June 27 and the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band takes the stage Aug. 15.

Nashville itself has the second largest landmass of any city in the U.S., sprawling over 533-square miles (Jacksonville is the largest). And in addition to popular music the city boasts a symphony. In the summer the Nashville Symphony offers free, outdoor, classical concerts in parks as well as paid performances of Brahms and Beethoven at the Schermerhorn Symphony Center.

The 55-acre Cheekwood Botanical Garden and Museum of Art, one of several museums in Nashville, hosts Family Night Out, geared to young kids, on Thursdays in June and July. Budding stars can clap along with such children's musicians as Dennis Scott, winner of a 2006 Grammy for producing a children's recording. Cheekwood is known for its botanical prints, Worcester porcelain, American silver and dazzling Faberge collection that includes three eggs plus tulips fashioned from amethyst, quartz and diamonds.

Outdoors, kids romp through the boxwood, Japanese and seasonal gardens and also explore the nearly mile-long sculpture trail. It's home to whimsical art works such as Sophie Ryder's "Crawling Lady Hare" and abstract creations like George Ricky's "One Line Horizontal Floating Twenty Feet," a metal beam that moves with the wind, changing appearance. With a Backpack Adventure bag borrowed from the museum, kids can follow scavenger hunt clues or sketch what they see.

The Frist Center for the Visual Arts, located in an impressive adaptation of the former main post office, offers Frist Fridays, their summer concert series May 29, June 26 and July 31. Linger in the courtyard and listen to a variety of music from country and western to classic rock.

Unlike most art museums, the Frist, with no permanent collection, serves as a venue for traveling exhibits. Teens interested in architecture might like "Museums in the 21st Century," May 29 to Aug. 23. Those feeling moved to create should visit ArtQuest, the museum's room where kids and families can paint watercolors, make a print or create a sculpture.

Music City offers visitors plenty of places to try Southern comfort food, a must-do on a Nashville visit. For a stuff-your-face breakfast of biscuits, eggs, ham and blueberry pie, try the Loveless Cafe, a Nashville landmark at the northern end of the Natchez Trace Parkway. Popular Jack's Bar-B-Que serves up pork, chicken and turkey plates that get locals and visitors alike lining up. For a more healthy meal, visit Tayst Restaurant and Wine Bar, certified by the Green Restaurant Association, to find such tasty staples as spaghetti and meatballs (the spaghetti is whole wheat), trout and chicken fricassee.

Don't be surprised if you find yourself humming country tunes — or at least Elvis — while you explore. Some time before you head home from Nashville, you're likely to notice you and your kids share a newfound appreciation for music and each other.

Beach to open June 13

The beach will officially open for the summer on Saturday, June 13. Lifeguards will be on duty from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m., daily, through Labor Day weekend.

Every year in early June the annual beach cleanup begins in preparation for the official opening of the beach. The clean up will begin on June 8 and should last for a week. Those who are on the beach during the clean up period are reminded to be careful. When Rosano-Davis has completed the cleanup of the seaweed, the trash will be removed and the beach will be ready for summer.

The beach will officially open for the summer on Saturday, June 13. Lifeguards will be on duty from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m., daily, through Labor Day weekend. Jennifer DiSabatino, a teacher from the middle and high school, will be the head lifeguard and beach manager again this summer. She will be in charge of scheduling and guard procedures for the staff of 13 summer lifeguards and 14 beach maintenance workers. She has 19 years of lifeguard experience and is certified in advanced ocean rescue and safety. A Lightning Meter has been added to the bathhouse this year to alert guards and beach-goers that lightning is in the area and that the beach needs to be closed. Remember, lifeguards are there to protect beachgoers and it is important that people follow their instructions.

The Sandy Beach Association is a group of eight volunteer residents from Cohasset. The Trustees have announced two recipients of the Sandy Beach Association Scholarship. These $500 scholarships are awarded to high school seniors who demonstrate a passion for marine biology and environmental studies. Recipients this year are Jean Thomae and Marcus Charles. These two CHS seniors participated in studies of enterococci counts in the Cohasset Waters. These tests measured the quality and health of the waters in Cohasset. Marcus will be attending Babson College in the fall and Jean will be attending the University of Delaware.

Thanks to the contribution of cans and hauling by Graham Waste Management, the Sandy Beach Association has announced a trash recycling program. Look for the recycling cans and properly dispose of all recyclables into the designated cans. It is very important that trash be properly separated from recyclables to ensure the continuation of this program.

All facilities stickers will be available for sale starting the week of June 15 at Town Hall. This all-facilities sticker gives residents access to the recycling center and the beach parking lot. As a reminder, stickers are required for all cars to park at Sandy Beach.

The third annual Cohasset Triathlon will be run through the town of Cohasset on June 28. This race will begin at 8 a.m. A portion of the beach parking lot will be closed at 2 p.m., on Saturday June 27. The entire parking lot will be closed until noon, on Sunday June 29. Lifeguards will be on duty on Saturday the 27th until 7 p.m. Lifeguards will not be on the beach until noon, on Sunday the 28th.

Sandy Beach Association asks that people respect the rules of the beach. Alcohol, fires, fishing, glass bottles or flotation devices are prohibited anywhere on the beach. Frisbees, hard balls, kites, skimmers and boogies boards are allowed in orange cone marked areas only. Climbing on rocks on either side of the beach is dangerous and prohibited.

Dogs are not permitted on the beach from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m., from mid-June through Labor Day. If people bring pets to the beach during off-hours, it is imperative that they pick up after the dog.

This week, people will receive the Sandy Beach Association annual fundraising letter. This mailing is the only source of fundraising for the Sandy Beach Association. The fee for the parking sticker funds the parking lot only – it does not cover the costs of beach cleanup, staffing or beach operations. The beach can't operate as it does without the support of Cohasset residents. Donations can be sent to P.O. Box 285, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Rousing rendition tops the year

THE ARTS

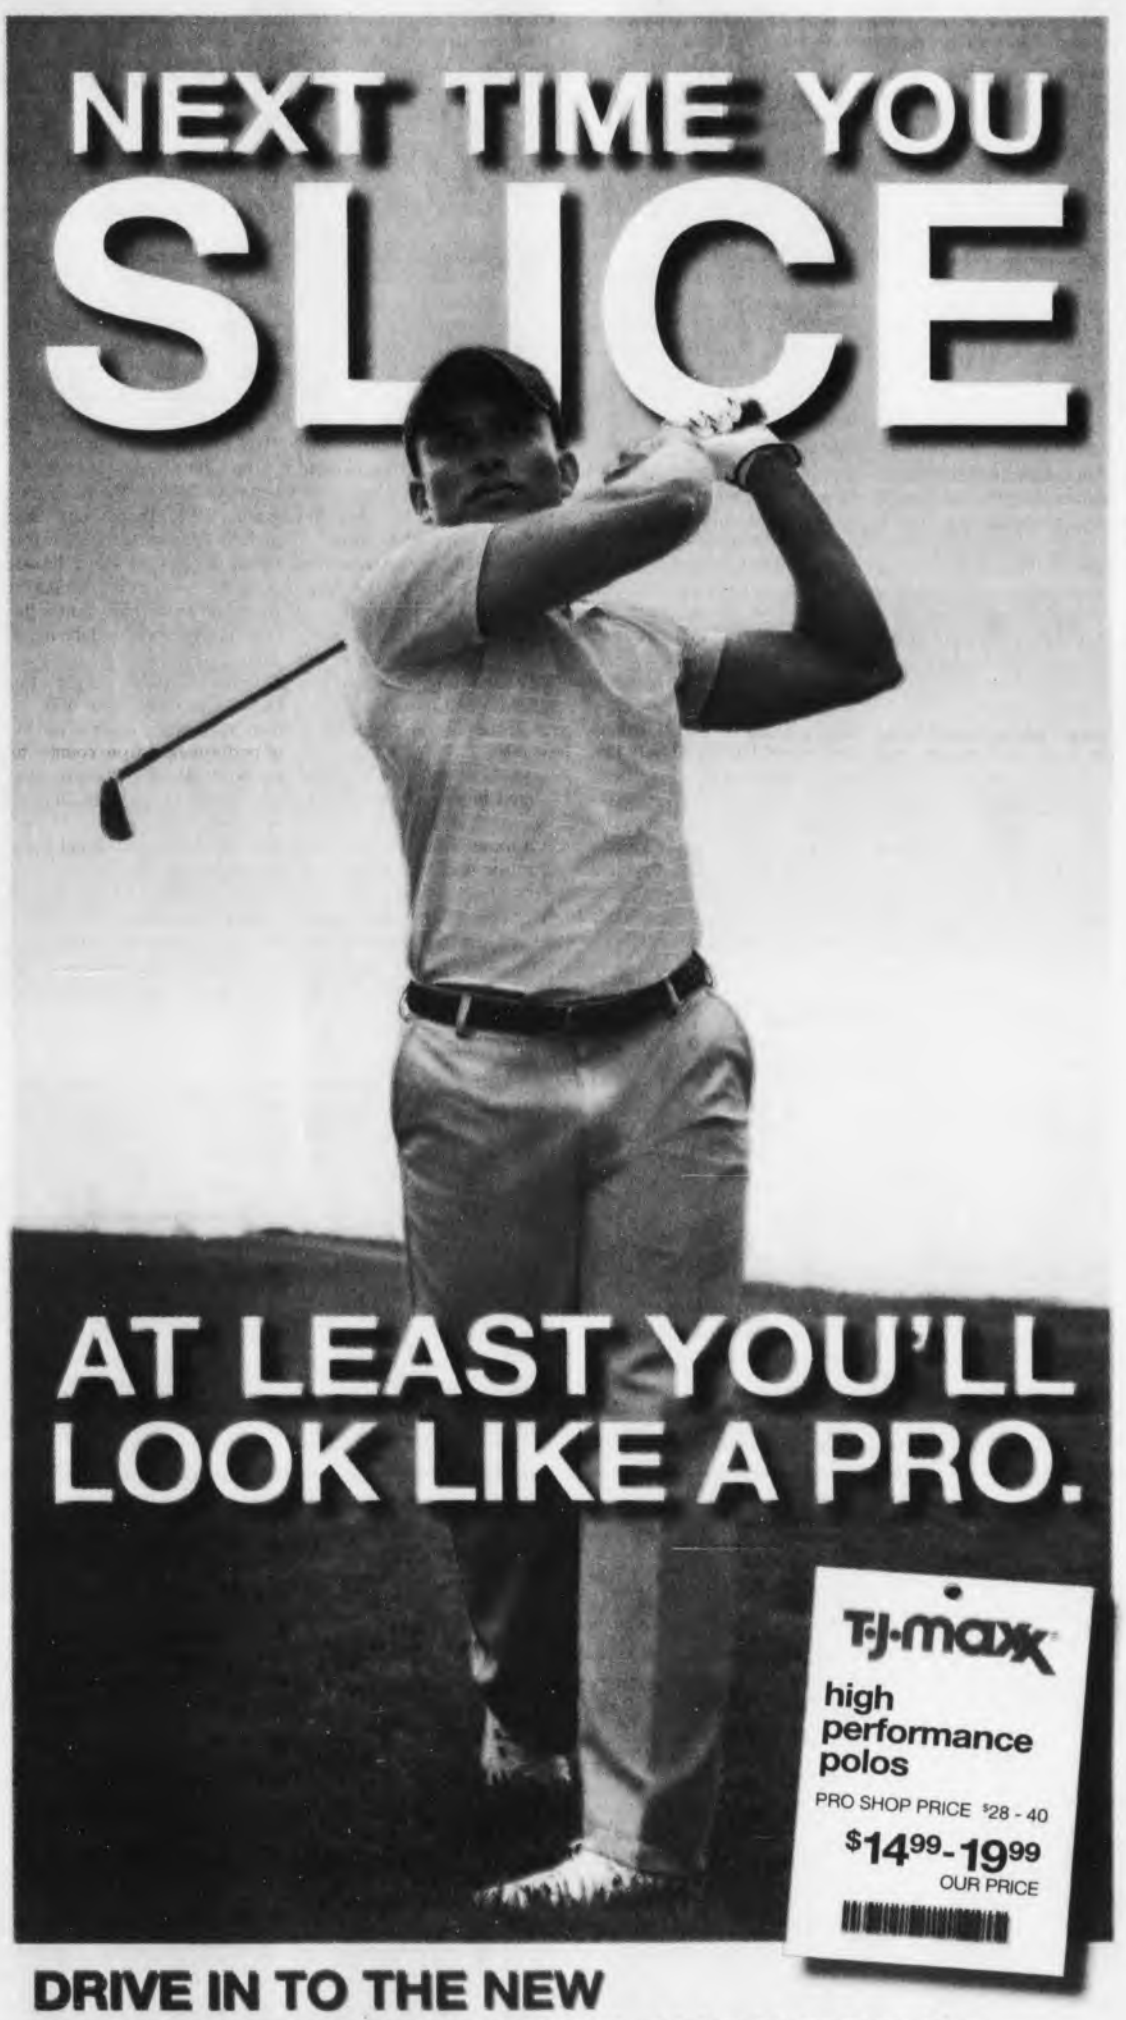
KATHRYN HILLMAN

Cohasset Middle/High School hosted its Fine Arts Night Thursday, May 21, in the upper lobby of the foyer. The evening featured both an art exhibit and performances by the chorus, band and jazz band.

The students' artwork was displayed around the upper lobby. Some students contributed single works, while others had multiple works displayed together. Works included, photographs, collages, paintings, and pen and ink drawings. Featured artists included Ann Roberts, Johanna Fortunato, Luke Brewer, Sammi Lehr, Stephanie Smith, Erika Reardon, Madeline Leahy, Lauren Mack, Lily Simon and Natalie Beukers. The walls were crowded with works with a focus on portraits and pen-and-ink drawings, but included such diverse elements as prints, realistic still life paintings, ceramics, masks and more abstract art. Luke Brewer showed his graphic designs on T-shirts. It showed a culmination of hard work over the course of the year.

Performing arts groups included the concert band, directed by Stephanie Moriarty, which opened the evening, performing "Tango for Band," a Latin rhythm piece that featured the percussion section. The concert band switched off with the chorus throughout the evening. A memorable piece by the concert band was "Ghost in the Attic," which had a haunting, rattling quality, employing some unorthodox percussion instruments to create an otherworldly atmosphere. The highlight was when ghost cutouts dropped from the ceiling, hovering over the band.

The chorus, directed by Brian Marks, performed several pieces and sounded great. He dedicated the piece "How Can I Keep From Singing" to the seniors. Another interesting piece was "Man in the Mirror" by Michael Jackson, which had a dance accompaniment lead by Carly Salerno. A smaller group sang the popular song "Viva la Vida," which sounded terrific and was a hit with the crowd.



The Jazz Ensemble also performed with a set that included Duke Ellington's "Caravan" and "Soul Bossa Nova" – a Latin number that featured the sax section. Berlin's "Puttin' on the Ritz" opened the set with big-band sound featuring trumpets and flutes.

Many awards were given to various students over the course of the evening. The Outstanding Band Member Award went to both Rudy Helbock and Jean Thomae. Lauren Mack won a chorus award and the Music Honor Award, the award for someone who excels both in band and in chorus went to Ellie Baumgarten. The Distinguished Music Award went to Jonathan Troy, Conor Ofsthun and August Oddliefson. Conor Ofsthun also received the annual jazz award at the jazz night concert on April 15.

The evening concluded with the concert band playing "American Visions" and the wind band classic "Stars and Stripes Forever," featuring Ashton Howard on the piccolo. It was a fitting conclusion to the year for the Cohasset arts programs.

Kathryn Hillman of Cohasset is a junior at Notre Dame Academy.

SALOME'S STARS

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) There's nothing an Aries Lamb likes less than having to tackle a humdrum task. But finding a creative way to do it can make all the difference. A more exciting time awaits you this weekend.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Finishing up a job on time leaves you free to enjoy your weekend without any Taurean guilt pangs. A romantic attitude from an unlikely source could take you by surprise.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Moving in a new career direction might be seen by some as risky. But if you have both the confidence to see it through and the facts to back you up, it could prove rewarding.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Holding back on a decision might be difficult, considering how long you've waited for this opportunity. But until you're able to resolve all doubts, it could be the wiser course to take.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You still need to move carefully where financial matters are concerned. Better for the Lion to move slowly than pounce on a "promising" prospect that doesn't keep its promises.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A rejection of an idea you believe in can be upsetting. But don't let it discourage you. Get yourself back on track and use what you've learned from the experience to try again.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) The early part of the week could find you looking to balance your priorities between your family obligations and your career responsibilities. Pressures begin to ease by week's end.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) An associate's problem could cause unavoidable delays in moving ahead with your joint venture. If so, use the time to look into another project you had previously set aside.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Although a financial problem could be very close to being resolved in your favor, it's still a good idea to avoid unnecessary spending for at least a little while longer.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Support for some unwelcome workplace decisions begins to show up, and continues to build, so that by week's end, the gregarious Goat is as popular as ever.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Congratulations. Deciding to attend a social function you might have earlier tried to avoid could turn out to be one of the best decisions you've made in a long time.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Getting into a new situation could prove to be a more difficult experience than you expected. Don't hesitate to ask for advice in coping with some of the more irksome challenges.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Web Jams winner New Son Rising ready to rock

Norton band plays Liberty Tavern June 6

New Son Rising

What began as a solo project back in 2000 for Norton resident Jake Lundell has evolved into the hard rock band New Son Rising, recent winner in Wicked Local Web Jams — an online competition hosted by GateHouse Media New England's South division – that puts the spotlight on local music and then puts it to a vote. In three Web Jams rounds featuring eight area bands, New Son Rising amassed the largest number of votes and will play a Web Jams winner show at the Liberty Tavern in Rockland June 6.

New Son Rising is thrilled with the win and the exposure, said band manager Kerrie Angell. Promoting the band is a priority, noted Lundell, the band's founder and vocalist — whether giving away CDs, getting their music on iTunes or taking part in radio or online contests.

"You have to be committed to it and stick with it," he said. "I've seen bands come and go."

Lundell started out on his own but decided collaborating with other musicians was the way to go.

"I wanted to take my music to the next level," said Lundell, who formed NSR in 2003 and began recording a year later.

While bringing a group of musicians with different musical tastes together can be challenging, Lundell seems to have found the right formula.

His partnership with songwriter and guitarist Steve Ohlson has been very fruitful for the group, which also includes Jonas Osborne on bass and drummer Jay Kaplan.

"Never Knowing," the Web Jams winning track, was the first song Ohlson and Lundell wrote together.

"We sat down and wrote it in about five minutes," recalls Ohlson.

Three weeks after joining the group, Ohlson and Lundell had co-written about 15 songs. There was clearly creative chemistry there from the start and it continues five years later.

"It helps with you find someone, with whom you relate (musically)," Ohlson said.

The group has already released a self-titled album – produced by Fran Flannery, who worked with the band Creed — and will release a self-produced second album titled "Sonset" in July.

While Lundell loves the creative process, Ohlson admits performing live in front of a crowd of any size is his thing.

"I like to be a crowd pleaser," Ohlson said. "I like to jump around, climb on the highest thing in the place and flip my guitar around like a hula hoop," he said, leading his fellow band members to joke about needing an ambulance parked outside their gigs. "It's about fun and meeting new people," Ohlson said of performing live.

And they've performed in front of some big crowds, opening for bands like Seven Dust, Drowning Pool, Edema and Josh Tod from Buck Cherry.

While locally they play venues in Southeastern Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Boston, NSR has hit the road to play shows in New Hampshire, Connecticut, New York and Canada. With a "couple thousand" shows under their belts, Lundell said you have to love what you do.

As for NSR's sound, the band focuses on being as original and creative as they can.

"We try to stay current, be original but not too distant from the music of the day," said Ohlson. "We listen the radio and a lot evolves just from Jake and I sitting down with acoustic guitars."

Lundell said the band will do cover songs, but only of songs they feel a connection with. "If I can't relate to something, I can't sing it," he said.

"I'm an artist and I like to be original 24-7."

With NSR's material, Lundell said he can be completely authentic and connect with a crowd. "I can pour my heart into it because it's about my life, my losses, my gains."

A tattoo artist by trade, Lundell is looking to make New Son Rising his full-time gig and he's well on his way.

"We're playing just about every weekend — Friday and Saturday," said Lundell, noting the band just recently started getting paid for performing.

In addition to the June 6 Web Jams winner show at Liberty Tavern, NSR will play Hot Topic at the Brockton Mall Thursday, June 11 at 7 p.m., Basta in South Weymouth Friday, June 19 at 8 p.m. and Fusion5 in Foxboro Saturday, June 20. For a full listing of upcoming shows visit New Son Rising's Web site www.newsonrising.com.

Is your band ready to rock online? We've filled our Web Jams 2 bracket of eight, which will launch in June and are now filling up the Web Jams 3 bracket set to rock later in the summer. Send your MP3 file, band photo and bio to Alice Coyle at acoyle@cnc.com. For more information call 508-967-3505.

A love letter

Plymouth Community Theatre performs "Bedroom Farce"

By Scott C. Smith
SCSMITH@CNC.COM

One of our favorite things to do is to put on the affected air of a British accent — right? Go ahead — say something rather British, eh what? There you go, mate, you can do it.

So this night the cast is off book — no scripts. Before rehearsal begins, the actors team into couples and walk and talk through their parts together. They immerse into their British best and get the giggles out of the way.

This night, the actors will also work in and around the new, just-built core of their set — three double beds with hand-hammered pine frames. The mattresses look suspect, and the cast hides them under colorful comforters. The back of a couch fills in as a headboard.

Director Liz Bettencourt pulls the cast together and discusses set details. "Bedroom Farce" is set in three bedrooms. The beds stack at odd angles to each other on the rehearsal floor, each representing a bedroom in a different home. The set allows little room to move, but that's OK.

"The British are known for their small, cramped bedrooms," Bettencourt tells her cast.

It's time to run through the play. The director is more concerned with the cast getting the flow of the set this night than with getting through both acts' lines.

"We want it all in place so we can be as sharp as we can be before tech week," she says.

That's next week. The actors are ready.

"Places, then, please!"

"This is a love letter to being in a relationship. It shows the amount we are willing to fight for to make a relationship work."
Bedroom Farce Director Liz Bettencourt

Plymouth Community Theatre will present Alan Ayckbourn's comedy "Bedroom Farce" June 5 to 7 at the Plymouth Center for the Arts, 11 North St. in downtown Plymouth. The English playwright wrote the play for the National Theatre in 1975, and it has run worldwide since, including a run on Broadway. As is his custom, Ayckbourn named the play prior to writing it. It is indeed a farce, but the play ended up replete with serious social undertones. It addresses marital relationships, and, as a story line will, "Farce" shows things getting worse before they can get better. But how much better will they really be?

Bettencourt is familiar with "Bedroom Farce," one of Ayckbourn's 70-plus plays. She has directed it at Plymouth South High School, where she is the drama supervisor. She pitched the play as her favorite among four comedies she recommended to the Plymouth Community Theatre board of directors for the spring production. The board said OK.

"They trusted me," she said.

While this is Bettencourt's directorial debut with the PCT, she has acted with the group. A year ago, she was heavily in rehearsals for the theater company's first drama, a rather dark one called "Book of Days."

The director was also cast last summer in the PCT's first Shakespeare on the Rock production, "Much Ado About Nothing." The company will put on another free Shakespeare production on the harbor this summer.

Bettencourt has been in line to direct since, and she gets both the comedy and the social commentary of this play.

"There are great moments of physical comedy, such as when Bob (Hollis) falls out of bed reaching for a book, and his back hurts and he can't move for hours," she said. "But it also gets the audience to think about their own relationships. This is a love letter to being in a relationship. It shows the amount we are willing to fight for to make a relationship work."

"Farce" uses relationships — present, past and imagined — to complicate what sounds, on the surface, like a harmless evening. Kate (Jen Madden) and Malcolm (Dennis Lewoczko) are giving a house-warming party and have invited two couples. Jan (Stephanie Caron) is attending while her husband, Nick (PCT president Hollis) stays home in bed with a bad back. But Trevor (Mark Rocheteau) and Suzannah (Anastasia O'Brien) are also invited. It seems Suzannah once had a thing for Trevor, and wouldn't you know that Trevor and Suzannah are on the outs. Nick is predisposed to wonder about Jan and Trevor attending the party in his absence. Trevor's parents, Ernest (David Krasner) and Delia (Chris Bailey) are going out to dinner that evening, but focus parental angst on their spoiled son, who Delia thinks should have married Jan. An ill-timed kiss sparks the growing turbulence, and the evening is played out via the characters' interactions in Kate and Malcom's, Nick and Jan's, and Ernest and Delia's bedrooms.

The play moves back and forth — sometimes springs — between the bedroom settings.

Occasional calls for "Line!" interrupt the otherwise flowing dialogue as rehearsal gets under way. The actors do have their lines intact. They focus more on maneuvering around the set, getting used to the newly added beds that have suddenly become the physical focus of the play.

But the beds are just a vehicle. This play is all about people, couples rather, and the relationships they breed, attempt to nurture and sometimes fail.

"Bedroom Farce" represents the growing collaboration between the Plymouth Community Theatre and Massasoit Community College's drama program. Rocheteau, Massasoit's fine arts coordinator, performed in "Book of Days" and "Much Ado," and the college will again supply staging and lighting for this summer's Shakespeare on the Rock production. Lewoczko is one of Rocheteau's students.

To see just how Lewoczko's and the other characters grow onstage, take in a performance of "Bedroom Farce" June 5 to 7 at the Plymouth Center for the Arts, 11 North St. in downtown Plymouth. The Friday and Saturday shows begin at 8 p.m., and the Sunday shows start at 3 p.m. Tickets are available through the Hollis Insurance Agency, 508-209-0400, and at theatermania.com or by calling 866-811-4111.

PCT is also collaborating with local restaurants to help ensure a pleasant night out. The Fridays and Saturdays of the performance, Enotica de Vino, on Court Street, will offer 50 percent off selected appetizers before or after the show – just mention the special to the server. And Chez Ducrot, behind the 1820 Courthouse on Russell Street, will take 10 percent off the food bill for attendees who dine at the 5:30 seating, by reservation – call 508-747-4148.

And then get ready for two hours of comedy – and drama.

"This cast is so professional, so giving and uninhibited, and so risk taking," Bettencourt said. "They really get the audience to think about their own relationships."

NAME: Eden Marrano
SCHOOL: Pembroke High School
GRADE: Junior
STATS: A three-time Patriot League all-star, Marrano went 17-0 this season, posting a 14-0 record in the league. She only lost one set the entire season, and she was the only player in the Patriot League to make it to the second week of the state individual tournament.

NAME: Leah Kelly
SCHOOL: Marshfield High School
GRADE: Junior
STATS: Kelly, a junior captain, lost just one match in the Atlantic Coast League this year, and it came at the hands of one of the area's top players in Plymouth North's Sarah Forman. Kelly beat Forman the second time around, and it just so happened to come on the last day of the regular season, which qualified the Lady Rams for the postseason tournament for the 10th year in a row. Kelly finished with a 14-2 overall record and 11-1 mark in the ACL.

NAME: Kate O'Connor
SCHOOL: Scituate High School
GRADE: Junior
STATS: Kate has been a leader for Scituate's one-loss squad this season. Among her victories were wins over Superteam members Roberta Bergstein and Maddie Altholtz. O'Connor started strong, and grew stronger as the season progressed.

NAME: Katie Malloy
SCHOOL: Norwell High School
GRADE: Sophomore
STATS: What may go down as the most memorable moment of her high school career, Malloy battled back twice in the same match after suffering an injury to beat her opponent and win the Lady Clippers a share of the South Shore League title. Malloy won more than 90 percent of her matches this year to help lead Norwell to a 12-2 record.

NAME: Katherine Ripple
SCHOOL: Hingham High School
GRADE: Sophomore
STATS: Katherine was just all-around dangerous for the Harborwomen, playing everywhere from third singles, second singles and first singles while compiling a 19-9 regular season record. Ripple was a Patriot League All-Star and a winner of the League's Sportsmanship Award.

NAME: Darci Viera
SCHOOL: Norwell High School
GRADE: Freshman
STATS: Playing primarily at second singles, Viera had the talent to jump up to first singles when called upon. She also played at third singles this season. Viera finished with a 13-9 record. The freshman was instrumental in helping the Lady Clippers win a share of the South Shore League for the second time in the last five years.

NAME: Roberta Bergstein
SCHOOL: Hingham High School
GRADE: Junior
STATS: Bergstein finished 14-2 and was a Patriot League Honorable Mention All-Star. While she had the two losses, Bergstein was known as one of the toughest player in the area, playing No. 1 through a tough schedule.

NAME: Maddie Altholtz
SCHOOL: Cohasset High School
GRADE: Junior
STATS: Maddie, a junior has taken well to the No. 1 singles, with just two losses all season, both to close friend, Roberta Bergstein, also a member of our Superteam. Maddie has continued to win, winning her first-round tournament bout against Old Rochester on Sunday. Maddie fared well at the MIAA individual tournament, winning her way into the third round.

NAME: Cory Tucker and Jane Morgan
SCHOOL: Duxbury High School
GRADE: Morgan, senior; Tucker, junior
STATS: Tucker and Morgan cruised to a 19-2 record this season, which is particularly tough to do in the competitive Patriot League. Add a tough Massachusetts team as well as Notre Dame Academy in Duxbury's nonleague schedule, and the duo's record becomes even more impressive. In Duxbury's 4-1 tournament loss to Hingham, the two were the lone winners for the Lady Dragons.

NAME: Shelagh Joyce and Brittney Dangoni
SCHOOL: Scituate High School
GRADE: Seniors
STATS: Shelagh and Brittney were dominant in the first doubles spot this season, compiling a 15-6 record before rolling into the MIAA individual tournament, where they made it into the semifinals before falling to a Wellesley team that finished second – to another Wellesley team. Shelagh and Brittney could be the key for Scituate in their current tournament run.

Housing Trust wants support

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

It is a trust fund without any money.

Frustrated members of the Housing Trust, a town committee established at the 2008 annual Town Meeting, came before the selectmen June 8 to discuss its future needs. Foremost in their mind was getting some funding to more actively explore potential housing opportunities.

"I think we can work far more effectively if we have access to funds."
— Jim Hamilton

The Housing Partnership Committee, which has morphed into the Affordable Housing Trust Committee, has been working since 2006 to identify small affordable housing opportunities and develop zoning bylaws. Jim Hamilton, chairman of the Housing Trust, said in order to complete its mission, the group needed both the support of the town and the selectmen.

"You've got to believe in what we're doing here," said Hamilton.

In particular, the Housing Trust needs funding, and Hamilton said the most likely and appropriate mechanism was through the community preservation fund.

It was always the intent of the Housing Trust to petition the community preservation committee to transfer the portion of the funding earmarked for affordable housing. Housing Partnership members discussed the matter with the CPC on at least two occasions before Town Meeting, but the Class of 2009 grads receive their diplomas

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

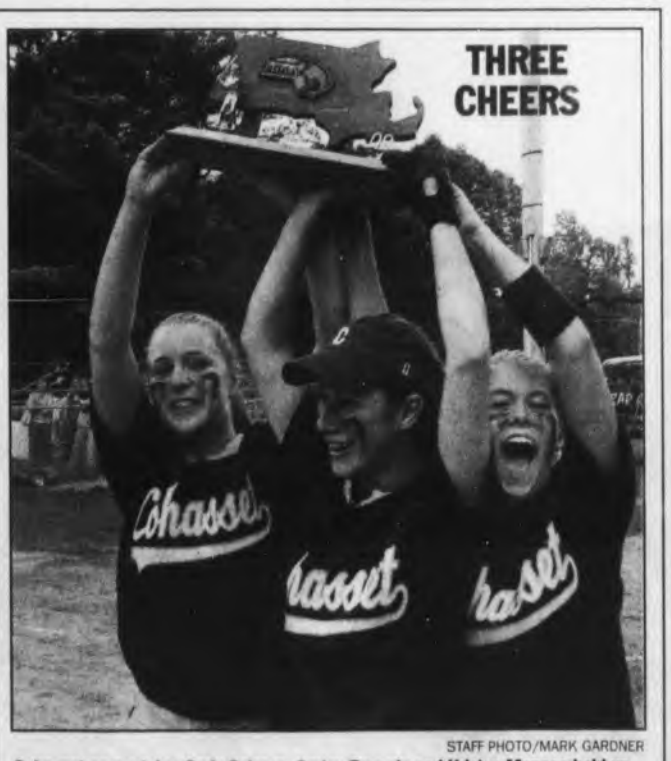
See pages 8,9 and 29-31 for more graduation coverage.

In a time of uncertain future, the Cohasset High Class of 2009 was encouraged to share its talent, compassion, skills and knowledge to make the world a better place.

A common thread between the speakers at Saturday's graduation ceremony was to not be paralyzed by the changing world, but rather to stay true to themselves and challenge the status quo.

"We have the responsibility to go into the world and address (the) issues, but just because we are graduating does not mean we are expected to be someone else," said August Oddleifson, class valedictorian.

High School Principal Joel Antolini praised the class for its "strong sense of character" and "the respectful way (they) challenge the world they live in."



The 97 graduates, wearing the traditional blue and white caps and gowns, were cheered on as they received their diplomas by their parents, siblings, grandparents and friends who came armed with camcorders, cameras and proud smiles.

The crowd was not a quiet one—every graduate got a rousing round of applause, some got additional hoots and hollers, and a few received the unmistakable sound of air horn.

Class President Anna Roberts, the first student speaker, reminisced about the many good times of senior year including spirit week, homecoming, pep rallies and the prom, noting, "We have made the most of our last time together."

Influenced by English teacher Jason McCabe and his previous work with the impoverished in Bulgaria, she quoted the advice he gave his journalism class on its last day.

Selectmen schedule pit bull hearing

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The hearing is scheduled for Monday, June 22, with a tentative time of 8 p.m.

In a brief discussion Monday night, Selectmen decided to gather more information about Tyson — a pit bull currently in the custody of the animal control officer — before determining its fate.

Selectmen requested a behavioral evaluation of the dog and a report on the suitability of the dog's home and containment.

Town Manager Bill Griffin previously requested those items from the dog's owners following a preliminary hearing on the concerns surrounding the pit bull.

The pit bull, which lived with the Chase family at 17 Highland Court, has been the cause of growing concern from the neighborhood and the animal control officer.

The situation escalated the weekend following the preliminary hearing when the dog bit a young girl playing at the Chase's home. Following a human bite, under state statute a dog must be quarantined for a 10-day period. Amyra O'Connell Chase, the property owner where the dog resides, signed authorization to have the dog humanely euthanized.

However, whether O'Connell Chase is the legal owner of the dog came into question the next day. Eighteen-year-old Logan Chase, O'Connell Chase's son, purchased the dog and considers himself the owner.

The dog remains in a secure location according to Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy.

Selectmen were deciding whether to hold the hearing this coming Monday, June 15 or the following week,

Single car accident leads to drug arrest

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A single car accident ended with an arrest for drug possession. Shortly before 11a.m. on Wednesday morning police responded to a 2009 Mitsubishi Galant that reportedly went off the road near the Tedeschi Plaza on Route 3A. There were no injuries. The driver's daughter, a 23-month-old girl, was in the backseat.

While officers were preparing to tow the vehicle, it was discovered there were drugs thought to be heroin in the car, some prescription medication with no prescription and some needles were found in the vehicle.

The driver of the car, a 33-year-old female from Scituate, was arrested on four charges: possession with Class A (heroin), possession of a Class B (prescription medication), possession of a Class C (prescription medication) and reckless operation of a motor vehicle.

The driver's daughter was turned over to a family relative and the Department of Social Services was contacted.

Dirt in the road

A landscaping company on Reservoir Road crowded the street with a mound of dirt and trucks prompting a resident to call the police. The resident said the obstruction made the road difficult to pass. An officer responded and spoke to the foreman on the scene. The landscaping company cooperated and the dirt and vehicles were moved.

There are no special regulations governing landscaping vehicles, but Lt. Quigley said most of the complaints the police department receives are from trucks parked on narrow roads. Like all parked cars, landscaping vehicles should not block traffic.

Harassing phone calls

A resident reported receiving harassing phone calls on two separate occasions. An officer took a report and gave the caller information for Verizon Security, a special number to deal with this type of situation.

In order for Verizon Security to begin monitoring a client's calls a police report needs to be written and the client has to be willing to go to court.

"You can't do it just because you are curious," said Quigley.

The phone company begins monitoring the calls until one of the harassing calls comes in. Once the number is tracked, the information is passed on to the police. Quigley said the system works even for restricted or blocked lines.

Minor accident

A minor accident occurred at the intersection of Route 3A, Pond Street and Stop & Shop. A 2003 Saab and 2005 Honda Pilot were involved and damage was under $1,000. The police department only investigates accidents with more than $1,000 in damage or if someone is hurt.

Suspicious vehicle

An officer on patrol around 12:30 a.m. Wednesday saw a male going through a 2007 Chevy pick-up in the Town Hall parking lot. Thinking there could be a breaking and entering situation, he approached the vehicle. It turned out the person was the owner of the car's son.

Fraudulent check

Someone attempted to cash a fraudulent check of almost $3,000 drawn against a local lumber company. The bank did some checking and determined the check was not legitimate. There was no loss of money and the issue has been referred to detectives.

Solicitors

An officer on patrol noticed a vanload of solicitors being dropped off in the village parking lot. The officer informed them of the town's solicitor bylaw, which requires certain solicitors to register with the police.

The officer took down the lead person's name, who was from Michigan City, Indiana. The group left the area without incident.

Erratic operation

A caller reported a vehicle all over the road on Route 3A near the Scituate line. A Scituate Police cruiser ended up behind the 2001 Chrysler CV, observed its operation and requested permission to pull the car over. The 18-year-old driver told the officer she was distracted from the road and was given a verbal warning.

Flashing red

Several calls came in last Thursday concerning the Forest Ave./North Main Street/Lower King Street set of traffic lights flashing red. The MBTA came out, but said it wasn't its problem since the lights had been turned over to the town. The Department of Public Works, which oversees the town's traffic lights, was able to contact someone to come down and reset the lights.

Uncovered load

A police cruiser ended up behind a 2005 Ford dump truck with an uncovered load – and ended up getting dirt and debris on the windshield. The officer pulled over the truck and the driver, a 35-year-old Weymouth man, did not have a license. He was summonsed on charges of having a load unsecured/uncovered and unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle.

'Gunshots'

Early last Friday night, several callers reported hearing what sounded like 10 "gunshots." Police heard the noise as well and believe it was fireworks.

"The trouble is at that time of night noise travels so far it was hard to determine where the noise was coming from," said Quigley.

Jerusalem Road detour

After finishing up the Little Harbor water and sewer work for the week, police said they felt the steel plates in the road could not support two-way traffic. For the weekend, police made the ocean portion of Jerusalem Road one way heading from West Corner to Sandy Beach.

Traffic heading northbound from Sandy Beach toward West Corner was detoured toward North Main Street at the intersection of Jerusalem Road and Atlantic Ave.

A reverse 9-1-1 call went out to alert drivers of the detour. Police details and road signs were deployed to assist driver. The detour lasted through early this week.

Two carts of groceries

On Saturday afternoon, a female shopper at Stop & Shop attempted to walk out of the supermarket with two carriages full of products, but was stopped by a store manager. The products in the two carriages were worth a total of $446 in groceries, mostly meats. Detectives are reviewing the video to see if the woman can be identified.

Sixteen-year-old cyclist hit by car

On Monday, June 8, at about 4:55 p.m., the Cohasset Police Department's emergency dispatch center received 9-1-1 calls reporting that a young male on a bicycle was hit by a car at the intersection of Jerusalem Road and Forest Avenue.

When officers arrived they found a 16-year-old Cohasset boy lying on the ground. Witness stated the boy was traveling North on Jerusalem Road on his bicycle when he failed to stop at a stop sign and was hit by a (63) year-old Hull female operating a 2004 Subaru Legacy west on Forest Avenue.

The boy was treated at the scene for injuries by members of the Cohasset Fire Department. He was transported to South Shore Hospital via ambulance.

Based upon witness statements at the scene, the driver of the car was found to have been operating her vehicle properly. The boy, who was not wearing a helmet, did not stop for the stop sign as is required by law. There were no citations issued and the boy was released from South Shore Hospital late last night.

Cohasset Police Lieutenant William Quigley stated that, "We are happy that the boy was not injured. It's very important that all bicyclists wear a helmet and obey the traffic laws. This could have easily ended in tragedy."

Sign up for police e-mail alert

Cohasset Police have launched an e-mail alert system, dubbed EMAS, in order to keep the public better informed through "alerts" about housebreaks, other potential crimes and general information.

It is similar to the EMAS system used successfully for several years by Hingham Police.

Police are inviting all residents who have access to email to sign up for EMAS.

You can sign up by visiting the Cohasset Police Department Web site: www.cohassetpolice.com and click on the e-mail newsletter prompt at the bottom of the homepage.

Police say when the town is subjected to criminal activity, the faster they get the word out, the better the chance the public will be of assistance.

They promise not to share your e-mail address with others.

Here is some information about what you may receive:

• Alerts: Information about current criminal activity with enough appropriate detail to help develop leads. For example, someone attempts to abduct a child. Police may disseminate information as to general location, any vehicles they may be looking for, or description of the suspects.

• Follow-ups: Follow up information, when appropriate, on the disposition of incidents reported earlier. For example, information on any arrests or other new appropriate details.

• Messages: Occasional information on meetings, events or classes related to community safety.

Chief James Hussey said the EMAS system is another tool for the police department to improve communication with our residents.

Increase of parking fine at Sandy Beach floated

If you don't have a sticker to park at Sandy Beach a visit may cost you more this summer.

Sandy Beach Association president Robin Lawrence, who annually comes before the Board of Selectmen to discuss the upcoming beach season, requested the town consider doubling the fine from $50 to $100 for non-stickered cars.

"Fifty dollars is not a high price to pay if you have four, five or six people in a car," said Lawrence.

While Sandy Beach is privately owned and maintained by the Sandy Beach Association, the adjacent parking lot is owned and maintained by the Town. Police patrols routinely monitor the parking lot during the summer months to ensure all cars parked there have the town sticker.

Lawrence also suggested the Chief of Police give the beach manager the authorization to monitor the parking lot and write tickets. He said this would allow the town to keep a closer eye on the parking lot and could possibly increase revenue.

Town Manager Bill Griffin and the Board of Selectmen said they would like to get Police Chief James Hussey's input on both proposals.

Selectmen chairman Paul Carlson said one of the frustrations he hears is the inability to get weeklong permits for visitors for when family comes in over the summer. Lawrence said one of the requests he often hears is for nanny stickers.

Griffin said both ideas were possibilities but administration issues and protecting resident beach access need to be considered.

Bellevue Cadillac's lead singer, Doug "The Professor" Bell of Hull, entertains guests during the Cohasset Education Foundation annual benefit under a large tent adjacent to the South Shore Music Circus.

Tent Event a huge success

There was an extraordinary show of community support on Saturday, May 30 as more than 330 came out to support the Cohasset Education Foundation and its third annual spring benefit, the Tent Event. The enthusiasm and generosity of the community enabled the CEF to net approximately $75,000 – a remarkable achievement by any standard.

Funds raised during this event will be directly translated into programs that enhance and enrich the educational experience for students in Cohasset. Specifically, funds raised from The Tent Event will go toward the development of a new language lab at the Middle/High School and toward building an endowment for the long-term health of the schools and the town.

For more information about the CEF or to become a volunteer, visit the CEF Web site at www.cohasseteducation.org.

Clock gets makeover with help from Cohasset Jewelers

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Science has yet to decipher how to go back in time, but for one local resident an heirloom clock does just that.

Every time Archie Rasmussen looks at his 1910 Chelsea mantel clock on his desk, he drifts back to the past.

The Chelsea Clock has sat on the handcrafted desk of his grandfather, his father and now his.

With the help of Cohasset Jewelers, for the past three months the clock has undergone a complete restoration at the Chelsea Clock Company based in Chelsea, Mass. It recently returned from the factory in an entirely different state than when it left.

"It was filthy…it had some patina (on the brass) and also a lot of dirt," Rasmussen said. A former Cohasset resident, who still owns property in town, Rasmussen, 67, currently lives in Scituate. Although it was not entirely sure of when it was last cleaned he said it had been at least more than a decade.

Mark Cirone, owner of Cohasset Jewelers, said the hefty brass clock was completely refurbished to company specs. It took roughly three months to complete the restoration.

"Any part they didn't have on hand, they re-made," said Cirone, who carries the modern line of Chelsea Clocks. "Chelsea is really the last great American clockmaker."

Looking at the restored clock up close, Rasmussen noted the shine in the brass, "it has lost its shine before."

When Rasmussen decided to get the clock refurbished "within two seconds" knew the right place to take it. He has been a customer of Cirone's and Cohasset Jewelers for many years, "it's a very special place in my heart."

Chelsea was able to tell Cirone the exact date the clock originally left the factory—Feb. 19, 1910. The clock was made for and purchased at the Boston jewelers, Smith, Patterson Co. The Smith, Patterson name appears on the face of the clock; the Chelsea company name is engraved into the machinery in the back of clock.

For Rasmussen, the refurbished clock is representative of a lesson well taught by his grandfather and father.

"Both my grandfather and father taught me to appreciate well made things and how to make well made things," said Rasmussen. His grandfather, a native of Denmark, was an accomplished cabinetmaker.

Describing himself as a very "particular" person, Rasmussen is attracted to handcrafted items whenever possible. To help in his work as a performing composer, Rasmussen has commissioned the creation of handmade guitars by a North Carolina-based craftsman.

"I'd rather have one good thing than a bunch of lousy things," Rasmussen said. He praised the history and reputation of Chelsea Clocks.

"They are incomparable in doing that type of time piece," said Rasmussen. Chelsea Clocks, which got its start in 1897, can be found in the White House and on US Naval ships. Chelsea Clocks have been given by US Presidents to international dignitaries, most recently President Barack Obama selected the "Dartmouth" clock model to gift dignitaries while abroad, according to the Chelsea Clock Web site.

Rasmussen's clock is no longer one of the designs manufactured by Chelsea. The "Doric" is a traditional style and has been offered by Chelsea under several different names and sizes over the years.

Cirone estimates the clock is worth approximately $5,000, but Rasmussen intends to keep the clock in this family.

"There are a lot of memories associated with the clock," said Rasmussen.

Relay for Life kicks off

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

RELAY FOR LIFE

Hello Cohasset. I hope the sun comes out soon, we are all getting a bit too soggy with this weather. Make sure to come by the Relay For Life being held beginning at 3 p.m. today (Friday). This event is sponsored by the American Cancer Society and not only helps to raise money but also, to raise awareness, celebrate those who have won or continue to survive each day and, honor those who have lost their lives to this dreaded disease. It is the 25th birthday celebration of the Relay and this is an event designed for families and friends to come together and walk, talk, children can head into the children's tent and do some crafts and special activities and the popular, "Taste of The Relay" will happen in the evening with so many local restaurants joining in like Atlantica, Jake's Seafood, Mullaney's Seafood, The Red Parrot and many more. Bring the whole family and enjoy music, food, friends and also, support the Relay in many different ways.

WELCOME

Welcome to Eren Lawrence Tiryaki, who was born on May 14. Eren is the son of Can and Juliana Tiryaki and little brother of Aydin Tiryaki. Celebrating Eren's arrival are his proud grandparents, Woody and JoAnne Chittick, of Cohasset, and Sabri and Nacide Tiryaki, of Istanbul, Turkey. The Tiryakis will be visiting Cohasset this week to meet Eren (and play with his big brother). Congratulations to the Tiryaki family!

SUMMER FUN

The Our World Childrens Global Discovery Museum in Cohasset is having so much fun with our Summertime Program. Each week is a new theme and you may choose the weeks, times and days for your child or children ages 2 and up. Music, drama, art, science and nature are all parts of our wonderful days. For more information, call 781-383-3198, go to the Web site at www.ourworldcgdm.org or send an e-mail to ourworldprograms@comcast.net.

Road closings for triathlon

The following temporary road closures are part of the overall traffic safety plan for the 2009 Cohasset Triathlon at Sandy Beach on Sunday morning, June 28. These closures are necessary to provide safety for race participants and spectators as well providing an orderly flow of vehicle traffic around the race route. Although residents impacted by these closures will be allowed access to and from their properties when necessary, everyone is encouraged to plan ahead and avoid using vehicles in the race area. Check the times and locations of closures to see how they may impact travel plans the morning of June 28th.

During road closures, the best route to take to go to Scituate would be Route 3A. Access 3A by way of Route 228, Hull Street, Forest Avenue/Lower King Street, where a police officer will be present to assist at 3A, Sohier Street and Pond Street. This is best because Border Street will close temporarily outbound toward Scituate and both North and South Main streets will only be open for one-way traffic from the Scituate line to the Hingham line during race time.

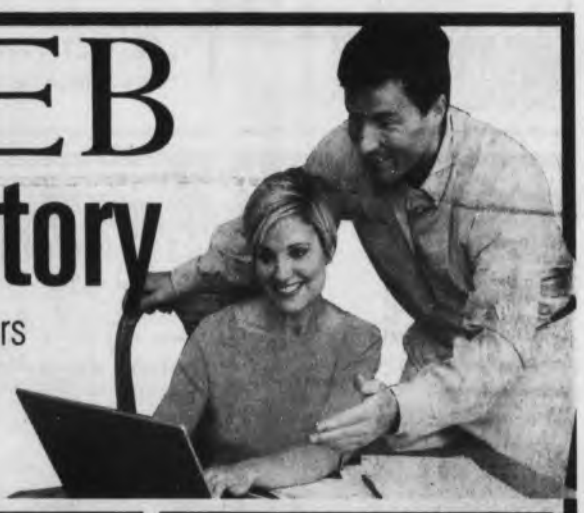
Those attending church services during race time should allow a little extra time. If traveling to St. Stephen's Church or Second Congregational Church from the north side of town, access to the common will be from Depot Court. Access to Depot Court is Ripley Road by way of Jerusalem Road/North Main Street or 3A/Sohier Street. Ripley Road can also be accessed from Pleasant Street. Those traveling from the south side of town will be able to use North and South Main streets. Those traveling to St. Anthony Church can take Summer Street from the harbor, Spring Street from Pond Street/Cushing Road or South Main Street from the Scituate line.

Residents can contact Cohasset Police Department at trafficquestions@cohasset-police.com for any assistance with travel plans.

No parking zones:

Cohasset Village – South Main Street, between Brook Street and Elm Street, even numbered side of the road, from 7 to 10 a.m.

Cohasset Common – North Main Street, between Depot Court and Highland Avenue, even numbered side of the road, from 7 to 10 a.m.



Road Closures:

Street Name	Range	Time Closed	Time Open*
Atlantic Avenue	Between Jerusalem Road and Beach Street	7:00am	11:00am
Atlantic Avenue	Between Beach Street and Howard Gleason Rd.	7:00am	11:00am
Beach Street	Between Highland Ave. and Atlantic Ave.	7:00am	11:00am

Cable vision needed

Officials begin local focus on local access

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Ready or not, beginning in July the Town of Cohasset will be in the television business.

How the town will operate the business was the question before Selectmen Monday night.

The model, supported by Town Counsel and the cable advisory committee, is to create a non-profit public access corporation governed by a Selectmen-appointed board of directors.

Because of reservations expressed from some of the selectmen that there was not enough of a business plan before them, they supported the formation of the corporation subject to an outline of the expected costs associated with the TV studio and associated equipment. Selectmen would need to re-visit the corporation later this summer and then possibly appoint the board of directors.

The way things have worked in regards to local cable access is changing with a new Comcast contract and competition from Verizon. Comcast will be closing the doors to the TV studio located on Route 53 in Norwell beginning in July.

In order to keep broadcasting public meetings and locally focused programming like "Our Town," the town needs its own equipment and studio. They will receive funding from Comcast through a franchise fee paid by its cable subscribers. Local programming is viewed on channels 10 and 22.

Under the new contract, which took effect April 15, Comcast will provide the town with a one-time payment of $25,000 to purchase necessary equipment to keep the two local access channels live. After that the town will receive quarterly payments from the cable company to support local cable access.

According to the Comcast contract, the franchise fee can be used for very specific items—salaries, operating and other expenses related to public educational and governmental access programming operations, equipment and/or facilities. The town is expected to receive about $100,000 a year to operate local cable television.

Town Counsel Rob Hillman of Deutsch Williams said the model of establishing a non-profit corporation to oversee the local cable access and television studio is prevalent in other communities. In the language of a draft operating agreement and bylaws, he said multiple levels of town oversight is built in.

The group would have a specific charter to ensure the money was spent appropriately and the town accountant would keep financial records.

Selectmen vice chair Karen Quigley had some reservations with establishing the corporation and giving them control over such a large amount of money.

"I still think we need to see the financial information first," said Quigley. She requested a business plan that laid out the type and amount of expected expenses—insurance, equipment, salaries.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said he supported the concept, but agreed there needed to be at least a pro forma understanding of the finances.

Pat Martin, chair of the cable advisory committee, said a business plan would be forthcoming in the coming months. She said the committee has been working to negotiate the contracts with the cable companies, identifying the needs of the community and defining the scope of what needs to be the future of local cable access. In the coming months they would be tackling the design of the programming and how the content would be provided.

Ultimately, the board unanimously supported Town Counsel going through the legal process of forming a corporation. When they re-visit the issue later this summer a rough business plan outline is expected.

CLARIFICATION

In last week's article "Pit bull problem escalates" the local dog daycare and kennel business All Four Paws was mentioned as the location where the pit bull, Tyson, was temporarily located.

All Four Paws occasionally takes strays for the surrounding town's animal control officers until its owner can pick them up. This type of dog is not mixed in with the daycare dog population and typically is not at the facility for longer than 24 to 48 hours. The pit bull was not a client of All Four Paws, said business owner Kim Hubert.

Also, in the same article, the pit bull Tyson was described as being a neutered male dog. Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy said this week he is not neutered.

Planning for the future

Budget group holds first meeting

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"My concept is we have to look at this in a very realistic way...things look grim for the state and locally because it's grim for people."
— Karen Quigley, selectman

If the first meeting was any indication, the newly formed budget planning group has plenty to discuss.

Coming off of a budget season where the town faced challenges in balancing the coming fiscal year and knowing it could be the first of many difficult budget years, town officials have formed this group to prepare.

Calling together representatives from key committees, the budget planning group intends to analyze the finances of the town for the near and distant future.

The first order of business is to draft of working models of the budgets based on different scenarios.

The budget models as described by school committee member Paul Schubert would be a "stress test for the town's budget."

Budget planning group chairman and Advisory Committee Chairman Sam Wakeman said the ultimate goal would be for the committee to evaluate the scenarios and look at what reduced funding would mean for town services.

The town's finance officers (Town Manager, finance director, superintendent of schools and school business director) will draw up three different scenarios over the next month.

The "best case scenario" would be for level services—what would the town need for funding to continue to provide the same amount of services in the coming years.

The "worst case scenario" is all state funding (Chapter 70 and lottery aid) is removed from the budget.

The middle-of-the-road option is a scenario where town services are level-funded, meaning the coming years are funded at the same level at fiscal 2010.

Each of the budget scenarios will be developed for the next five years beginning for Fiscal Year 2011, which begins July, 1, 2010.

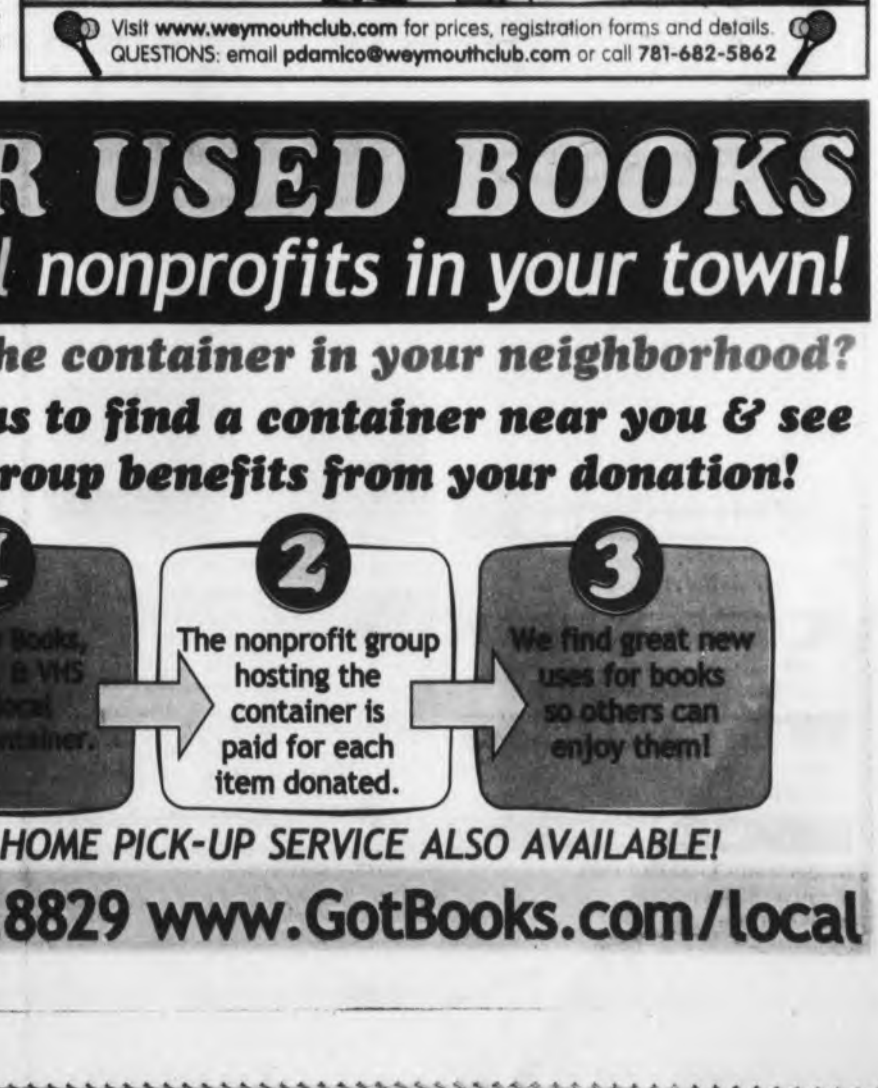
"I think it's very wise to see if going forward we can stand on our own two feet," said Selectman Karen Quigley. "My concept is we have to look at this in a very realistic way...things look grim for the state and locally because it's grim for people."

Quigley added the town has to be willing and prepared to make cuts if they are necessary and to actively seek creative money-saving solutions.

Advisory committee member Ed Lappen agreed, noting, "This is a shared pain we're all experiencing."

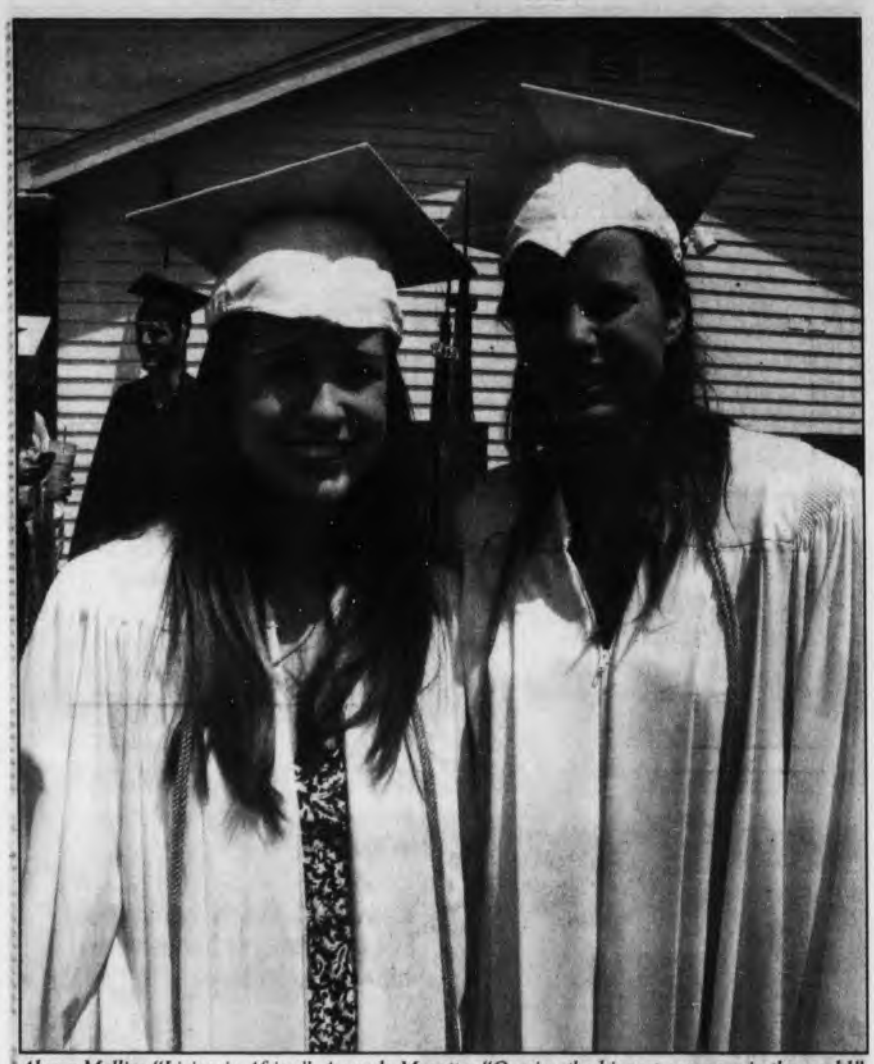
At several points during the meeting, it was brought up that the budget issues were not unique to either the town or the school or any specific department and needed to be looked at from a town-wide perspective.

Wakeman said through the process of identifying what would be cut if the hypothetical budget scenarios become reality, there could be a realization of what the town needs to do to maintain a certain level of service.



The committee briefly outlined the work it has ahead. In addition to looking at ways to cut expenditures, the committee wants to look at ways it can increase revenues through fees or specific taxes on hotels or—if the state authorizes it—additional meals tax for municipalities.

The budget planning group has representatives from boards already deeply involved in the budget process.



Two members from each of the following committees would participate on the committee: Selectmen (Paul Carlson and Karen Quigley), advisory committee (Sam Wakeman and Ed Lappen), school committee (Alfred Slanetz and Paul Schubert) and capital budget committee (Steve Gaumer and Peter DeCaprio).

The budget planning group will meet again to review the three budget scenarios on Tuesday, July 21.

Cohasset ranked sixth public school in Mass.

This past week Newsweek magazine revealed their list of top 1,500 public schools in the US. Cohasset High was ranked the sixth public high school in Massachusetts.

Cohasset High was ranked 338th in the nation. In 2008, Cohasset was ranked 1029 on the same list.

The top three public high schools in Massachusetts were charter schools, followed by Boston Latin, Weston and Cohasset.

According to Newsweek.com, public schools are ranked according to a ratio devised by Jay Mathews: the number of Advanced Placement, Intl. Baccalaureate and/or Cambridge tests taken by all students at a school in 2008 divided by the number of graduating seniors. All of the schools on the list have an index of at least 1.000; they are in the top 6 percent of public schools measured this way.

Housing Trust wants support

CPC was hesitant to hand over the money without knowing the specific project it would be going toward. The CPC has approximately $180,000 in its affordable housing account.

"I think we can work far more effectively if we have access to funds," said Hamilton, explaining that with funding, the Housing Trust can more quickly respond to opportunities in the real estate market or do preliminary site work. All Trust expenditures would have to be approved by both the Trust and selectmen.

The Affordable Housing Trust was established by a majority vote at the 2008 annual Town Meeting and was expected to assume many of the same duties — plus some new ones — performed by the housing partnership over the last few years.

The housing trust model was developed in a response to the state's Chapter 40B affordable housing law in order to be proactive in the housing market. It is designed to have funding at its disposal in order to actively seek projects and not be rigidly tied to the Town Meeting cycle.

According to the Housing Trust's bylaw, the funds in the trust can be derived from developers, gifts, grants, donations or other cash payment to the trust for the purpose of providing low- to moderate-income housing. Hamilton said other Massachusetts towns, including Acton, Bedford, Chatham, Lexington, Lincoln and Hingham, have followed this model of using CPC funding to support their housing trusts.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said the Housing Trust needs seed money to investigate affordable housing opportunities, but did not want projects to get too far down the line before coming before the town.

"If you have the money, you could get quite far into development without having considered the political aspects," said Dormitzer, adding this type of development tends to be controversial with the affected neighborhoods.

Hamilton said all the Housing Trust was asking for was flexibility to not be tied to a twice-a-year Town Meeting cycle, and would need to bring any expenditure before selectmen for approval. Any real estate transaction would have to go before Town Meeting and receive two-thirds majority approval.

There was consensus among selectmen to have a joint meeting between their board, the Housing Trust and the CPC. Since the next possible Town Meeting in which this issue could be discussed isn't until November, the meeting will likely occur in the late summer or early fall.

Cohasset reaches 10 percent threshold... for now

Hamilton said Monday night that Cohasset is now exactly at its Chapter 40B state-mandated 10 percent quota for affordable housing stock. Thanks to the Avalon apartment complex, which is scheduled to break ground this summer, 200 affordable housing units will be added to Cohasset's stock.

Under Chapter 40B, a town's zoning board of appeals can approve affordable housing developments under flexible rules if at least 25 percent of the units have long-term affordability restrictions. Towns under 10 percent threshold of their housing stock deemed as affordable by state standards are vulnerable to 40B projects.

For years, many have believed Avalon Bay's 200 rental apartment units would not count toward the town's 40B number until building permits were issued. Hamilton said towns affordable housing consultant Judy Barrett informed them this past weekend that the state Department of Housing and Community Development begins to count the units when the ZBA issues a project its comprehensive permit.

Cohasset currently has 76 units, or 2.8 percent, of affordable housing. The state encourages rental housing, and because all 200 Avalon units would be rentals, all units — affordable and market rate — are to be counted toward the town's affordable housing inventory.

According to Cohasset's Census, the year-round housing inventory in 2000 included 2,752 units. With Avalon's expected 200 apartment units and the 76 units of senior affordable housing at Harborview Apartments at 60 Elm St., Cohasset has exactly 10 percent.

Hamilton tempered the good news by noting the 10 percent number is a moving target. After the 2010 Census comes out, Cohasset will have a higher number of housing units and therefore need a higher number of affordable units to reach the Chapter 40B 10 percent requirement.

Open space public forum set for June 18

How should open space be further protected, preserved and managed in Cohasset? Should it be? Is new development occurring on ledge of concern? Would people like to see an indoor pool in the town? Does Cohasset provide open space and recreational opportunities that meet one's needs, now and in the future? Did everyone respond to the town wide survey, and what was the response?

The Town of Cohasset is currently updating the Open Space and Recreation Plan and help from the public is needed. Residents are encouraged to attend the first of two public forums at 6:30 p.m., on Thursday, June 18, in Bancroft Hall at the Lightkeepers House, 15 Lighthouse Lane, Cohasset.

Cohasset Open Space and Recreation Plan Committee has been hard at work with assistance from consultant Beals and Thomas Inc. to update the 2002-2006 Open Space and Recreation Plan. The updated Open Space and Recreation Plan will incorporate the community's ideas with an analysis of current trends to create a vision of open space and recreation and goals for the future.

An overall Open Space and Recreation Plan will be updated in compliance with the Massachusetts Executive Office of Environmental Affairs, Division of Conservation Services regulations. Once the plan is complete and approved by DCS, Cohasset will be eligible for specific types of grant funding the town cannot currently apply for because the 2002-2006 Open Space and Recreation Plan has expired.

The most important element in the Open Space and Recreation Plan Update process is public input. The updated Open Space and Recreation Plan will include a description of the town's natural resources, demographics and an inventory of recreation and open space facilities and properties in Cohasset. Additionally, the plan will include goals and action items for the next five years. Much of this information will come from community input. For more information, call Stacy Minihane at Beals and Thomas Inc. at 508-366-0560.

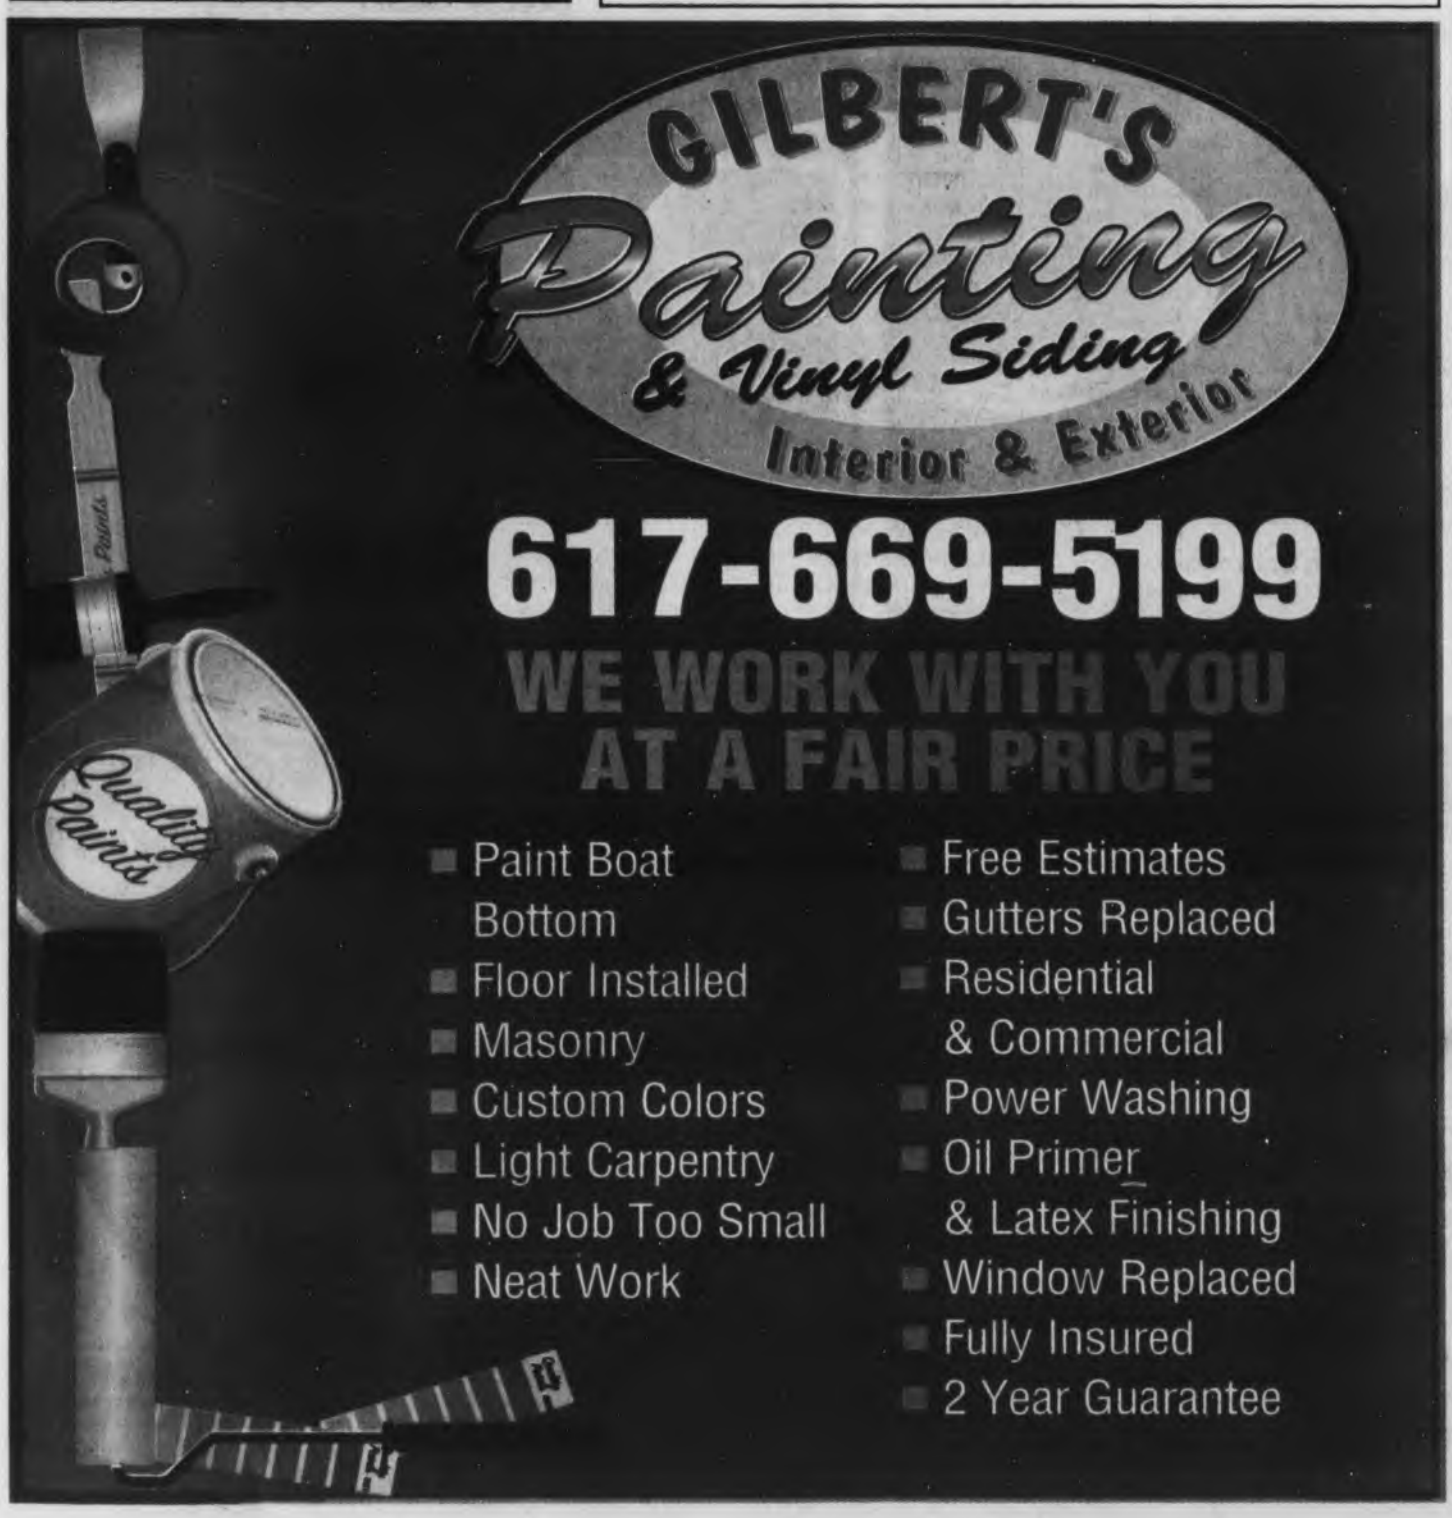
Monday, June 22.

Griffin said one of the experts he recommended evaluate the dog was unavailable this week.



"I think that's a reason to delay, I wouldn't want to preclude (the information)," said Selectman Karen Quigley.

Although there are other agenda items scheduled for Monday, June 22, the consensus of the Selectmen was to allow more time for the evaluations to be obtained.

The tentative time for the hearing is at 8 p.m.

Discover a Huge Recession-proof Income Opportunity Selling to the Government

Last year more than $47 billion in small-business contracts were not awarded because no one claimed them! Create a whole new career filling these contracts and getting paid BIG by the U.S. government...

FRED STEINBERG
FOUNDER, THE B2G INSTITUTE

The federal government will spend upwards of $1 trillion on contracts and awards in 2009 bolstered by President Obama's American Recovery and Investment Act.

As a business owner or someone looking for a recession-proof business concept, this is a truly colossal opportunity.

This year you can start to create sizeable income by filling unclaimed contracts for the U.S. government – even with no inventory, no office, no employees, and no experience.

If you've been looking for an opportunity to take control of your financial security in today's frightening economy and unemployment nightmare — this is it.

Whether you're already in business, or want to start one — you need to be selling to the government. It is the biggest customer in the world and the government is waiting to buy from you.

HERE'S THE HOW AND WHY...
More than 70,000 government contracts are awarded each day nationwide. They run the entire gamut, from office supplies to T-shirts, furniture, computers and services.

Even though most businesses are tightening their belts, the government is the only customer in town with its checkbook wide open.

According to The Wall Street Journal columnist Peggy Noonan,

"Government is our most reliable current and future growth industry."

WHAT MOST BUSINESS OWNERS DON'T KNOW COULD MAKE YOU RICH.
Oftentimes the government and the small businesses that need to fulfill contracts don't connect with each other.

Last year, for example, $47 billion could not be awarded because the small businesses they were allotted for never knew, or simply didn't know how to find them. Where were you? This is where opportunity exists for you to create substantial income.

This gold mine of opportunity could mean purchasing the goods to fulfill a contract at a discount, and then selling them to the U.S. government at a profit. The goods can be bought on credit and shipped directly from your supplier to your government customer. You don't even have to have a place to keep inventory. And the government is required by law to pay you within 30 days. So, in reality, you've risked nothing.

Listen, 2.5 million jobs were lost during 2008. If you're fearful about today's onslaught of unemployment; if you're looking for a way out of your current job; or if you're in business and want to sell your goods to the largest customer in the world — this is the quick-start opportunity you've been waiting for.

B2G WORKSHOP IS A $375 VALUE — YOURS FREE.
At my free B2G Institute Workshop, you'll discover how easy it can be to locate, bid on, and win contracts you can easily fill for a profit.

You'll also discover how to purchase the discounted goods, how to obtain credit, and how to ensure you get paid by the government within 30 days — GUARANTEED.

OPINION

POLL RESULTS

Does Cohasset need a pit bull bylaw?

Two weeks ago a pit bull named Tyson has been at the center of a series of events involving both police and the animal control officer. In light of the recent events, we asked our online reader if Cohasset officials should establish a bylaw regulating the ownership of potentially aggressive dog breeds, including pit bulls.

In less than a week's time the poll received our highest poll response to date. As of Thursday morning 253 visitors had voted and there was a clear top answer.

Here are the results:

No, pit bulls don't need extra regulation. 203 votes (80 percent).

Yes, ban them from town. 16 votes (6 percent).

Yes, there needs to be clear regulations and guidelines to ensure responsible ownership of potentially aggressive dogs. 15 votes (6 percent).

No, there isn't enough of a pit bull population or problems to warrant a bylaw. 14 votes (6 percent).

Other. 5 votes (2 percent).

The online poll will remain available on the homepage at www.wickedlocal.com/cohasset for another week. Cast your vote!

'Friends' vow to continue push for senior center

TO THE EDITOR:

Cohasset lost a dedicated advocate for our seniors with the untimely death of Council of Elder Affairs Director Linda Elworthy last month. In honor of Linda, The Friends of Cohasset Elders is committed to keeping her dreams alive. "The Friends," a non-profit group with a mission to raise and dispense funds in support of the Council, most recently collaborated with Ms. Elworthy, her staff and the Council Board of Directors on the pending proposal for a state-of-the art Senior Center. The present Center, wedged into closet-sized offices squeezed from a portion of the South Shore Community Center, exists to provide services for approximately 22 percent of Cohasset's population. Ms. Elworthy, who demonstrated her passion for the project by carrying the architect's rendering of the new Center to many town functions, aspired to see an expanded structure with adequate square footage to support present and future programs.

From its current cramped location, the Senior Center offers its clients outreach, medical transportation, educational opportunities, health clinics, financial counseling, thrice weekly lunches, as well as van service to grocery stores and retail outlets. In addition, the center schedules limited social activities for seniors. All of these programs require thousands of hours of volunteer coordination, funds and space

The Friends of Cohasset Elders are dedicated to ensuring that the 1,600-plus seniors in town and their families receive ongoing social and wellness support, and seek assistance from all of Cohasset in this undertaking. Please consider a donation to the Friends of Cohasset Elders, c/o Cohasset Senior Center, 3 North Main St., Cohasset, MA 02025.

Post Prom Party success a team effort

TO THE EDITOR:

The parents of the Class of 2009 would like to thank the following organizations that donated so generously and helped make our 2009 Post Prom Party a success:

Nobles Camera Shop, Thomas Dental Associates, Cohasset PSO, Law Offices of George Marlette, Pilgrim Bank, Buttonwood Books & Toys, Goodwin Graphics, Cohasset Collision Center, Good Sport, the Balance Studio, Del's Lemonade, Atlantic Bagel, Rosano Davis, Hassan Sign Co., South Shore Music Circus, Pat's Hairstyling, JJ's Dairy Hut, Coastal Nissan, Darilynn's, Henderson and Henderson, Dependable Cleaners, Cohasset Rotary Club, Stop & Shop and EK Design.

Your gracious generosity helped us give our children a celebration that was safe and memorable. Thank you for supporting our seniors!

'Time-out' needed on wind energy bylaw

TO THE EDITOR:

Cohasset residents need a wind energy bylaw that protects the welfare of the citizens and preserves the character and community of this great town while, at the same time, offers the opportunity for wind energy. The existing bylaw does not meet these objectives and needs to be strengthened and further defined. At the Special Town Meeting on June 25, residents have an opportunity to vote "yes" for a moratorium of the existing bylaw. This would allow for a temporary "time-out" period (six to 12 months) from further wind turbine proposals until the existing bylaw is amended to ensure it is an effective wind energy bylaw that will benefit and protect the Town of Cohasset and its residents.

It was clear during the recent meetings for the first application for the Graham Waste Site that further definitions and safeguards around wind turbine height, visual impact, noise, flicker, setbacks and financial benefits are needed.

- Should wind turbines be built in Cohasset that would be the tallest in all of New England, and be as tall as some of the largest skyscrapers in Boston?
- Should wind turbines be built so that if one were to fall (and they do, even just recently in New York) that they would fall into Hingham Lumber or any surrounding buildings or structures?
- Should wind turbines be built in Cohasset with no defined financial benefit to the town?
- Should wind turbines be built with one of the least restrictive setback requirements in the country relative to placement near residents' homes?
- Should wind farms (clusters of turbines grouped together) be allowed in Cohasset?

Under the existing bylaw, all of the above could happen! These are concerns, among others, that a temporary moratorium would allow the Town of Cohasset to address.

The current bylaw was a first attempt at a wind energy policy for the town. During the first wind turbine application process, we have learned much about the shortcomings of the current bylaw that require reassessment. It would be irresponsible and shortsighted not to want to strengthen the bylaw for the benefit and welfare of the town and residents. A temporary moratorium, a temporary "time-out," would allow this to happen and would allow for concerned citizens to help strengthen the bylaw.

Reports from across the country have shown that communities are in turmoil as turbines have gone up without proper bylaws in place, tensions in towns have risen and resident lawsuits have followed. This should not happen in Cohasset and we have the opportunity now to write an effective wind turbine bylaw to meet the current and future needs of the Town of Cohasset. Ultimately, when/if a wind turbine application does get approved, it will be a major project and presence in the town for 20-plus years. Let's take the necessary time now (6 to 12 months) to make sure we have a bylaw that is complete and comprehensive enough to define the standards that protect the interests and welfare of the town and residents.

Please vote yes in support of the moratorium on June 25.

Reasonable approach to wind bylaw amendment

TO THE EDITOR:

The call for the Special Town Meeting was prompted by what many in town view as an opportunity to improve the existing wind turbine bylaw based on the lessons learned from the review of the Cohasset Heights Wind Turbine project. Everyone can agree that we know a lot more about wind power today than when the bylaw was originally crafted. This is an opportunity to make the bylaw better so that we can assess objectively the impact of wind projects while protecting the interest of the town and its citizens, consistent with the original intent of introducing Green initiatives to town.

Proponents of change have deliberately NOT tried to cram through a hastily compiled set of changes. Instead, this moratorium provides some breathing room to improve the bylaw without the threat of developers trying to force projects on the town that are inconsistent with the town's objectives.

In conversations with the Selectmen, Advisory Committee, Planning Board, and AEC it became evident that there was concern that the warrant language as proposed might result in a permanent end to the bylaw rather than a temporary moratorium. As this was never the intent of the moratorium, and to address the concerns, a floor amendment will be proposed that will reinstitute the current bylaw after next year's town meeting if a revised bylaw isn't passed. This will ensure that this amendment is truly a temporary moratorium.

Proponents suggest that this provides a rational approach to amending the bylaw that respects the importance of a deliberative process, yet protects citizens' interests. The intention is to use the moratorium period to collaboratively improve the bylaw to be consistent with our enhanced understanding of the issues today and consistent with industry standards.

This feels like a reasonable compromise that we hope the various town leaders and citizens will embrace. These are long-term issues that will affect Cohasset for generations. We should do everything possible to get it right, and now is the time to pause so we can do just that.

A big thank you from the Tent Event Committee

TO THE EDITOR:

The Cohasset Education Foundation would like to send out a heartfelt thanks to everyone in the community for making our third annual spring benefit such a resounding success. With the weather absolutely perfect, over 330 people attended the CEF's "Tent Event" last Saturday, and their enthusiasm and good cheer was felt all night long. The CEF is extremely pleased to have netted approximately $75,000, which will be invested directly in Cohasset schools and will help build our endowment.

So many contributed to the success of evening. Thanks go to our planning committee, whose foresight allowed us to change our benefit venue to the upbeat and casual tent and whose creativity and hard work generated a fabulous auction this year. We are indebted to the South Shore Music Circus for allowing us to use their space, managing many of the evening's logistics and for creative problem solving throughout the planning process.

In addition, we are grateful for the fantastic corporate, individual and teacher donors who contributed to the wonderful array of fun and unusual auction items. We would also like to acknowledge our generous advertisers and sponsors whose support was crucial to our fundraising efforts. Finally, many, many thanks to the host of volunteers that tirelessly set up and cleaned up the tent and worked throughout the day and night to make the event run smoothly.

Please look for our ad in the Mariner this summer for a detailed list of CEF contributors and volunteers. In the meantime, we will all relish our fantastic community that comes together to support our kids, our town and our future. Thank you!

Why haven't the roads been paved?

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Little Harbor Project — The questions most often asked are about the condition of the main roads throughout the town, especially Main Street, Jerusalem Road and Atlantic Avenue. We must say that we agree. Unlike most of those who work on projects like this, we don't leave the town each evening. We drive these roads every day, just like you do. So we share your angst.

But, paving is a very complicated situation and is dependent of a series of influences that affect when paving can be done.

With that being said, exactly why haven't the roads been paved? In some cases there are reasons it just doesn't make sense to spend money doing the paving because digging is still likely to happen. For example, we know that National Grid is going to replace gas mains on Beach Street, parts of Jerusalem Road, Atlantic Avenue and Main Street. Paving these roads and then having National Grid dig up the brand new paving would not be a good thing. So we wait.

Testing of the new sewer lines is still underway in some of these roads. For example, if you drive North Main Street, you can see small dirt sections about 4 or 5 feet square. There are areas where leaks in the new pipe had to be fixed. Even though you may think a road looks like the construction is complete, it cannot be paved until all pressure testing is completed successfully and the new sewer line is proven to be leak-free.

One of the other bugaboos we deal with is trench settling. Experience has shown that regardless of how well trenches are backfilled and the filled material compacted, trenches will settle. They just do. Paving before settling has taken place only causes more funds to be spent to repair the settling. After about six months roads can usually be paved without any appreciable further settling. This waiting period is tough to endure, but well worth it in the final road quality.

The first order of business is to pave the roads that have no base paving at all. These "raw" roads are the absolute top priority. Second in priority are the roads that received their base coats last year. Beyond that, current paving needs will be addressed.

The first order of business is to pave the roads that have no base paving at all. These "raw" roads are the absolute top priority. Second in priority are the roads that received their base coats last year. Beyond that, current paving needs will be addressed.

Sometimes there are scheduling conflicts that affect when paving can be done. The section of North Main Street that includes the Common is logistically one of the most difficult from a scheduling standpoint. Since this area is the hub of Cohasset, it is the busiest. Events on the Common are typically underway many days during the spring, summer and fall seasons. For example, consideration must be given to the two nursery schools that operate on the Common during the school year. There are church services and the related special programs as well as Town Hall activities on weekends, as well as some days and evenings. And, of course special events like the various races, the Art Festival, and the Farmer's Market. We are currently in the process of trying to set paving for this area that offers the minimum disruption to all of these activities. This is clearly not an easy task.

When it comes to actually doing the paving we must schedule the work with the contractor. This week, for example, we had scheduled paving for this past Thursday. But, rain was projected for Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. So, paving scheduled for this week will have to be done next week. We want smooth roads just as much as anyone. But, paving must be done under the right conditions with a minimum of disruption. That's our goal and we're sticking to it.

Last weekend — You probably received a programmed call from the Cohasset Police Department mentioning that Jerusalem Road was reduced to one lane traffic. If you have driven by in the vicinity of 365 Jerusalem over the past several weeks LMH has been removing ledge and created a giant hole. This hole is to accommodate a Hydroguard that will clean up the storm water collected from the surrounding area before it is released to the ocean. The Hydroguard is about eight feet in diameter and fifteen feet tall. So, of necessity the hole had to be a bit larger than that. At the close of business last Friday, the hole was so large that steel plates could not be placed over the hole without the potential danger of collapsing the hole. Consequently, the traffic over the weekend had to be reduced to a single lane.

On Monday of this last week the Hydroguard was placed in the hole and the hole backfilled. So now, on a temporary basis, the work area can be plated over while a trench is dug between the Hydroguard and an adjacent manhole, a distance of about 15 feet. But, that's more of the good old Cohasset ledge that LMH needs to remove, so they will be there for a while longer. But, they should be close to finished with the storm sewer lines by the time you read this. In order for LMH to put the Hydroguard in place, they had to remove the water main. So, that has to be put back. Then, we will base pave or patch the area, check for settling and top coat at a later date. So you can see that one thing leads to another, to another, to another.

Argument for commuter boats

COMMENTARY

MARTHA A. R. BEWICK

As the MBTA is proposing drastic cuts in transit services to make up a $160 million budget deficit for FY 2010, members of the state legislature are exploring sales and/or gas tax increases to provide revenue to offset the need for such cuts. South Shore commuter boat riders who have enjoyed cost-effective, efficient and high-quality transit service might appreciate some arguments to submit to legislators and to the MBTA that illustrate and support the benefit of commuter boat services to the South Shore.

Such an argument could include the following points: the South Shore commuter boats are cost-effective and efficient; they contribute to the Massachusetts economy; there are federally designated funds to support capital investment in ferries; and, ferries are important partners in disaster scenarios.

Ferries serving Hingham carry approximately 2300 passengers each day, or 600,000 riders a year. Boston Harbor Cruises, the contractor to the MBTA, receives an annual subsidy of $1.9 million to operate this service, which covers both operating costs and capital amortization. This is equivalent to about $3.00 per passenger. In addition, Boston Harbor Cruises carries 400,000 passengers on the Inner Harbor Shuttles, and received $1 million to provide this service.

Before the advent of Greenbush commuter rail, the Hingham ferry service carried 4000 passengers a day. At one point prior to the commencement of rail, and before the institution of parking fees and increased fares, Rick Nolan, Managing Partner of Boston Harbor Cruises, noted that the subsidy was about $1 a day, and that the only thing preventing a subsidy-free service was the need for a larger parking lot in Hingham. At that point, about 2000 cars were parked in the Hingham and SeaChain lots.

Rather than eliminate ferry services today, it would be appropriate for the T and its Advisory Board to review the elements of the subsidies of the T commuter rail, rapid transit and ferry services to determine which provide quality transit at the least cost. A closer scrutiny will show that the ferry subsidy, though greater than it was, provides excellent service at far less cost than commuter rail. Such a review could also identify ways for the MBTA to save additional revenues.

Secondly, an argument can be made that the construction of ferries in Massachusetts is an important contributor to the economy. Most of the Commonwealth's high-speed ferries, including those serving Hingham, Hull and Quincy, have been manufactured at Gladding-Hearn Shipbuilding in Somerset, Mass., across the Taunton River from New Bedford. New Bedford has one of the highest unemployment rates in Massachusetts. With 150 full-time employees, Gladding Hearn purchases some $25 million in goods and services from 800 vendors in the region. The family firm builds pilot boats, police and fireboats, tugs, traditional ferries, and high-speed ferries in use across the US. Gladding-Hearn is also prepared to build environmentally compliant vessels that will meet EPA clean air guidelines before the required dates.

At the moment, the company is receiving inquiries from across the country because of the national stimulus package out of Washington DC. Gladding-Hearn has recently delivered new ferry vessels to New York City.

Third, there are funds available for ferry investment at the moment, which is stimulating these inquiries. The first is part of the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009, a $60 million Ferryboat Discretionary Program for ferries and ferry terminals. The City of Lynn is slated to receive $4 million for a new ferry terminal facility under this program. A bill to support an even larger program was filed in April by Senator Patty Murray of the State of Washington. Here, in the US Ferry System Investment Act (S.930), a program of $200 million is proposed. This includes $100 million for states meeting certain criteria, and another $100 million for other applicants. This program is three times the size of earlier ones. It also proposes the creation of a National Ferry Institute. These programs all offer great opportunities for the Commonwealth.

The Hingham Shipyard is a designated "intermodal connector" because it meets certain national transportation criteria. With this designation, it is eligible for a broad spectrum of transportation funds, including highway funds. Ferries were eligible for some $500 million in the last comprehensive national transportation bill. Some portion of a $7 million Hingham Ferry Terminal earmark gained by Representative Delahunt still remains to be spent. Why should the MBTA cut ferry service when there are substantial federal funds ready to be wisely invested in ferry terminals?

Finally, ferries have a significant role to play in the safety and security of our coastal region. Rick Nolan has noted that there are 45 ferries and tour vessels in the Harbor, with a capacity of 12,000 persons. His own company's fleet incorporates 20 vessels with a capacity of 5,000. The US Coast Guard has informally recognized these "floating assets" as available in case of the need to respond to disaster. The evacuation of New York City on 9/11 and the rescue of passengers on US Air Flight 1549 in the Hudson River illustrate the critical importance of these assets. The ferry fleet would also be available if there were a need for evacuation of some area of Boston Harbor or the coastal zone of the Commonwealth.

One half of the Commonwealth's population lives in its coastal cities and towns. Rather than cut the transportation routes that link cities and towns over the water, it would make more sense to explore how this population can be better served by expanded waterborne transportation.

If I were standing on the mountaintop making decisions that influence the Commonwealth's economic future, I would focus immediately on the marine transportation sector, which is so important to the state. Gladding-Hearn and its 150 employees and 800 suppliers, the naval architects, the ferries and their hundreds of employees…all of these are players in the greater picture. (Boston Harbor Cruises alone employs 250 people.) The Steamship Authority is another key player in this scene.

This isn't the time to cut a viable contributor to the Commonwealth's economy. Surely it's time instead to expand and promote the Commonwealth's ferry and maritime sector.

Mosquito control

HEALTH NOTES

S. N. BOBO

If you wish to know when spraying will occur near you, call the Board of Health at 781-383-4116 or the Mosquito Control number 508-747-8742 at any time day or night.

The Plymouth County Mosquito Control Project, an organization established under the state Mosquito Control Board, has asked the Board of Health to issue guidelines for spraying for mosquitoes and how to request such spraying for any particular area within a town. Purpose of the program officially called the adulticide program is to "control nuisance and/or disease carrying adult mosquitoes." Mosquitoes can carry the West Nile virus that causes serious illness in adults.

The pesticide to be used in spraying is called Anvil 10+10 ULV applied using ultra low volume sprayers at a rate of .62 ounces per acre.

The spraying program began May 26, and will continue through August. If you wish to know when spraying will occur near you, call the Board of Health at 781-383-4116 or the Mosquito Control number 508-747-8742 at any time day or night.

At the request of the commissioner of the Department of Food and Agriculture, upon the recommendation of the Bureau of Animal Health, DFA, mosquito control projects "shall conduct mosquito control activity on or adjacent to agricultural establishments in a member community of a Mosquito Control District in response to a threat of West Nile Virus to the agricultural establishment. Control activity may include, but not be limited to, the use of larvicide or adulticide."

In order to request spraying, it will be necessary to call mosquito control between Monday and Friday at 781-585-5450, fax 781-585-1276 between 8 a.m. and 3 p.m., or by mail at P.O. Box 72, Kingston, MA 02364.

The reason the state sprays for mosquitoes is to prevent the spread of two deadly diseases: Eastern Equine encephalitis and West Nile virus, both carried by mosquitoes. However, don't expect spraying by mosquito control programs to do very much about lessening the chances of infection by either virus! At best, they only destroy some existing mosquitoes and some larvae, the effect lasting no more than a few days. They also give incautious people a safe feeling so they neglect to use real preventative measures such as insect repellent and treatment of clothing.

Use insect repellent. Here are some suggestions: If you plan to go somewhere mosquitoes have been reported or are generally expected, keep repellent where it'll be used – on the patio, with your camping equipment, in your backpack – so you'll have it when you need it. It's worth that extra minute to go back and grab repellent, rather than risk getting West Nile fever and feeling bad for weeks or even getting a more serious disease.

Check out the available repellents. Many repellents, such as those containing low concentrations of DEET and those with picaridin, have no scent, or very little, except for mosquitoes who don't like it. Repellents do not kill mosquitoes. The active ingredients in repellents make the person unattractive for feeding. Repellents are effective only at short distances from the treated surface, so you may still see mosquitoes flying nearby. Repellants may need to be reapplied if you spend more than a few hours outdoors. Always follow the directions.

A little known but very useful trick: Treat clothing that you wear outdoors a lot, as well as gear such as tents, etc., with a repellent; Permethrin for example. Treatment lasts through several washings and can also help protect you from ticks and other blood-sucking bugs. Again, follow label instructions.

Once again, it's up to you to protect yourself from pests and insects: the state has an overall obligation to suppress known threats, but your health depends on your own actions and reactions to local adverse conditions. It's better to be on your toes than be caught flat-footed.

Senate chooses revenues over reforms

HEDLUND REPORT

ROBERT HEDLUND

It's unfortunate that so soon after I had expressed some hope that my colleagues in the Senate were about to pass a realistic and responsible state budget – one that balanced the books without new taxes and recognized the fiscal realities that confront us – they returned to their customary role of spending in excess.

Although the $27.35 billion Senate budget plan that passed on May 21 is about $650 million less than what the House approved late last month, the Senate budget features nearly $1 billion in new taxes including a 25 percent sales tax hike, new local option meal and hotel taxes, and a new sales tax on alcohol sold in package stores. The alcohol sales tax is in addition to the heavy excise tax already levied against beer, wine and spirits.

We have yet again squandered an opportunity to demonstrate true leadership and uphold our fiscal duties as responsible stewards of the people's money. This budget ignores the economic realities outside of the State House and embraces higher taxes and higher spending instead of reform and restraint.

My colleagues in the Senate didn't need to raise taxes: they chose to. They could have paid for all the $600 million in additional spending they restored to the budget simply by supporting the $1 billion package of reforms and cost saving measures that I and my Republican colleagues offered. But they chose a convenient time to suddenly switch from supporters of "reform before revenue" to supporters of "revenue before reform."

Here are some of the reforms the Senate rejected and how much they could have saved the taxpayers of the Commonwealth:

- A full repeal of the anti-privatization Pacheco Law ($150-$300 million)
- Repeal of the Hollywood tax credit program ($110 million)
- Elimination of the Lottery advertising account ($2 million)
- One-year wage and hiring freeze for all state agencies and departments ($140 million)
- Expediting the sale of surplus land ($25 million)
- Extending state pension liability by three years ($300 million)
- Eliminating prescription drug insurance mandate ($10 million)
- Repeal combined reporting requirement for corporate taxes ($50 million)

The Senate also rejected a Republican-sponsored plan that would have funded Quinn Bill obligations for current police officers, but prevented future hires from qualifying for the benefit.

In addition, the senate also ignored most of the reforms recommended by municipal officials — such as regionalization of services — and chose instead to focus on the revenue-centric proposals, such as allowing local officials to raise meals and hotel taxes without a vote of the town's residents.

As I said during budget debate, we should have named this legislation the New Hampshire Economic Stimulus Package, because it's going to be the retailers, package store owners, and restaurateurs of the Granite State that will benefit from this budget.

We have not been this anti-taxpayer since the late 1980s. In two months, people will likely be paying more taxes on retail purchases, more taxes on a meal at their local restaurant, more taxes on the vacation rental on Cape Cod, even more taxes on a six-pack of beer from the neighborhood package store. Simply put: this budget is unfair to taxpayers and could have a chilling effect on the state economy.

What's even more unfortunate is that none of this additional revenue was earmarked for local aid. Instead, the money was used to add millions in non-essential spending, such as a loan forgiveness program for doctors, a state office on sports and entertainment, and local tourism councils.

I had high hopes for the Senate budget when it first was released from the Committee on Ways & Means. It was responsible, it made tough yet necessary cuts, and it did not reach deeper into your pockets. However, the final version is just another example of why the Legislature has lost the public's trust and I am proud to have voted against it.

State Senator Robert Hedlund represents the eight-town Plymouth-Norfolk District that includes Hingham, Cohasset, Hull, Weymouth, Norwell, Scituate, Marshfield and Duxbury.

House budget protects programs, services

YOUR REP

GARRETT BRADLEY

Working with my colleagues, the House of Representatives, after a weeklong debate, recently passed the fiscal 2010 operating budget. The balanced budget was designed to close a $3.6 billion budget gap through a combination of policy reforms, program cuts and revenue enhancements. It addresses Massachusetts' fiscal challenges yet still protects core programs and services.

Due to the decline in state revenues as a result of the larger economic downturn, the House took dramatic steps to cut non-essential state programs, in the end cutting over $1.2 billion from the budget and eliminating dozens of line items. In seeking cost savings measures, the House of Representatives brought reform to sections of state government long considered sacred cows, saving millions of dollars this year and in the future.

By cutting spending in programs throughout the budget, we were able to balance the budget without using any funds from the state's stabilization account. This fund, which was built up in more favorable economic times, is used to augment state spending when unanticipated events occur. The state's rainy day account, which now contains only $1.3 billion, began the fiscal year at over $2.1 billion. Instead of further depleting state reserves, the House budget proposal relies on approximately $1.4 billion in federal funds, directed to the state as part of the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009. In resisting drawing down the reserve account, the state will be better prepared to supplement revenues when the federal stimulus money ends in fiscal 2012.

The budget comes after the House has passed unprecedented reforms in the areas of transportation, pension and ethics and campaign finance.

While struggling with a precipitous decline in tax receipts, the fiscal 2010 budget adopted by the House guarantees level funding of Chapter 70 state education aid to cities and towns in the year ahead. At almost $3.5 billion, state aid for education comprises over 14 percent of the state budget. In addition to Chapter 70 aid, the budget will direct over $1 billion in unrestricted government aid to municipalities to help pay for local services including police and fire. This was achieved by passing an amendment to raise the sales tax by 1.25 percent.

The increase to local aid will enable cities and towns to retain teachers, police officers and firefighters, mitigate the need for property tax increases, and provide basic city services. My vote will provide an extra $167,529 for the town of Cohasset beyond what was originally proposed by the House Ways and Means Committee. Additionally the House budget provides for $70,700 in one-time economic stimulus funding for Cohasset.

I am happy that, even with all the cuts we've had to make, education funding and local aid has, in large part, been spared.

These funds are available through the House's vote to pass a 1.25 percent increase in the sales tax. The vote retains the exemption on key household items, such as food, clothing and home heating oil, which have never been taxed. It also eliminates the need for burdensome taxes on gas, alcohol and sugar.

The budget also made sweeping reforms to the manner in which the state manages tax receipts from capital gains. Though the recession has decreased all tax revenue streams used to fund state services, capital gains receipts have been particularly constrained. After bottoming out in fiscal 2002, revenues from capital gains have continued to increase until reaching a peak of $2.335 billion to begin fiscal 2008. These monies were used to support many functions and expansions of state services over the past six years. With the economic downturn, however, receipts from capital gains have largely evaporated. In an effort to insulate the Commonwealth from these dramatic swings in tax receipts, the House adopted broad reforms to how the state uses capital gains taxes. The new plan would mandate that half of the yearly growth of capital gains receipts be deposited directly into the state's rainy day account, thereby quickly replenishing the state's reserve account and tempering the wildly inconsistent revenue stream.

In tough economic times government must focus on what is most important. I am happy that, even with all the cuts we've had to make, education funding and local aid has, in large part, been spared. Massachusetts' schools are national leaders and will be the foundation of our economic recovery and future prosperity.

The Senate last week passed its budget and a conference committee has formed with both House and Senate members who will debate the differences between the two budgets and release the final version to be voted on by the Legislature and sent to the Governor. The Governor will then sign the fiscal 2010 budget into law or veto certain sections and send it back to the Legislature, which may then vote to override those vetoes.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley represents the Third Plymouth District that includes Hingham, Cohasset, Hull and one precinct in Scituate.

Sandy Beach to open June 13

Sandy Beach will officially open for the summer on Saturday, June 13. Lifeguards will be on duty from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m., daily, through Labor Day weekend. Jennifer DiSabatino, a teacher from the middle and high school, will be the head lifeguard and beach manager again this summer. She will be in charge of scheduling and guard procedures for the staff of 13 summer lifeguards and 14 beach maintenance workers. She has 19 years of lifeguard experience and is certified in advanced ocean rescue and safety. A Lightning Meter has been added to the bathhouse this year to alert guards and beach-goers that lightning is in the area and that the beach needs to be closed. Remember, lifeguards are there to protect beachgoers and it is important that people follow their instructions.

The Sandy Beach Association is a group of eight volunteer residents from Cohasset. The Trustees have announced two recipients of the Sandy Beach Association Scholarship. These $500 scholarships are awarded to high school seniors who demonstrate a passion for marine biology and environmental studies. Recipients this year are Jean Thomae and Marcus Charles. These two CHS seniors participated in studies of enterococci counts in the Cohasset Waters. These tests measured the quality and health of the waters in Cohasset. Marcus will be attending Babson College in the fall and Jean will be attending the University of Delaware.

Thanks to the contribution of cans and hauling by Graham Waste Management, the Sandy Beach Association has announced a trash recycling program. Look for the recycling cans and properly dispose of all recyclables into the designated cans. It is very important that trash be properly separated from recyclables to ensure the continuation of this program.

All facilities stickers will be available for sale starting the week of June 15 at Town Hall. This all-facilities sticker gives residents access to the recycling center and the beach parking lot. As a reminder, stickers are required for all cars to park at Sandy Beach.

The third annual Cohasset Triathlon will be run through the town of Cohasset on June 28. This race will begin at 8 a.m. A portion of the beach parking lot will be closed at 2 p.m., on Saturday June 27. The entire parking lot will be closed until noon, on Sunday June 29. Lifeguards will be on duty on Saturday the 27th until 7 p.m. Lifeguards will not be on the beach until noon, on Sunday the 28th.

Sandy Beach Association asks that people respect the rules of the beach. Alcohol, fires, fishing, glass bottles or flotation devices are prohibited anywhere on the beach. Frisbees, hard balls, kites, skimmers and boogies boards are allowed in orange cone marked areas only. Climbing on rocks on either side of the beach is dangerous and prohibited.

Dogs are not permitted on the beach from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m., from mid-June through Labor Day. If people bring pets to the beach during off-hours, it is imperative that they pick up after the dog.

Residents should have received the Sandy Beach Association annual fundraising letter. This mailing is the only source of fundraising for the Sandy Beach Association. The fee for the parking sticker funds the parking lot only – it does not cover the costs of beach cleanup, staffing or beach operations. The beach can't operate as it does without the support of Cohasset residents. Donations can be sent to P.O. Box 285, Cohasset, MA 02025,

'Lock-Up' benefits MDA

Arresting officers from the Muscular Dystrophy Association are on the lookout for community leaders in the towns of Hull, Hingham and Cohasset who have been accused of having a "big heart." Once arrested and taken into custody by the MDA officers, this group of "Most Wanted" professionals will be serving time behind bars – "for good." These voluntary arrests will be made on June 17, when the "jailbirds" will be taken to a mock jail at the Red Parrot in Hull for the Lock-Up event. The prisoners will raise bail for their release to benefit MDA.

The Red Parrot will host the benefit event from10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at 1 Hull Shore Drive. The Red Parrot will provide complimentary bread and water, AKA a lunch, to participants as they serve their time in the cell block. Local businesses in the town will be teaming up to make a difference in the lives of individuals living in the local area that are affected by a neuromuscular disease. Jailbirds will be calling vendors, friends and family members to reach their bail to help send a child to MDA Summer Camp.

MDA is a voluntary health agency working to defeat neuromuscular diseases through worldwide research, services and professional and public health education. MDA maintains 230 clinics worldwide, including local area clinics, local support groups and a summer camp program for kids with muscle wasting diseases.

Anyone interested in "doing time" at the Lock-Up, would like to make a contribution to bail out a jailbird or to volunteer, can call the MDA office in Raynham at 508-821-1533.

ART FESTIVAL

DIANE KENNEDY

On Friday, June 19th, Cohasset Town Common will be abuzz with activities, sights, and sounds as the South Shore Art Center Arts Festival kicks-off. As with other traditions, the "highlights" are as different as the people I talk to. A friend begins her December holiday shopping on Friday afternoon and doesn't stop until she's finished on Sunday. Some people make a purchase of original art every year in the Main Exhibition Tent — and bring their families and friends along to advise. Since Festival is always on Father's Day weekend, many are finding a gift for dad: metal sculpture, photographs, handcrafted wood boxes or bird sculptures, and best of all, a drawing or painting made in the KidsTent, sponsored this year by LemonLime Aveda Salon and Yachting Dog.

Working at the Art Center and being forever focused on promoting art and artists, I am always surprised and often amused at the myriad other reasons people enjoy the Arts Festival. Having just put the Arts Festival on Facebook, I saw a note from someone I don't know who said they love the "hand-cut fries." A National Grid engineer whom I spoke to on the phone recently said "We come every year! My wife loves to shop, and I like the fried dough." The kids like the fudge and candy and the kettle corn. And, beginning in April, I start to field the endless question "Will the Greek food people be back?" Most definitely.

But, the most frequently heard "highlight" for old and young, male and female, is the music. There's something about the strains filling the early summer air. Friday features Cohasset's impressive Jazz Ensemble; Saturday morning, the Cohasset Carillon at St. Stephen's will be heralding a new day as Assistant Carillonneur Mary Kennedy offers a concert of patriotic and popular songs. Saturday also features performances by Ana Buckley and the Armstrong Brothers; two community bands: the Rusty Skippers and Satuit Band; and the bluegrass band The Sue Rocha Trio. Sunday will open up with former Hingham resident Nat Seelen's jazz group and closes with the annual performance of the South Shore Bay Band, sponsored by Hingham Institution for Savings. In between, the Arts Festival feature band is the widely popular The O'Reillys, offering rousing Irish tunes.

The Arts Festival opens at 2 p.m. Friday, June 19th and continues on Saturday and Sunday, June 20 and 21. For hours and additional information, visit www.ssac.org. Please plan to park at South Shore Music Circus and take advantage of the free trolley shuttle. Parking in Cohasset Village will be heavily restricted and there is no parking along the town common.

Sad news for seniors

SENIOR SCENE

LOUISE SMULLEN

It is with a heavy heart that I begin this column. We are saddened by the sudden loss of our much-loved director of Cohasset Elder Affairs. She was so full of energy and enthusiasm. She loved seeing us socialize together – the more, the merrier. Yes, Linda Elworthy will be sorely missed.

CEA is fortunate to have so many great volunteers. They drive the van, serve and clean up at the luncheons, manage the Coffee Café and more. They were thanked in April at a special luncheon just for them, held at the Lightkeeper's Cottage.

Representatives from the North River Home Agency provided the lunch on one of our Wednesday gatherings. They spoke about seniors living in their own homes with help.

Mark Perrone of Perrone Remodeling attended a Wednesday lunch. He spoke about the many ways in which homes can be made safer and the changes that can be made to make the daily tasks of living easier. Some homes are currently being built with these features in mind.

We were delighted to have two groups of students from Derby Academy entertain us with song. They sang several pieces, ending with a rousing rendition of Seasons of Love, from the musical "Rent."

Heather Kenney recently helped us plant an herb garden. Each participant was given a container to be decorated. They each filled their pot with soil and planted herb seeds. It will be nice to have fresh herbs to use in cooking. The same day lunch was generously provided by Carmela Drew, Fine Foods of Cohasset.

A few of us went on a day trip by bus and ferry to Block Island, sponsored by the Plymouth seniors. The weather was not very cooperative, being misty and very cold for May. However, we all had a good time. When we disembarked from the ferry we walked a short distance to the Atlantic Inn for lunch. Then we boarded buses for a tour of the island. We had an excellent guide. We learned the history of the place and a lot of interesting facts about it.

Before boarding the ferry for the return trip, we had an hour to browse the shops not far from the harbor. It was a good day.

Louise Smullen's column appears monthly in the Mariner.

LIBRARY CORNER

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road. For more information, call 781-383-1348.

Independent Movie Night – The library will show the independent film "Eldorado" at 6 p.m., on Thursday, June 18. Free admission and free refreshments provided courtesy of the Friends of the Library. Call the library for more information.

Library Book Group – Join others for coffee and discussion of "Half of a Yellow Sun" by Chimamanda Ngozi Adichie from 10 a.m. to noon, on Wednesday, June 24. All are welcome. Free.

Museum Passes Available – Pretty soon, kids will be out of school and they'll be looking for something to do. Consider reserving a museum pass from the library. It's easy to do. Just call the library or reserve one online at the library's Web site cohassetlibrary.org. There are plenty of area museums to visit, such as the Museum of Science, Museum of Fine Arts, Children's Museum, Mystic Aquarium and Plimoth Plantation.

'Dare to disturb the universe'

"Each of you sitting before me have so much opportunity in this world, so much potential to affect this world for the better, and that one day he hopes, we realize who we are and who we are called to help, and to use what you have to make other people's lives better," said Roberts.

She challenged her classmates to do just that, "to conquer the world through selfless love."

Salutatorian Jessie Fitts told her classmates not to measure out their lives with "coffee spoons," quoting T.S. Eliot's poem, "The Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock."

"Don't be afraid to live with warmth, genuineness, and joy. Live with cheerful abundance with excitement and passion in every heaping spoonful of your life," Fitts said.

She talked about the excitement they all felt on this day, excitement that could barely be contained.

"(I hope) we always see life the way we see it now, limitless in its possibilities and in its greatness," she said.

She told the class to 'dare to disturb the universe,' drawing from another line in the same poem.

Oddleifson got the crowd to laugh when he talked of the breakfast cereal he has eaten everyday for the last four years—Great Grains and Cheerios. He talked about when he and his classmates "thought third graders were huge."

Yet, it was his talk about how change doesn't have to be profound or political that was meant to inspire his classmates.

"We will continue to grow," he said. "Our thoughts and actions over the next decade will significantly influence who we will be for the rest of our lives. We will have the opportunity to preserve our strengths and change only that which we feel can be improved.

"We must remember that who we are and where we came from will never change. We will always be Cohasset's Class of 2009."

Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh told the graduates they come of age at a difficult time, but they should not be afraid of what's ahead or to take a risk.

"Take the changing situation seriously, but not yourself so seriously," Walsh said, ending with a hopeful statement, "You can lead us back to prosperity."

Principal Antolini gave a long list of the class's many achievements in the classroom, on the field, in the arts and in the community.

Over a third of the Class of 2009—35 students—were inducted into the National Honor Society. Twenty-nine graduates were recognized as John and Abigail Adams scholars. One senior was named a Henry David Thoreau scholar. They traveled the world bringing back with to the classroom a global perspective. Talented artists left their mark on the halls of Cohasset High and in the Village with colorful murals. The pep band was so talented the opposing team requested them to play.

He complemented the class for its strong sense of character where two-third of the class participated in volunteer and civic activities.

Eighty percent of the class participated in athletics and were integral in bringing four league titles to the school in this year alone.

He encouraged the class to continue to participate, investigate and question the world around them.

And after all the diplomas had been transferred as is his tradition, he gave the class their final order, "Class of 2009, you are dismissed!"

The graduates threw their caps into the air in celebration.

See pages 8,9 and 29-31 for more graduation coverage.

Moments after Kelly Naegelin tossed her eighth strikeout of the game to end the top of the seventh inning in a 0-0- tie, Cohasset coach Rob Spofford has some wisdom for his squad and the fans on the third base side.

"The best part is coming up," he said with confidence. "We're all set up."

Spofford's words were prophetic.

Cohasset scored the game-winner with one out in the seventh on a walk-off single by Naegelin.

Haley Wheelwright, who was running for Carly Salerno, came around from second, sparking a giant celebration, as Naegelin stroked a liner into the gap in center.

Salerno was on base after Nantucket shortstop Lindsay Fry overthrew first after making a nice backhand stop on a hard grounder by Salerno.

"We knew we could hit the ball," Spofford said. "We knew what we'd get from Kelly. She was really moving the ball around well, then she hit the game winner. What more could you ask."

The Cohasset girls tennis team ended the season with a 3-2 loss to Dover-Sherborn on Friday at the Weymouth Club in Weymouth.

The match had been planned for Hingham, but moved indoor due to rain.

Maddie Altholtz won at first singles and the doubles team of Jenny Magruder and Maggie McGoldrick also picked up a well-fought win over previously undefeated Olivia Finnegan and Brittany Dacierto stay undefeated as a team this season.

"This was a really good match, the best we've played," Magruder said. "I was a little nervous (toward the end). I had to win my serve. I did and I won. It was really exciting. It was a good way to finish up. It was the last time for me and Maggie playing together."

Cohasset coach Gigi Meehan was pleased, even in a loss.

"We left it all on the court today," Meehan said. "There were some great battles. I couldn't be any prouder. They played with a lot of heart."

Meehan was pleased with the season.

"This really was a successful season," she said. "The girls competed beautifully."

Cohasset wasn't making excuses.

"Danielle (Sookiasian) was really sick," Meehan said. "And she was out there playing as well as she could."

Sookiasian, who climbed from doubles all the way to second singles with challenge matches all season, said she was beat by a better player (Katie Patterson).

"The girl was good," she said. "I was outmatched. She could have been a No. 1 in our league. I just tried to stay out there as long as I could and give Maddie a little boost."

Sookiasian said she was happy with her team.

"It's great knowing we could come this far," she said. "We lost our two top players from last year. We did great."

While Altholtz wanted the team to win, she also wanted to make sure the

Here we have it, a few totally scattered and random thoughts about the spring, the tournament and anything else that comes to mind.

First up is a Poppin' Off Award, we'll name it later, to Hingham boys tennis coach Bob Johnson.

With all the crazy rain and cold we've had around here pretty much through the entire playoff season, Johnson had the idea to move tennis inside to the nearby Weymouth Club's indoor courts if the need arose.

Skippers knocked out in semis

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

The much anticipated boys lacrosse State Finals rematch between Cohasset and Scituate isn't in the cards.

A fired up Dover-Sherborn team made sure of that with a 10-9 barn-burner over the Skippers on Monday in Cohasset.

After erasing an early deficit, tying the game 4-4 with seven minutes in the third quarter, Cohasset played back-and-forth into the fourth quarter before D-S pulled away.

With 11:05 left to play, Will Wise scored to knot the score 6-6.

After that it was all Raiders.

Dover-Sherborn scored three straight goals to take a 9-6 lead before Dean Driscoll and Wise scored to make it 9-8 with 5:05 left.

Less than a minute later, P.J. Capponi scored for a 10-8 lead before Driscoll gave Cohasset a last-gasp with a score with 14.3 seconds left.

Here's some of the best of the best

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

OK, OK, you think you know the best of the best. Here is one golfer's selections. If you think you can do better, let us know and I'll reevaluate my list at the end of the season.

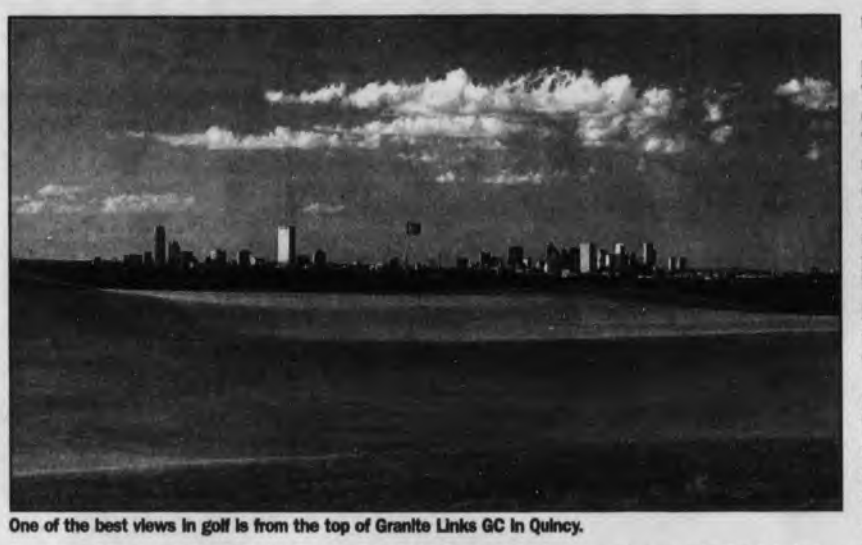
Here are some of my choices.

Best place to play your first round: Try Ridders Golf Course in Whitman. Best time to tee it up is on a late Sunday afternoon when the course is near empty.

Best place to purchase clubs: Pine Oaks in Easton. It's only a nine-hole course, but it (and its Internet company, 3.balls.com, sell more clubs than any pro shop in New England.

Friendliest Pro: Lyman Doane, head pro at River Bend in West Bridgewater, is one of the best greeters you will find at any golf course.

Most Unique Golf Course: Marion GC is nine holes and was designed at the turn of the century by George Thomas, who built some of the best courses in the world. But this is a throw back to the early days of the game. It is the most rudimentary form of a course you will play and it's fun.



Best Instructor: If you are a scratchgood player, Tom Cavicchi at the Harmon Club in Rockland. He has a national reputation. If you're just a hacker and want to change that, try Joe Keefe at South Shore Country Club in Hingham. He is a communicator.

Best place for women to play: One of the largest and most active women's groups in the area traditionally has been at Presidents Golf Course in Quincy.

Best place for youngsters to play: MGA Links at Mamantapett in Norton, nationally recognized, it offers the most comprehensive and affordable junior membership in New England. Where else can juniors under 18 join a club for $150 per year?

Best View: How can you not pick Quarry Hills in Quincy. It has a panoramic view of the Boston coastline that's second-to-none. Probably one of the top 10 views in the world from a golf course.

Most Unique Greens: Green Harbor Golf Club in Marshfield. It looks and feels like an old sofa. It's called Vesper Velvet, which was developed by the late Manny Francis, a Mozart of developing grass.

One of the best views in golf is from the top of Granite Links GC in Quincy.

Best Par-3: Sure, it is at a par-3 course, Heritage Hill in Lakeville, but nothing is more fun than negotiating the putting surface of their 16th green. It's shaped like a shamrock and you need the luck of the Irish to escape with a two-putt.

Best Finishing Hole: I enjoy the par-5 at Olde Scotland Links in Bridgewater. This 500-plus yarder can be reached in two shots, but there are wetlands that cross the fairway and the green has move rolls and dips than Nantasket Beach during a hurricane.

Best 19th hole: Our pick is Atlantic CC in Plymouth. There isn't a better place to watch a foursome come up the finish hole than sitting on the balcony, having a bite to eat on a summer afternoon.

Most intimidating drive: From the tee, the fifth hole on the Milton nine at Granite Links looks like there is no fairway. It's a short par-4 that demands a drive over wetlands. Blocks of granite protrude from the fairway. Put away your driver and keep your tee shot in play.

Best back-to-back-to-back holes: Call them the Unholy Trinity, Nos. 14-16 at the Jones Course at Pinehills in Plymouth. The 14th is a 220-yard par-3 with trouble everywhere, the 15th a demanding par-5 that requires a 200-yard drive to the fairway over a strand of pine trees and a green protected by a series of five bunkers. And No. 16, a picture perfect par-4 that makes you play away from the green on this sharp dogleg right.

Best Rub off the Green: Go to Halifax CC and get a massage. They have a Golfer's Massage, targeting muscles specific to golfers. This massage eases tension and increases flexibility using a combination of stretching, sports massage and deep tissue techniques. If you want more, there is the champions massage, the Halifax Signature massage or the Hot Stone Message. If you want, you play golf and give your better half a day at the Spa at this course.

Back on his game

It was good to see Kevin Johnson win on the Nationwide Tour last week.

Two decades ago the former Silver Lake High School golfer went from Can't Miss to Star-Crossed.

It began in the best-played match I ever witnessed.

It was in Jupiter, Fla., in 1987 against Jay Sigel, a veteran from Pennsylvania, who later played on the PGA Senior Tour. Johnson was 3-under on the front nine and was down-1. Johnson eventually lost.

Tee to Green

In '87 Johnson early won the US Public Links title, 10 & 9, in Cincinnati, but in '88 at Jackson Hole, Wyo., while defending his title, Johnson lost a heart breaker. Ralph Howe III birdied the 36th hole to keep the match alive and then Howe chipped in on the 37th hole for the victory.

In 1989, Johnson was tied with Phil Mickelson for the lead in the NCAA Championships in Edmonds, Okla. But after a controversial call – one that took two days for tournament officials to adjudicate – Johnson was disqualified for not signing his scorecard in a prompt fashion.

Never saw a golfer with such bad fortune.

State Am qualifying

Earning a berth in the July 13-21 State Amateur this year is a bonus because the championship is being held at The Country Club in Brookline.

Several local golfers qualified for the State Amateur last week at various sites and earned a spot in the championship.

Chris Fitzpatrick of Dedham Country Polo, Jeff Mucciarone of Walpole, and Robert Bradley of Ponkapoag qualified at George Wright GC in Boston.

At Cranberry Valley in Harwich, Brian Baker of LeBaron Hills, Bunt Whitelaw III of Duxbury YC, and Robert Monahan of Hatherly qualified.

While at Wollaston, Michael Willock of Plymouth shared medalist honors. Also qualifying were Bernie Lynch Jr. of Wollaston, John Geraci of Ponkapoag, Mike Gunderson of Marshfield and Steven Burak of Thorny Lea also earned a berth.

At Indian Pond in Kingston, Herb Aikens of Pinehills and Adam Mueller of Indian Pond were co-medalist with even par 72s. Plymouth's Paul Lacamera, Wollaston's James McDonough, Sharon's John Mirabile, the Harmon Club's Mark Dwyer, Halifax's David Pierce and North Hill's Andrew Diramio also earned a berth.

At Foxborough CC, Chris Congdon and Bill Vine of Foxborough and Brien Tolland of Sharon qualified.

Once again a diamond in the rough

By Paul Harber

PEMBROKE COUNTRY CLUB

Pembroke Country Club was once the jewel of the South Shore among public golf courses. No question, it was the best in the late 1970s and early 1980s. It was upscale before there was upscale. And then it ran into financial difficulties that had nothing to do with golf.

No question it is a championship layout, but because of ownership problems, the deteriorating conditions made it a place true golfers never wanted to visit.

Eventually, the course fell into bankruptcy and it was saved this spring by NHL legend Jeremy Roenick, who bankrolled the purchase of the club. The man behind the project who made it work is Derek Holt, a former caddiemaster at The Country Club in Brookline.

He hired a terrific staff. He brought in Nora Berard, who oversaw the revival at South Shore Country Club in Hingham. He also hired Shawn Hester, one of the finest golf instructors from prestigious Charles River Country Club.

But his most important hire was Joe Fouree as superintendent, who earned his stripes at The Country Club in Brookline and the Valley Club in Santa Barbara, Calif.

"What he has done here in a short time is simply amazing," said Berard. "A lot has been done already, but there is a lot more to be done over the next two years. But even to the untrained eye, just his cutting patterns of the fairways make this look so difficult to the long-time members."

In the short time since acquiring the club from the Norwood bank, they have taken down more than 200 trees. If you're a tree hugger, you might shed a tear, but if you're a golfer you will be pleased.

Because of the overgrowth of trees around putting greens, the lack of sunlight and the flow of air kill turf grass. If you don't think so, you should have monitored the 10th green at Pembroke over time. The trees around the green, not only prevented sunlight, they sucked all the nutrients from the earth, killing the green.

The new owners have restored the green and in the meantime used a temporary in front of the old green. Any day now they will abandon the temporary and use the old green.

"But you have to see the other greens," said Berard. "They are putting much better than they have in years."

She admits there is more work to accomplish before they are done. They want to restore the bunkers and bring in better sand. They have plans to rebuild all of the cart paths.

Even off the golf course you notice work to improve the facility. New roofs have been built on most buildings. The pro shop was gutted and rebuilt. The function halls are in the process of being restored.

Pembroke is an unkempt jewel. The Phil Wogan layout is masterful.

The string of the third, fourth and fifth holes are the toughest three holes you will play back-to-back-to-back.

The finishing holes on both nines are so much fun.

The ninth, a par-4 to an elevated green, has trouble hugging both sides of the fairway on your drive.

The 18th is a wonderful par-5, where birdie – and even eagle – is a real possibility.

It is good to see this course return to prominence again. It will be a must play on every public golfers' summer agenda.

loss, taking a perfect game into the fifth inning.

Salerno broke up the bid with a leadoff infield single in the fifth, but Cohasset couldn't capitalize.

Naegelin pitched her way out of trouble a couple of times, with help from her defense.

In the first inning, Guevara opened the game with an infield single. Sally Benson followed with a bunt single. Guevara tried to take third with the close play at first, but was thrown out.

Benson took second on the play, and stole third, but Naegelin ended the the inning inducing a popup and her first strikeout.

The Skippers threw out a second Nantucket runner at third in the fourth, then Naegelin cruised the rest of the way, allowing just one baserunner the rest of the way.

Excellent plays in the outfield on line drives helped the cause in the sixth.

"They were getting some hits and some bunts," Naegelin said. "They're a great hitting team. I was just trying to keep them off the bases."

Naegelin said her curve, drop, rise and screwball were working well.

Spofford said the screwball was a killer.

"I called some different pitches that I haven't called a lot," Spofford said. "She hit her spots. We made some very good defensive plays, a few backdoor plays that took runners off base."

Spofford knew the Whalers would be tough. The teams split a pair this season, the last one a 3-2 loss at Nantucket in the regular season finale.

Spofford gave Wheelright the start in that game, anticipating a playoff rematch.

At the time, with the top seed wrapped up, Spofford said he didn't want to give anything away should the teams meet in the tournament.

Wheelright pitched an excellent game there.

When it was over, Naegelin was all smiles.

"I'm shaking with happiness," she said, adding that she got a good pitch to hit. "We just kept playing and trying hard. I knew we could hit her. I just tried to stay calm. It (the pitch) looked right down the middle. I went for it."

Cohasset improved to 20-3 with the win and faced North champion St.Mary's (16-8) on Wednesday at Taunton High School in the State Semifinal. Cohasset lost a 4-3 heartbreaker in nine innings

No matter the outcome, this is a record-breaking season for the Skippers.

"This is the furthest either of our schools have gone," he said. "It's a historic day. This is the greatest softball team in school history."

When the Sectional title was won, Spofford looked back for a moment.

"Satisfaction is a good word," he said. "There's a real sense of accomplishment. Looking back on the game I'm really proud of the way the defense played. I knew we'd score, but it was the plays like Meredith Kelly making the decision to throw to third, Christine Coner and Brittany Dunn in the outfield. Kelly only had eight strikeouts. They were putting the ball in play and we were making the plays."

Spofford praised his coaching staff.

"My coaching staff, Paul Needham, Torin Sweeney did a great job," he said. "They're great with fundamentals and teaching the girls. There really is a sense of accomplishment here. It was truly a magical season."

Girls youth lacrosse recaps

The 7th grade girls had a unique opportunity on the night of Thursday June 4th to play Duxbury's 7th grade team under the lights at the Cohasset High School field and took full advantage of the experience. Cohasset had lost 9-7 to the 7th grade Duxbury team in the first week of the season and was fired up to not let that happen again. Duxbury came out determined to win the rematch and took a 3-1 lead early in the game, before Cohasset found it's stride and scored three straight goals to take a 4-3 lead into the half. Mackenzie Axelson and Kathryn Dunn each scored once and Mikayla McGrath scored twice to pace the offense in the first half.

Goalie Olivia Blackburn had her best game of the season, turning away eight shots and clearing the ball very well. Blackburn was supported by the defense of Emily Robbins, Shannon McGowan and Molly Fitzgerald who stifled a strong Duxbury attack and moved the ball quickly to the Cohasset offense. Cohasset expanded its lead to 6-3 in the second half on goals by Lexa Grasz and McGrath before Duxbury would come charging back to tie the game at 6. Center middie Victoria Bryan was a force in the middle all game long and came up with several huge draw controls to help turn the tide. Cohasset would put the game away on a three-goal run that started with McGowan coming up from her D position and passing to Dunn for a score. Dunn would then finish her hat trick by ripping a high bouncer into the top of the cage and Axelson iced the game with a cannon shot off a free position. Duxbury would score one more time as the clock ran out and the final score would be Cohasset on top 9-7.

Cohasset's U11 girls' lacrosse program finished an enthusiastic and successful season last weekend with two victories over Hingham. The Blue squad played away and won 3 - 0, a score closer than how the game was played. Danielle Picot opened us up and scored on an assist from Lili Astino who has really developed her speed. Clare Glavin, always around the ball, scored as assisted by Charlotte Morrison. Abby Thomas, who can play all over, scored assisted by Libby Mullaney. We had two additional goals that were called back but worth mentioning. Maggie O'Donnell scored on a run all the way from our defensive end, but a close off sides nullified the goal. Olivia Sanderson scored on a loop around behind the net that confused the goalie, but was called back when, on her follow through, her stick crossed over the crease line. Leanne Hayden, Kate Fitzpatrick and Olivia Coveney did a terrific job on helping us control ground balls. Kate McGowan showed how much she has improved on awareness and positioning. Margaret Michalowski and Kendall McConnaughey showed how well they have developed their fundamentals over the season. Lily Patsos was also a presence on the field.

Our Blue fourth graders were just awesome this season. Lili, Niki, Clare, Alex, Megan, Erin, Kaitlin, Katie, Charlotte, Libby, Kara, Danielle, Olivia, Minnie and Abby. Congratulations everyone on a wonderful and exciting season. Your coaches are immensely proud of the improvements each of you made on a personal level and it's reflected on how well our team performed this season. See you at our party Saturday.

The Cohasset girls U11 white team capped off their undefeated season on Sunday with a convincing 9-2 victory over visiting Hingham. The team was paced by two goals each by Vivian Littlejohn and Elle Hanson and outstanding play by Marina Longo, Margot Robbins, Kate McCarthy and Alison Beiche on the defensive side of the field. Cohasset jumped out to an early lead after some fancy stick work by Olivia Gomez and Marcella Flibotte led to assists on Littlejohn's first goal. Emma Humphrey, Kate Quigley, Lauren Cunning and Madeline Littlejohn continued to put pressure on Hingham with great ball movement and found Hansen for her first goal mid way through the first half that ended with Cohasset in the lead 4-1. The second half was more of the same as Elle Jackisch, Zoe Doherty and Abby McGrath each tallied a goal for the home team while Jenny Wolfe was outstanding in goal. Overall, it was a great day for the White team and was the end of a remarkable season. We wish the best of luck to the 4th graders moving on to the U13's next year and hope the 3rd graders can continue the hustle, teamwork and fun that made this year so great.

FROM SKIPPERS, PAGE 19

Cohasset had a number of chances late in the game, but couldn't get the rolls.

"That's a good team," Cohasset coach Stew Curran said, echoing comments he made earlier in the week. "They played a good game. They did a great job on Thomas Flibbotte. Early on they found ways to negate him at midfield."

Curran said nobody was happy with the outcome, but had praise for his kids.

"I'm very proud of the guys," he said. "And I'm really proud of my son (Vin Curran). He had an extra tough job. It isn't easy to play for your father.

While Cohasset loses nine seniors, a strong feeder program and a strong group of reurnees give the Skippers a bright future.

Goalie Jack Murphy, along with Flibbotte, Alex Kinnealey, Ian Quinlan, Wise and Driscoll are just some of the key players who will return.

Curran summed up the game in simple terms.

"They are to be commended," he said. "They were the better team today."

team was on the board.

"I really wanted to win it," she said of her match. "I felt I did my part. It was a tough match. She was really good. It was a good competition."

Most important to Altholtz and the team in general, was the sense of team this group had.

"It was tons of fun," she said. "I loved this season. There was just so much bonding. It was a great group."

Dover-Sherborn went on to beat Lynnfield 3-2 in the state semifinals, and blanked South Hadley 5-0 in the finals.

Cohasset girls Youth Lacrosse recaps

The U15 Blue team played their final game of the year at home against Norwell Gold and finished the season on a high note. Norwell took an early lead in the opening minutes but Cohasset would take control quickly and led most of the game by at least three goals. Katie McKenna (4 assists) played a very selfless game by distributing the ball to her teammates and was able to find Hope Kissick cutting to the cage twice for scores. Cassedy Gwynn also showed some great passing touch as she threw an alley oop pass to Lexa Grasz (2 goals) who slammed a quick stick goal into the net. Kissick would finish her hat trick in the first half and then Katherine Naughton scored her first career goal on a hard run down the middle of the field. Cailey Hart made three saves in her first ever turn in the cage.

Hart would continue her strong effort by notching her first career goal in the second half. Kissick stepped into the cage and made eight saves as well as picking off a couple of passes. Molly Fitzgerald led the defensive charge and helped ice the game by reaching high to intercept a Norwell pass and then raced up the field and fed Nicole Farren (2 goals) who ripped one past the keeper. Katie McCabe, Mackenzie Axelson (1g, 1a) and Maddie Curley rounded out the scoring and the Blue team would win 12-9.

U11 Blue hosted Norwell last weekend in our toughest matchup this season. Excitement was the day's theme in a match that saw even possession time between the teams. Both teams even had a goal called back for being off-sides. In the end, Norwell edged us out by one goal in a score of 5 - 4, breaking our undefeated streak. Erin McElhinney scored a goal off the rebound from her initial shot. Minnie Stavis netted on after slicing through the defense. Abby Thomas put one high to the off-stick side. And Clare Glavin blasted one home on a free position penalty shot. Niki Federle made several offensive transitions that gave us scoring opportunities. Olivia Coveney and Margaret Michalowski proved their toughness on ground balls. Kara Nelson and Libby Mullaney were active covering key players and positioning our offense. Leanne Hayden and Megan McElgunn were heads up in the midfield position at key moments and Katie McKeon and Maggie O'Donnell split duty for us on the field and in the net. We're really proud of the Blue

Inside out. . . or outside in

FROM INSIDE OUT, PAGE 19

Despite initial protests by Sharon, who thought there were mixed surfaces, when rain came down on Hingham's Division 2 South semifinal match with Sharon, they took it inside.

According to Johnson, who has been a member for years, when Sharon's coach found out there was no different surface, the games went on.

"The kids didn't want to wait until Monday," Johnson said. "Some of the kids have jobs, and if we pushed it off it would have been tough on everyone. I have to thank Paul D'Amico. He's the Director of Tennis. The Weymouth Club was very gracious letting us play there."

It got more interesting in the finals.

That match, against Duxbury, started in Norwell and finished in Weymouth, where Hingham wrapped up their title with a 5-0 win. Those guys are just so good.

Following in their footsteps, Cohasset Athletic Director Ron Ford came to the same conclusion, and the Lady Skippers' final against Dover-Sherborn moved to Weymouth.

If you're in Cohasset, try not to say those words – Dover Sherborn.

The Raiders just beat the girls tennis team in the finals and kept the lacrosse team from a trip to Harvard to meet Scituate Wednesday.

Scituate kept the title on the South Shore with a 7-6 win in overtime.

Back to the point though, after covering all kinds of sports in all kinds of weather, watching rain delays and schedule changes, it was great thinking to make those moves.

Cohasset also moved the lacrosse semifinal to Monday to beat the rain and had a backup plan to play in Scituate on the turf if the weather dictated.

On Saturday, it was fun to see players from so many places converge to watch a match.

I know a few Scituate players were there, and I think I saw a few Cohasset kids there too.

I have to say that the Hingham girls put on an entertaining show, and played their hearts out to get the win.

They also had candy.

Mmmmmmm candy.

While the Scituate girls didn't get by Medway, I just wanted to throw out a congratulations to the young ladies who played their hearts out all season long, and to coach Angela Bizzozero, who did a fantastic job in her first year as the team's coach.

Right before Cohasset's South Sectional championship game at Taunton High School, a thought came to mind.

It was lonely in there, but the question I had, more than who will win is … will there be a snack bar.

It may have been that I was hungry.

Could have been the fact that I haven't seen many venues with the food during the spring, or the memory of standing at a drink machine full of Gatorade and no change at the tennis match two days before.

Glad to say there was.

Sorry to say that the best action during the game came while I was walking back to my seat with burger and doggie in hand.

Lucky there's a good view from everywhere.

That was just a great game.

It was especially interesting to me because earlier the same day I had been talking about how cool it would be to be a pitcher who knocks in the only run in a 1-0 game.

I was thinking homer, but walk-off RBI single works just as nicely.

That's what Kelly Naegelin did for the Lady Skippers in the bottom of the seventh against Nantucket.

After watching the Cohasset girls play, I was so impressed with the way they fought off the pressure and got themselves out of trouble with great defense more than once.

Some papers will tell you that Cohasset is Naegelin's one-person show, and she deserves credit, obviously, but the team around her is outstanding.

Congratulations to the softball team.

Ladies, you played with class, talent and were a pleasure to watch.

You also made an impression on a little girl when you all signed her bat earlier in the season and gave her some hitting tips and big smiles all around.

CYBSA skills competition and family cookout

The CYBSA will hold its annual All-Star game and family cookout on Saturday, June 20 at the Barnes Field complex. Festivities will begin around 11 a.m. and continue throughout the afternoon/evening.

Look for more information as we get closer to the date.

We look forward to seeing you at this event to celebrate another successful baseball and softball season.

Cohasset firefighters to face Patriots in softball showdown

The Cohasset Firefighters Local 2804 is sponsoring a Patriots Celebrity Softball Game! The event will be held on Saturday, June 20th @ 1:00pm at Milliken Field.

This game will feature the Cohasset Firefighters All-Stars against the All Pro Patriots Celebrity Softball Team. The event is scheduled to include current and former New England Patriots.

Patriot Alumni scheduled to appear include Steve DeOssie, Max Lane, Tim Fox, Scott Zolak, and Tony Simmons. The current New England Patriot names were not available at press time.

The event will benefit the Local 2804's Scholarship Fund, fire prevention programs, M.D.A., and the general purposes of the Local 2804.

The players in attendance will be signing free autographs. Tickets are $10.00 each, with children under 12 free.

St. Martin shines as vacation destination

Jillian Fennimore
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

ST. MARTIN — Standing inside his airy beachfront home, hands tucked in his loose-fitting cargo pants and a warm wind blowing through his graying hair, local painter Antoine Chapon gestured to his postcard-worthy views when asked why he sailed from France to St. Martin and decided never to go back. He didn't need to use words.

Chapon isn't the only one drawn to beautiful St. Martin. Many visitors have made the Caribbean island their own personal place to escape.

The island draws a wide range of vacationers from the more adventurous and skin-baring night owls in search of a party, to laidback resort enthusiasts in need of a French food fix. But it's undoubtedly the views that really grab you, no matter what type of vacationer you are.

Located in the French West Indies and populated by roughly 73,000 residents, St. Martin is only 37 square miles, the smallest island in the world shared by two different sovereign nations - France and the Netherlands.

The Caribbean hotspot is home to 30 beaches, welcomes close to one million tourists each year, and has two main towns, Philipsburg and Marigot.

The island's history dates back more than a thousand years when the Arawaks Indians called the island "Soualiga," or land of salt, because of its abundance of salt ponds.

On Nov. 11, 1493, legend has it that Christopher Columbus, on his second voyage to the New World, anchored on the island and named the land after the Roman Catholic saint, Martin of Tours.

The island's name was later translated into two spellings, the French translation of Saint Martin, and the Dutch side known as Sint Maarten.

No matter how you spell it, each side of the island holds its own in terms of strong personality and endless activity. On the French side, the scene is more relaxed with lavish dining and luxurious accommodations, while the Dutch side is the place for water sports, marketplace shopping and tireless nightlife.

For those seeking an adrenaline rush, you don't have to go too far from the island's main airport, Princess Juliana International. Just stand on the road near the runway with other tourists getting photographed and gaining bragging rights as large jets off just a few feet above sunbathers on Maho Beach.

Take a hike to Pic Paradis, the highest point of the island, for a great view of St. Martin's posh resorts and blue waters on the French side.

For the adventurous, take a hike on the French side up to the highest point of the island, Pic Paradis at 1,360 feet, for a killer view if you're not afraid of heights. At Loterie Farm, strap into a harness and go ziplining above the treetops on wires for a little more challenging way to get a look at the island from above.

For the more relaxed explorer, charter a private boat trip with the island's Scoobidoo catamaran excursions (www.scoobidoo.com), offering scenic day trips to nearby Anguilla, Prickly Pear, St. Barths and Tintamarre.

Vacationers could also spend the day boating to Pinel Island, a charming section of the north end of St. Martin, where there is no electricity or access by car, but there is a large sand spit to wade in, water with friendly fish to snorkel with, and beach bars to grab a quick lunch.

Personally, I am easy to please on vacation with few essential staples: sandy beaches, plenty of booze, and being without a Blackberry. While in St. Martin, I found my affection for the island in between sips of champagne on a sunset catamaran cruise, sailing toward the island of Anguilla with views of lush hilltops, pastel beachside homes and aquamarine waters. Or maybe it was after overdosing on shellfish, Camembert cheese, and cocktails made with the island's indigenous guava berries while sticking my feet in the sand at Waikiki Beach restaurant (www.waikikibeachsxm.com) along the clothing-optional Orient Beach. The beach, which is often referred to as the "French Riviera of the Caribbean," is the perfect place for those who like to go topless or skinny skip (and those who like to gawk at those who do). Be sure to wear plenty of sunscreen.

Others have expressed that it's the island's reputation as the gourmet capital of the Caribbean that keeps them coming back for more.

Look no further than Grand Case as the place to satisfy your French gastronomy desires. The main road of the charming fishing village is dotted with rows of intimate French restaurants as well as waterfront BBQ shacks.

The quaint setting of Grand Case is perfect for a romantic night out. Many couples choose to dine at some of the best-known establishments including L'Escapade Restaurant (dinner entrees $24 to $30) for live lobsters and an extensive wine list, Le Pressoir, a restored Creole cottage with a husband and wife couple serving up fresh foie gras, escargot and filet of snapper (main courses $36 to $46), or Il Nettuno (www.ilnettuno.com; pasta and meat dishes from $17 to $28) to satisfy an Italian food craving.

On the French side, the town of Marigot is the place to score high-end designer clothes (all duty free).

The Dutch side of the island is a bit more modest in dress code - no nudity on the beaches. But its nightlife and shopping scene is undeniably fun. Known to some frequent visitors as the "wild west," the Dutch side is home to a handful of casinos, late-night piano bars, live music concerts and honky-tonk joints like Cheri's Cafe (www.cheriscafe.com), along with Bliss, the best and loudest nightclub on the island.

The Dutch side's main town, Philipsburg, is a hub for discount shopping, souvenir buying and tasting of local rums.

The mix of cultures on both sides of the island forms a perfect blend for visitors - whether for weeks, months, or for good. It's hard to find a reason to leave, and some people never do.

FOR MORE INFORMATION: Visit www.stmartin.com

At Waikiki Beach restaurant, Vacationers can dine on the freshest mahi mahi, langostinos, tuna tartar, and grilled shrimp while digging bare feet in the sands of Orient Beach.

The open waters of St. Martin is host to many boaters and mega-yacht marinas.

QUICK tips

Brush up on your French or Dutch if you want to impress the locals. The U.S. dollar is widely accepted.

IF YOU go

GETTING THERE: St. Martin is easily accessible. JetBlue (www.jetblue.com) has a new nonstop service from Boston on Saturdays. Fly there as well on Delta (www.delta.com), US Airways (www.usairways.com) or American Airlines (www.aa.com). Prices range from about $420 to $600 per person roundtrip. Travelers are required to carry a passport.

STAYING THERE: Opened in December, the impressive, $80 million new Radisson St. Martin Resort, Marina and Spa (www.radisson.com/stmaarten, 800-395-7046), located in Anse Marcel on the French side, is the largest hotel on the island, sprawling 18 acres. The hotel has 189 guestrooms and 63 suites, with rates from $310 per night (look for discounts online).

GETTING AROUND: St. Martin basically has one main road that winds around the entire island. At certain times, traffic can be brutal and drivers aren't the most courteous. Instead of paying for taxis, it's best to rent a car for your stay, and be sure to plan your routes ahead of time. Water taxis can also save time.

Let the countdowns begin

LIFE AT CHS

SEAN MACCARTHY

One column, 36 more columns to go (I think) and man o man you will be sure to enjoy them.

Speaking of countdowns…everyone who has normal brain functioning brain at CHS is counting down the days until school is over. For those of you who don't have a normal functioning brain, 5 MORE DAYS LEFT OF SCHOOL! Whether you are diligently studying for that last major stress provider (stress provider=test), or gathering up materials for that last major sleep depriver (sleep depriver=paper), or slacking because you have had enough just keep in mind; in a weeks time you can sleep in as long as you want, you can stay out as late as you want (barring a curfew because clearly mother knows best…), and you can eat whatever you want the way you like it. But enough about freedom and fun, I'm here to talk to you about the ever so fascinating life at CHS.

So this past Saturday, CHS graduation took place. You know what that means: The class of 2009 received their diplomas, everyone had their middle names revealed to the public (my personal favorite was "Dockery"), and everyone received heartwarming messages from the Senior Class President, Anna Roberts, The Saledictorian, Jessie Fitts, and the Valedictorian, August Oddleifson. Well done class of 2009, the best of luck to you wherever you go.

This past Monday, the CHS Lax-men, or "Lax Bros" as many like to call them, had their season come to an end in a thrilling 10-9 loss at the hands of Dover-Sherborn in the semi finals of the state tournament. It was a disappointing loss but the future looks a lot better as the minority of the starters were seniors. On a side note, supposedly, that game was the last CHS sporting event to be held on a grassy Alumni Field. Why? Because, hopefully, the grass is being torn up and replaced with some fresh new turf. That just heightens anticipation for next year's football season to an all time high.

Within the hallways of CHS, the new and improved student council had their first meetings together on Tuesday and Thursday. All new members vowed more will be done next year than what was done by the student council this past year. With that being said, it will be a memorable senior year for those that are seniors…o yeah and the underclassmen will have some fun too I guess...but not to much fun (you don't want to spoil yourselves before senior year). Ciao.

Sean MacCarthy is a student at CHS looking forward to not waking up at 6:30 a.m. every morning.

CHS Class of 1969 reunion planned

Cohasset High School Class of 1969 is hosting its 40th class reunion this year. The reunion will take place Saturday, Oct. 10, at Cohasset Lighthouse Keeper's Function Hall on Government Island on Cohasset Harbor.

The Reunion Committee needs help in locating the following missing classmates and friends:

Summer fun registration at Town Hall

Cohasset Recreation Center is at 41 Highland Ave. For more information or to sign up for activities, stop by the office, or visit www.cohassetrec.com or call 781-383-4109.

Summer Registration – Registrations at Cohasset Town Hall will take place for all programs including playground, Summer Xtreme, youth tennis and any program listed on the brochure Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 3 p.m., and Tuesdays, 5 to 7 p.m.

Summer Playground Program – The seven-week Playground Program is a day camp-like experience inclusive of sports, games, field trips, entertainment, arts and crafts, etc. It will take place June 22 through Aug. 7. Children ages 5 through 12 may register for the full day, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. program. Fees for the program are: Full day, $385, for the entire seven-week program. There is also a $50 per child activity fee. Checks should be made payable to Town of Cohasset. Registration may also be done online.

Youth Tennis Lessons – Cohasset Recreation Department will offer youth tennis lessons this summer for boys and girls ages 7 and older. This seven-week program will start Monday, June 22, or Tuesday, June 23, with one-hour lessons meeting twice per week on a Monday/Wednesday or Tuesday/Thursday schedule. Tennis lessons end the week of Aug. 3. Various levels of instruction are available. Cost of the program is $80 per participant. Register in person at the Recreation Office or online.

Summer Xtreme – Students entering grades six through nine will travel to field trip destinations around the region. With a $99 per week fee, Cohasset Recreation Department is bridging the gap many parents face each summer, the gap between the quality and affordability of summer programs. The program is filling fast and the falling programs still have openings.

What's in store this summer?

Week two: July 6 to 9, Codzilla boat ride and Boston Bowl and Billiards.

Week six: Aug. 3 to 6, Paw Sox and Fenway Park Tour/Tomb.

Week seven: Aug. 10 to 13, Water Wizz and laser tag.

The program will meet four days a week, Monday through Thursday, with field trips on Tuesdays and Thursdays. On Mondays and Wednesdays, the group of about 45 middle school students will participate in various sports, crafts, challenges, team builders and social activities. The program is supervised by counselors and directors with many years of experience working with children.

Girls Basketball Clinic – Cohasset High School. Girls varsity coach Jack Levangie will instruct a girl's basketball clinic Tuesday, July 14 to 17, from 9 a.m. to noon, for girls in grades four through eight. Fee is $99 and includes a T-shirt. Registration can be done online.

Yoga – Cohasset Town Hall. Hatha yoga classes include moving meditation with gentle stretching and strengthening postures with breathing exercises to decrease stress and increase flexibility. Cost is $8 drop-in. Meets Thursdays, at 9:30 a.m.

Sunday Afternoon Jam Sessions – Cohasset Recreation Center. Aspiring musicians can come down to the Recreation Center on Sundays, from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m., and get together and play music. Music industry veteran and Cohasset resident Howie Altholtz is teaming up with Cohasset Recreation. Thanks to the generosity of Crossroads Music of Hanover, amps and drums will be available on site. Musicians should bring their own instruments and may bring their own equipment. Cost is $6 per visit or an all-access pass of $20 for five weeks.

Cohasset Swim Center

Swim Lesson Registration – Cohasset Swim Center walk-in registration for swim lessons will take place from 9 a.m. to noon, on Saturday, June 13, at Cohasset Swim Center, off of Sohier Street.

Swim lessons will be offered in four two-week sessions: Session I: June 22 through July 3; Session II: July 6 through 17; Session III: July 20 through 31; and Session IV: Aug. 3 through 14. At that time, members can sign up for any one of the four, two-week sessions. Non-members may sign-up on June 13 for Session I only if there is space available. All classes will be filled on a first-come first-served basis. For more information, visit the Web site at cohassetswimcenter.com.

Advance Training Courses – Interested in become a certified lifeguard or water safety instructor? CSC is offering a Lifeguard RE-Certificate Course. Class space is limited, and applicants will be accepted on a first-come, first-served basis as online registrations are received. Lifeguards needing to update their certification can sign up for the course, which will be offered from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., on Saturday and Sunday, June 13 and 14.

A lifeguard training course will take place from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday through Thursday, June 20, 21, 22 and 23. Prerequisites: Minimum age of 15, and pass a prerequisite skill test. Registration deadline is June 13.

Those who enjoy swimming and working with children can become certified water safety instructors. The water safety instructor training course will take place from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Thursday through Monday, June 25, 26, 27, 28 and 29. Prerequisites: Applicants must be minimum of age 16 by the last day of class and pass a skills test. Registration deadline is June 14.

All classes are mandatory. For more information and to register, visit the Web site at cohassetswimcenter.com and click on Lifeguard and WSI.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JUNE 8, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Try using that Aries charm to warm up the usual set of workplace naysayers, and then back it up with a solid block of facts and figures to sell your idea to your colleagues.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) While nothing can deter a determined Bovine from following a course you believe in, it helps to have some supporting data and statements by trusted colleagues to make your case.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Take advantage of new information that could help make your career transition easier. The weekend is a good time to re-establish relationships with people you haven't seen in a while.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Personal matters demand your attention as once-stable situations begin to shift. Quick action to shore things up is called for in order to avoid more problems down the line.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Although your financial picture begins to brighten, "thrift" and "caution" are still the watchwords for fiscally astute Leos and Leonas to live by. Expect news about a family matter.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Before you try to blame a colleague for a workplace problem, make sure you have the proof to back you up. Make some quiet inquiries on your own to try to solicit more information.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Trying to cheer up a depressed friend or downcast family member can be difficult. But keep at it, and your efforts should soon pay off in ways you might have never expected.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Taking a new look at an old and frequently recurring problem might lead you to consider making some surprising changes in the way you had been handling it up till now.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Despite what the naysayers might say, setting your sights on a new goal could be one of the smartest things the typically sagacious Sagittarian has done in a long time.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Rebuilding an unraveling relationship won't be easy. But you can do it, if you really want to. Just remember to keep the lines of communication open between the two of you.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A new friendship could develop into a close relationship. Meanwhile, reassure an old friend who might be feeling neglected that he or she is still an important part of your life.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You might be feeling that you're still in over your head as you continue trying to adjust to your new situation. But the pressures ease by week's end, giving you time to come up for air.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

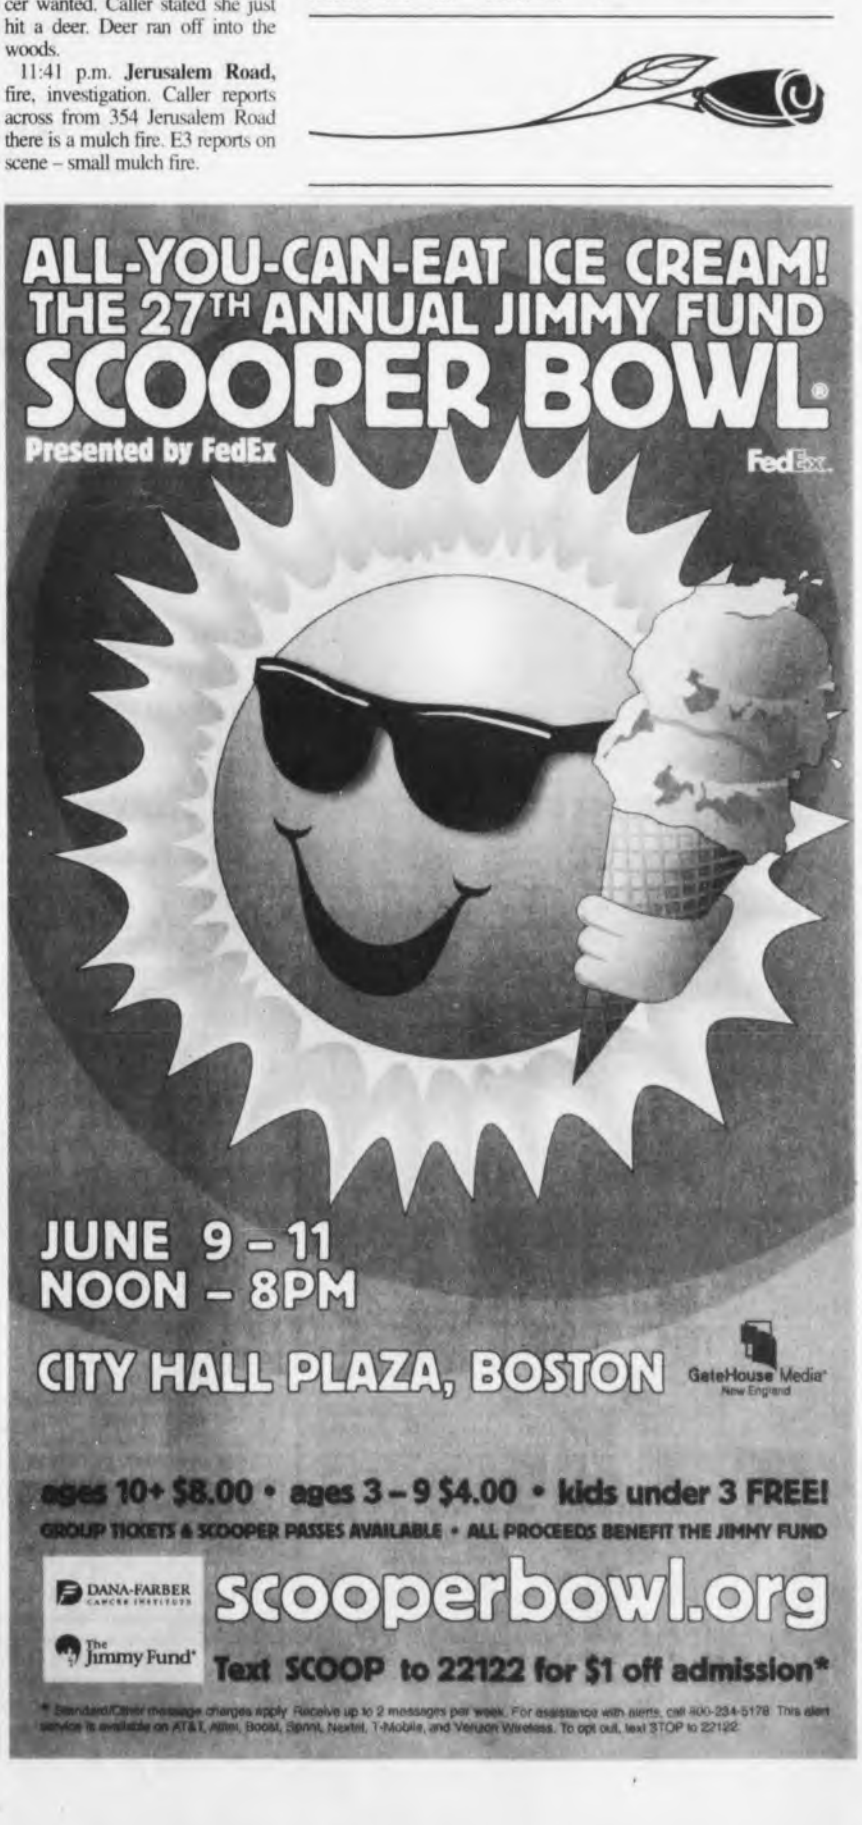
Ruth F. Pratt



Ruth F. Pratt

COHASSET – Ruth F. Pratt, a resident of Harbor House Nursing Home, Hingham, formerly of Cohasset, died May 28, 2009 at South Shore Hospital after a brief illness. She was 93 years old. Ruth was born in Morrisville, Vermont and grew up on a farm with her grandparents in Enosburg Falls, Vermont where she attended school. She was a member of the 1934 and 1935 Vermont Women's High School State Championship Basketball team. She attended nursing school in Vermont after graduation from high school. After World War II, Ruth relocated to Cohasset, Massachusetts where she was an accomplished seamstress and an active civic volunteer. Ruth was a member of the Second Congregational Church and sang in their choir for many years. She participated in many of her church's musical productions, always fulfilling her love of music and singing. Ruth volunteered many hours for the Cohasset Social Service League's Consignment Shop, serving luncheons for Cohasset Elder Affairs, delivering meals on wheels, for "Fish" and as an election worker for the Town of Cohasset. Ruth was also a member of Eastern Star.

She was the wife of the late Carlton S. Pratt and the cherished mother of Stuart C. Pratt and wife Ester G. of Greenfield, MA and Jeffrey C. Pratt and wife Lisa F. of Cohasset; grandmother of Disa Pratt of Leyden, MA, Cindy Pratt Gonzalez of Greenfield, Gustave Pratt of Roslyn, Pennsylvania and Logan, Madison and Halle Pratt of Cohasset. Ruth also leaves behind four great grandchildren.

A Memorial Service will be held at 1 p.m. on Friday, June 19, 2009 at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA. 02025. Interment private. Visiting hours omitted. In lieu of flowers, donations may be made in Ruth's name to the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Avenue, Cohasset. For an online guestbook, please visit www.mcnamara-sparrell.com

Gaine game for 'Dolly'

Reagle Players salute Jerry Herman

By R. Scott Reedy

COURTESY PHOTOS

Rachel York plays Dolly Levi in the Reagle Players performance of "Hello Dolly" at Robinson Theater, 617 Lexington St., Waltham, June 18-27.

Wollaston resident Colleen Gaine is a production assistant for the Reagle Players based in Waltham and will also be on stage performing in "Hello Dolly."

Musical theater fans everywhere rejoiced when legendary Broadway composer and lyricist Jerry Herman picked up his Tony Award for Lifetime Achievement on Sunday night, but the applause might have been just a little louder in Waltham where a cast of 50 Reagle Players performers is rehearsing "Hello, Dolly!" as the first offering in a summer-long "Salute to Jerry Herman."

The first show of Reagle's 41st season will also be the first Herman show for Colleen Gaine of Wollaston, a student at Quincy's Eastern Nazarene College (ENC), who is spending the summer as a production assistant with Reagle, while also appearing on-stage in "Dolly" and, next month, in "Mame."

"This is my first Jerry Herman show and only my second full musical. It's incredible to be singing these classic show tunes. Our director, Worth Howe, appeared in the show on national tour, and directed an earlier production at North Shore Music Theatre in Beverly in 1985, so he knows it well," explained ensemble member Gaine by telephone from Waltham recently. "Worth has been terrific about explaining the material to us. He let those of us in the ensemble know that while our characters may not have names, they still need to have back-stories which he asked us to create. It has been a lot of fun to imagine what my three characters are all about. I didn't even know very much about 'Dolly' before I was cast. I had watched the movie, with Barbra Streisand, but movies are always very different from stage shows."

Truer words may never have been spoken. First produced by David Merrick on Broadway in 1964, "Hello, Dolly!" was based on Thornton Wilder's 1938 farce "The Merchant of Yonkers," which Wilder revised and re-titled "The Matchmaker" in 1955. Both Ethel Merman and Mary Martin turned down the role of Dolly Levi, which went to Carol Channing. Fueled both by a score that includes the title song as well as "Before the Parade Passes By" and "It Only Takes a Moment" and by its nine Tony Awards, Channing would play Dolly on Broadway, in revivals, on national tour, and in seemingly endless road companies, for the next 30 years.

The role was also played on Broadway by Ginger Rogers, Martha Raye, Betty Grable, Pearl Bailey, Dorothy Lamour, and Phyllis Diller. Merman, for whom the show was originally written, finally consented to take the lead in 1970, complete with two Herman songs written especially for her. While "Dolly" broke Broadway records, a 1969 Gene Kelly-directed film version fared less well with the then 27-year-old Barbra Streisand in the lead. In Waltham, Dolly will be played by 37-year-old Broadway veteran Rachel York ("Dirty Rotten Scoundrels," "Sly Fox," "Victor/Victoria").

"Several people have commented that Rachel seems young to be playing Dolly. She is young, but she is doing a fantastic job in the role," says Gaine, a 2006 North Quincy High School graduate who is working toward a bachelor's degree in Fine Arts in Music Education, with a minor in vocal performance, at ENC. "She's also hilarious. I hit a very high note in rehearsal the other day and she just stared at me with this very, very funny look on her face and said, 'Boy, that was quite a note.' Rachel is great about joking around with us and putting the entire company at ease. Working with her will be a great learning experience for me."

Quincy residents Colleen Gaine and Jim Kopycinski will both be featured in the ensemble when Reagle Player presents "Hello, Dolly!" at the Robinson Theater, 617 Lexington St., Waltham, June 18-27. For tickets and information, call 781-891-5600 or go online at reagleplayers.com.

Oprah applauds effort

Fields has big shoes to fill in musical version of 'The Color Purple'

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

There is only one Oprah Winfrey. So anyone who follows in the footsteps of the talk show host-turned-media titan has to don some pretty big shoes. Actress Felicia Fields, who plays the role of Sofia in the musical version of "The Color Purple" on Broadway and on the national tour that comes to Boston's Wang Theatre next week, knows this first-hand. It was Winfrey, after all, who created the role of the strong-willed Sofia, earning an Academy Award nomination as Best Supporting Actress, in Steven Spielberg's 1985 feature film of the same name.

"When I was first approached about playing Sofia on stage, I was immediately reminded of Oprah who was so magnificent in the movie. Oprah created Sofia to be a fighter. I knew I could never lose sight of that," explained Fields recently by telephone from a North Carolina tour stop. "Sofia is a tough character, but she can also be vulnerable. We've also added a level of sensuality to Sofia. I feel heavy-set women are too often over-looked in terms of their sensuality and sexuality. But, above all else, Sofia is resilient."

With Winfrey as its above-the-title producer, the musical, based on the Spielberg film and the Pulitzer Prize-winning Alice Walker novel that inspired it, opened on Broadway in December 2005 and went on to earn 11 Tony nominations. It has been on the road since April 2007. With a book by Pulitzer Prize winner Marsha Norman ("Night Mother"), music and lyrics by Grammy Award winners Brenda Russell, Allee Willis, and Stephen Bray, and choreography by Donald Byrd, the show details the poverty, racism and gender discrimination faced by African-American women in the early 1900s to tell the story of one particular young woman named Celie. With the help of two strong female friends, Celie is transformed as she finds her self-worth. It was with the help of one very strong female that Fields settled into the role in which she would garner a 2006 Tony nomination.

"At our first rehearsal, Oprah jumped to her feet to applaud me after I sang a number called 'Hell, No.' She said, 'I think you nailed it girl.' She told me how much she liked my Sofia, too, which felt great. You can't really compare me to Oprah, however, because she did the character on film and I'm doing a musical on stage. Once you get past the character's story being the same in each, what you have is really very different. Having Oprah directly involved has been wonderful, because she has been such a great support for everything we do. We both live in Chicago, so I see her occasionally when I'm home. Oprah is one of the most generous, giving, and supportive people I know."

Supportiveness is the order of the day after the curtain comes down, too, with traditional stage-door fan encounters, usually requiring only that actors be Sharpie-ready and prepared to sign autographs, morphing into something distinctly more personal than a signed Playbill.

"People cry on your shoulder after this show which is definitely not typical. At the stage door, you have a real responsibility to be there to support the audience. People hug you and share all kinds of personal information with you about their lives. With this kind of material to work with, you have to always remember that your performance can not only enlighten the audience, but also even make some feel free for maybe the first time in a long time. My character definitely has that power, especially over the females. I think the strength that comes to Sofia is one of the greatest moments in the show. It reminds me of the days when women would be physically and emotionally abused, but they somehow would still always keep their dignity. That her man, Harpo, comes backs to her from the other woman, Squeak, is very significant," says Fields of one of the many elements of the story that draw a strong reaction from the audience. "I've worked for 20 years in theater and I've never felt anything like this. This show does what theater should do – it transforms."

"The Color Purple, The Musical about Love" will be at the Citi Performing Arts Wang Theatre, 270 Tremont St., Boston, June 16-28. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 866-348-9738 or go online at citicenter.org.

Name: Victor Hartmann
School: Cohasset
Grade: Senior
Stats: Victor led Cohasset with a 14-4 record this season as Cohasset posted one of its best ever seasons. A senior captain, he was a South Shore League All-Star and a team leader.

Name: Sanjay Rau
School: Hingham
Grade: Junior
Stats: Sanjay is undefeated in singles with a 20-0 record, and didn't lose a set all season. He was also 2-0 in doubles.

Name: Mike Parker
School: Scituate
Grade: Senior
Stats: Mike played better and better as the season rolled on, finishing with just two losses, both to Hingham's Chandler Semjen. Along with Chris Nelson, he was the team's strong point in the MIAA team tournament.

Name: John Ripple and Ryan Johnson
School: Hingham
Grade: Seniors
Stats: Another easy choice. All that needs to be said is this tandem didn't lose as much as a set at first doubles all season, including tournament play for a 46-0 sweep. Overall the pair was 23-0 in matches going into the State Final.

Name: Alex Chin
School: Hingham
Grade: Senior
Stats: Alex has turned his already stellar game up a notch since the end of the school year for seniors. His mostly easy victories in the Division 2 South Sectionals helped the Harbormen win the title and a chance for a state championship. Including playoffs, he was 20-2 heading into the State Finals.

Name: Chandler Semjen
School: Hingham
Grade: Junior
Stats: Semjen was dominating as much as anyone on the Hingham team this season, playing at No. 1 and No.2 singles. He finished 21-2 for the season.

Name: Brian Spitler and Pat Kelleher
School: Marshfield
Grade: Senior, Sophomore
Stats: This duo made it all the way to the finals of the MIAA South Individual tournament and was nearly perfect during the regular season for the Rams.

Name: Keegan Allahyarian
School: Norwell
Grade: Junior
Stats: A constant straight-set winner during the regular season, Allahyarian had the versatility to play at both No. 2 and No. 1 singles. Allahyrian hugely contributed to a Norwell team that easily soared into the postseason, and competed in the MIAA individual tournament, where he lost a tight, three-set match

Name: Jay Wright
School: Norwell
Grade: Senior
Stats: The co-captain rarely lost this season, and when he won, 90 percent of the time he did so in straight sets. Not only did this No.1 singles player lead the Clippers to the Division 3 South Sectional quarterfinals, he helped them grab a share of the South Shore League title, a title they've either won or shared for 19 straight seasons. Wright fought hard at the MIAA individual tournament, falling in three sets to the best singles player in the Patriot League.

Name: Josh Hale
School: Pembroke
Grade: Senior
Stats: When Pembroke's No. 1 singles player Terrance Ryan went down with an ankle injury, Hale stepped in and delivered an unprecedented performance, helping the Titans win their third straight Patriot League title, finishing unbeaten in the league. Hale earned Patriot League All-Star honors.

Name: Brayden Minahan
School: Duxbury
Grade: Sophomore
Stats: Minahan was a force at first singles this season for the Green Dragons. Not only did he cruise through the regular season, he handed Apponquet's Pat Walker his first loss of the year. To that point, Walker hadn't even lost a single set, and Minahan beat him in straight sets. The future looks bright for Duxbury with this kid in the rotation. Minahan finished with a 16-7 record

Name: Chris Nelson
School: Scituate
Grade: Senior
Stats: To make it simple, Nelson was unbeatable this year. Playing No. 1 singles from the start, he finished the regular season and Scituate's playoff run with a perfect record.
His one setback all season was in the State Semifinals of the MIAA Individual Tournament.

Name: Kenny Weiand
School: Marshfield
Grade: Senior
Stats: This senior captain helped the Rams make a late-season run to reach the postseason. During the regular season, Weiand made it to the semifinals of the MIAA South Individual tournament. Weiand finished with 13 wins this season.

Name: T.J. Schoberg and Connor Dunphy
School: Duxbury
Grade: Seniors
Stats: Talk about senior leadership. These captains were nearly unstoppable at first doubles this spring, competing at such a high level in a loaded field of doubles teams in the Patriot League. Still, the duo helped the Green Dragons post a 14-8 regular season record and bring the team to the Division 2 South Sectional finals.

SPECIAL TOWN MEETING

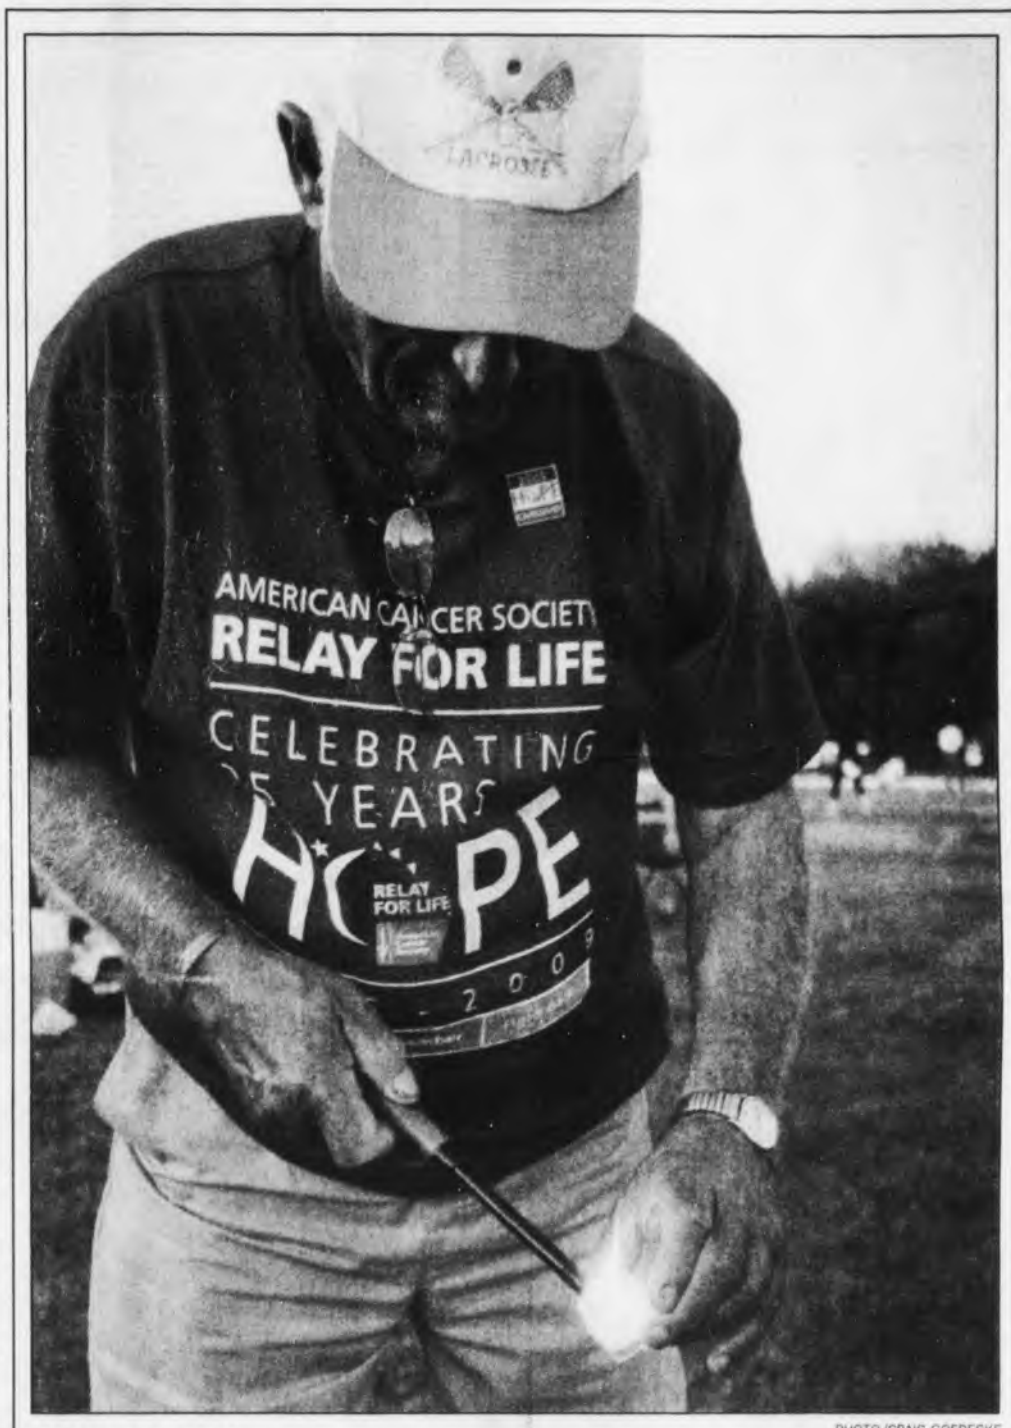
Wind bylaw front and center

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Should the town's wind turbine bylaw stay in place or take a hiatus?

That's the question that will take center stage at next Thursday's citizen petition-called Special Town Meeting.

On the heels of a highly controversial wind turbine project application—the first under the wind energy conversion facility bylaw—a group of residents feel the bylaw needs revision. In order to revise the bylaw properly, the proponents are proposing a "moratorium" be placed on the bylaw and all its provisions to prevent new applications from being grandfathered in under the current bylaw.



"I equate it to a time out in a basketball game," said Jeff Patterson of 10 Sanctuary Pond who spoke on behalf of the proponents. "I think it is fair to say (the town) learned a lot of the issues that come up with this type of development during the first application process…we want to include that knowledge to improve the bylaw."

Special Town Meeting, which includes two warrant articles, will begin Thursday, June 25 at 7 p.m. in the high school gymnasium. It is the first Special Town Meeting called by a citizen's petition since 1996 when voters met to approve funding for a new school.

At this point, it seems like anyone's guess at how many voters will show up at Town Meeting.

"There are number of people who want to be heard and should be heard on both sides of the issue. One of the purposes of Town Meeting is to get all the views on the table," said Selectmen Chairman

Mother, son with Type-1 diabetes to race with Olympian

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

On Sunday, June 28 hundreds of athletes will take to the waters off Sandy Beach as part of the third annual Cohasset Triathlon.

Among those rushing into the Atlantic Ocean's crashing waves will be Olympic gold medalist Gary Hall Jr. The Olympic swimmer will compete in the triathlon as part of a relay team poised to inspire by demonstrating there isn't anything someone with Type-1 diabetes can't accomplish.

Cohasset residents and mother and son, Nancy and 13-year-old Colin Whelan, complete the relay team. All three team members live with Type 1 (juvenile) diabetes everyday—and all three of them don't let it slow them down a bit.

Occupation: Botanical artist and teacher at the South Shore Art Center.

Best days of your life: The days that I first met my husband Adrian and my daughters Anna, Katie and Jenny.

Best vacation: Bonnefon, Dordogne, France.

Favorite season: Summer.

Favorite junk food: Kettle corn from the Arts Festival on the Common and Cadbury's Dairy Milk Chocolate.

Best book or magazine: "Forever" by Pete Hamill and the British edition of Good Housekeeping Magazine.

Best movie: "Four Weddings and a Funeral" and "Enchanted."

Best TV show: So You Think You Can Dance?

Favorite music, song, group or artist: Keane, Anuna, and The Rusty Skippers (be sure to catch them at the Festival!!)

Fun fact about yourself: Because my father was in the British Army, I attended ten different schools before I was ten.

Pet peeve: People who don't take advantage of all the great classes, exhibits and events that happen at SSAC.

Goal: Ideally: To paint a perfect leaf. Realistically: To get through a day without losing my car keys or my glasses!

Person you'd most like to meet: Leonardo de Vinci, because he took his inspiration from the world around him.

Biggest worry: People not taking advantage of the free Festival parking at the South Shore Music Circus and the free trolley shuttle.

Best part of Cohasset: Arts Festival on the Common…it's the beginning of summer.

POLICE BEAT

Blinker confusion causes crash

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Confusion over a right blinker resulted in an accident Friday afternoon (June 12). A 2009 Toyota taking a left from Sohier Street onto Route 3A collided with a 1997 Volvo traveling northbound on 3A. Both vehicles sustained damage when the front of Volvo struck the front left of the Toyota.

When police responded to the accident, the driver of the Toyota, a Marshfield woman, stated the Volvo had its right blinker on so she thought the car was turning onto Sohier Street. She pulled out to take the turn and the cars crashed.

The driver of the Volvo, a Cohasset man, said he was not sure if he had his blinker on. He was driving straight and the vehicle pulled out in front of him.

"We don't have any conclusive determination of whether he had his blinker on," said Police Chief James Hussey. Based on the officers' investigation, no one was cited in the accident.

Both cars were towed from the scene, but there were no injuries.

Outstanding warrant

An officer driving northbound on Route 3A Monday morning (June 8) spotted a truck being driven by a 52-year-old male who he recognized as having an outstanding warrant. A book of warrants is kept at the station. The officer confirmed with dispatch that the warrant was outstanding and pulled over the car just over the Cohasset line at the intersection of East Street and Elizabeth Road.

The driver, who was a Cohasset resident, was arrested on the warrant charges for traffic violations. He was brought to the station for booking and the truck was driven away by the passenger.

Good intent call

On Wednesday evening around 9 p.m., a good intent call came in from a resident who saw someone crawl through his neighbor's window. Police responded to the scene, but it turned out the 'intruder' was the homeowner's 17-year-old son, who did not have permission to be there at the time. Police talked to the family by phone and the issue was left for the family to deal with.

Tenant/landlord

A man who lives on Beechwood Street stopped an officer driving by to talk to him about an ongoing tenant/landlord dispute. The tenant claimed the landlord was coming into the house and onto the property without prior notice. Officers spoke with other tenants who claimed that was not the case.

A report was taken and a message was left with the landlord.

Missing child

During the Deer Hill school spring concert last Thursday evening an 8-year-old boy got separated from his parent. A Scituate detail officer called in the report. By the time police arrived on scene shortly after, the boy had been located.

"The mother wanted to get people notified right away, which is a good thing," said Hussey.

Police would turn to the Amber Alert system only if there was specific information and it was known the child was in some kind of dangerous situation, said Hussey. The first step would be to use all the Cohasset Police resources to locate the child, then as time went on if the child was still not found, they would call in additional resources to assist with the search.

Sandy Beach tickets

With Sandy Beach officially opening last weekend, the police are increasing their parking enforcement down at the beach parking lot. Residents must have a 2010 town facility sticker before June 30 or police will begin ticketing at any restricted parking locations, including Sandy Beach.

Reckless operation

An 18-year-old was summons for reckless operation of a motor vehicle after crashing into a granite post on Government Island.

A cruiser was dispatched to Government Island after a call came in around 8:30 p.m. about a gray Ford Mustang in a single car crash. When the officer arrived he spoke with the harbormaster, who hade made observations previous to the crash of the car being driven erratically between the Sailing Club and the harbormaster shack.

The Mustang has minor damage, the post was tilted slightly, and the driver was uninjured.

Based on a conversation with the driver, the officer cited the 18-year-old Weymouth man for reckless and endangered operation of the motor vehicle. It is a criminal complaint and the man will be summonsed to court.

Dump truck crashes in Village

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

On Friday morning (June 12) a dump truck crashed into three parked cars on Depot Court shutting down the street for approximately two hours.

When police arrived to the intersection of Main Street and Depot Court at around 9:30 a.m., they found that the operator of the 10-wheeled dump truck lost control of the vehicle while turning left from Main Street onto Depot Court. The truck then went onto the sidewalk and hit a large trash container, crossed into on-coming traffic and hit an SUV and finally came to rest after hitting three parked cars in front of the apartment building at 9 Depot Court.

The driver of the dump truck was transported to South Shore Hospital in Weymouth with minor injuries.

The truck is owned by the Cohasset-based Harold Litchfield Trucking Company. The driver of the truck was identified as Harold Litchfield, 74, of Cohasset.

The three parked cars could not be driven from the scene and had to be towed. The car parked in the middle of the three — a Honda Civic — was heavily damaged and was deemed to be a total loss. A Toyota Prius sustained rear end damage and a Lexus SUV sustained damage to its left front end from being hit by the Honda Civic, which was hit into it. The dump truck was also towed from the scene.

Police Chief James Hussey said the property at 9 Depot Court was not damaged.

Due to the large amount of property damage, the Cohasset Police Department was assisted by an accident re-constructionist from the Weymouth Police Department. The Massachusetts State Police Commercial Motor Vehicle Inspection Unit ("Truck Team") was also called to the scene to inspect the dump truck to help rule out mechanical failure.

As of this week, Cohasset Police were still waiting on the report from the accident re-constructionist, but the State Police Truck Team's preliminary report ruled out any mechanical problems with the truck.

Through the officers' investigation, they determined to cite the driver with negligent operation of a motor vehicle, failure to drive in marked lanes and making an improper turn. These are criminal citations and the driver, Litchfield, is to be summonsed to court.

"We were extremely lucky today that no one was seriously injured or killed. This area of the village is known for heavy pedestrian traffic and its proximity to a preschool," said Hussey. "We're pleased no one was injured in what was actually a severe accident with a lot of property damage."

Hussey said the accident reconstruction team would determine if the day's rainy weather played a role in the accident. In the meantime, the police have asked for a Registry of Motor Vehicles' evaluation of the driver since mechanical failure has been ruled out.

"When an accident of this magnitude happens with nothing more than a guy making a turn then, for whatever reason, crashes into three cars, it calls into concern whether the driver should be driving or not," Hussey said.

Kate and Caroline are published at 9

Deer Hill students' work to appear in literary magazine

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Some day in the distant future Cohasset residents may be reading about two accomplished writers who attended the Deer Hill School, and who were first published when they were in the third grade.

For the time being, though, the Mariner will stick to the students' present successes.

The work of third graders Kate Fitzpatrick and Caroline Patterson will appear in the summer edition of the children's literary and art magazine, Hutch.

The two girls, and all the other students in Emily Gibbons' class at Deer Hill have been keeping daily writing journals throughout the year. During a learning section on personal narratives, both Caroline and Kate wrote stories about particular memories that are important to them.

It was purely coincidence that both Caroline and Kate's stories were about animals.

The stars of Kate's story are a subject she writes about often – her two dogs, Lily and Major. Caroline's story focused on a day when she and her friends saved countless baby snapping turtles by returning them to a pond.

In her class, Gibbons said she often asks her students to think about a person, place, object or event that matters to them to write about. And then, the students are directed to write their personal narratives by playing a movie of that memory in their head. She said she encourages the students to write about experiences that are crystal clear in their memories, not those that are fuzzy.

For Kate the day when Major, her now 2-year-old dog, joined her family was a vivid and happy memory. Describing him as "the cutest, the funniest, the most perfect puppy in the world," Kate tells the story of going to the breeder, choosing Major and taking him home.

When she found out the story was going to be published in Hutch, Kate said she was surprised – so surprised that she jumped. In addition to writing, Kate enjoys science, art and playing soccer, basketball and lacrosse.

Using descriptive words like "scorching hot" and "black as midnight," Caroline relays the story of an impromptu baby turtle rescue. She and her friends were riding bikes when they noticed a group of baby snapping turtles. They grabbed the small turtles and quickly carried them to the cool waters of a pond nearby, where they stumbled upon even more turtles.

Caroline and her friends recruited the neighborhood children to find some turtles – "everyone took off like cheetahs chasing prey." They ended up finding 12 baby snapping turtles.

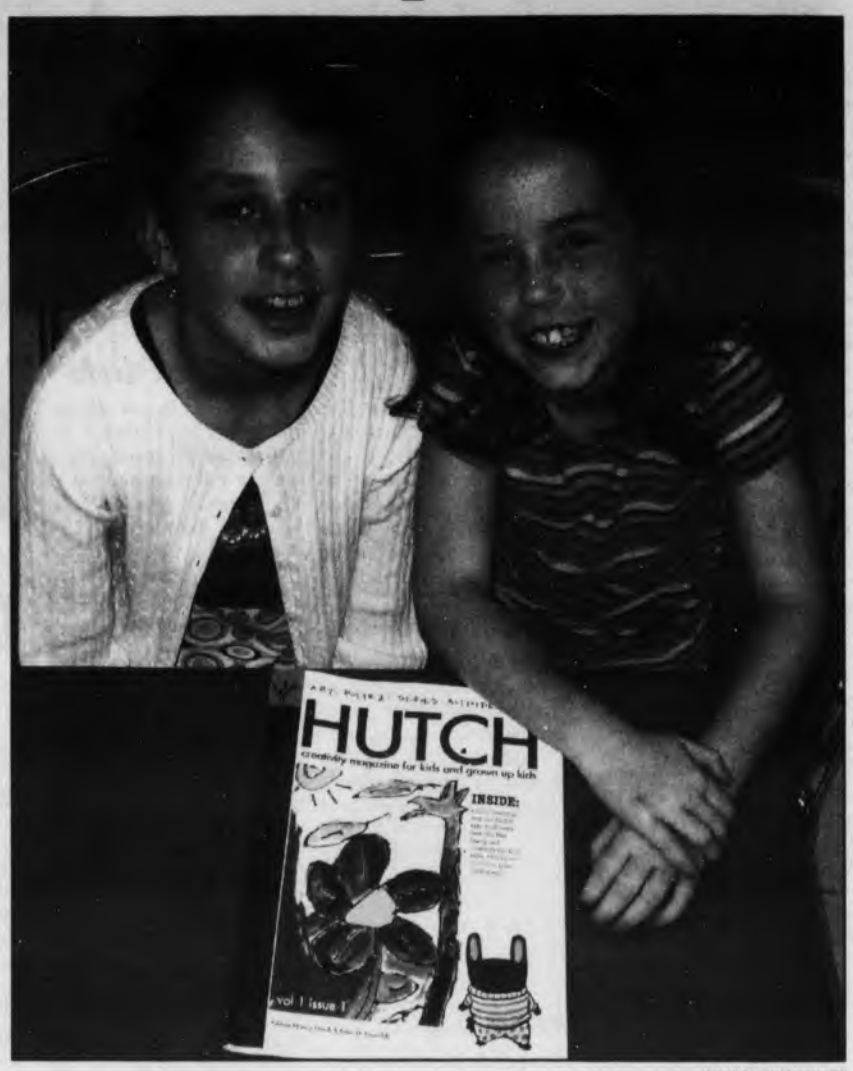
Caroline, who loves playing soccer, softball, tennis and golf, also has some aspirations of being a writer.

"I think it would be fun to be able to think of stories," said Caroline. To hone her skills, she said she turns to her little sister as a sounding board.

"I love making up stories and reading them to my little sister because she loves fairy tales," Caroline said.

Kate said she also likes using her imagination to make up stories, but prefers to write about her true-to-life experiences. She relies on her dogs to provide an endless source of material.

Hutch, a magazine of kids' stories, poetry and artwork, was launched in the spring of 2008. The publication is put out on a semi-annual basis by The Blue Bunny bookstore in Dedham. In addition to kids' contributions, Hutch will continue to feature contributions, writing, and art tips by award-winning children's illustrator Peter H. Reynolds and other guest authors and illustrators. Children in grades 1 to 5 can send in contributions.



About half of the students in Ms. Gibbons' class sent in submissions of artwork and writing to the magazine's editors.

"This is the first year I've had a contest like this that gives the kids the opportunity to have their work published in a local children's magazine. I'm really excited for them; it makes the [writing] process authentic," said Gibbons. She added that all of her students have worked hard this year to improve their writing skills.

Both Kate and Caroline said they think it's pretty cool to be in the third grade and have a magazine with their work inside.

"I'm going to look at it and be like 'oooh… that's mine'!" said Caroline.

And Kate's first order of business when she gets her copy of Hutch is to promptly show it to her inspiration – her dog, Major.

COHASSET RECREATION DEPARTMENT

Cohasset Recreation Center is at 41 Highland Ave. For more information or to sign up for activities, stop by the office, or visit www.cohassetrec.com or call 781-383-4109.

Summer Playground Program – Registration for the Summer Playground Program will be accepted on a space available basis Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 3 p.m., and Tuesdays, 5 to 7 p.m. The seven-week Playground Program is a day camp-like experience inclusive of sports, games, field trips, entertainment, arts and crafts, etc. It will take place June 22 through Aug. 7. Children ages 5 through 12 may register for the full day, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. program. Fees for the program are: Full day, $385, for the entire seven-week program. There is also a $50 per child activity fee. Checks should be made payable to Town of Cohasset. Registration may also be done online.

Youth Tennis Lessons – Cohasset Recreation Department will offer youth tennis lessons this summer for boys and girls ages 7 and older. This seven-week program will start Monday, June 22, or Tuesday, June 23, with one-hour lessons meeting twice per week on a Monday/Wednesday or Tuesday/Thursday schedule. Tennis lessons end the week of Aug. 3. Various levels of instruction are available. Cost of the program is $80 per participant. Register in person at the Recreation Office or online.

Summer Xtreme – Students entering grades six through nine will travel to field trip destinations around the region. With a $99 per week fee, Cohasset Recreation Department is bridging the gap many parents face each summer, the gap between the quality and affordability of summer programs. The program is filling fast and the following programs still have openings.

What's in store this summer?

Week two: July 6 to 9, Codzilla boat ride and Boston Bowl and Billiards.

Week six: Aug. 3 to 6, Paw Sox and Fenway Park Tour/Tomb.

Week seven: Aug. 10 to 13, Water Wizz and laser tag.

The program will meet four days a week, Monday through Thursday, with field trips on Tuesdays and Thursdays. On Mondays and Wednesdays, the group of about 45 middle school students will participate in various sports, crafts, challenges, team builders and social activities. The program is supervised by counselors and directors with many years of experience working with children.

Girls Basketball Clinic – Cohasset High School. Girls varsity coach Jack Levangie will instruct a girl's basketball clinic July 14 through 17, from 9 a.m. to noon, for girls in grades four through eight. Fee is $99 and includes a T-shirt. Registration can be done online.

Yoga – Cohasset Town Hall. Hatha yoga classes include moving meditation with gentle stretching and strengthening postures with breathing exercises to decrease stress and increase flexibility. Cost is $8 drop-in. Meets Thursdays, at 9:30 a.m.

Sunday Afternoon Jam Sessions – Cohasset Recreation Center. Aspiring musicians can come down to the Recreation Center on Sundays, from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m., and get together and play music. Thanks to the generosity of Crossroads Music of Hanover, amps and drums will be available on site. Musicians should bring their own instruments and may bring their own equipment. Cost is $6 per visit or an all-access pass of $20 for five weeks.

K-9s could be coming to high school

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

In an effort to ensure a safe and drug-free school, the Cohasset Middle-High School could be subject to searches using trained police canines.

The change, which would be included in the 2009-2010 student-parent handbook, is still under review. The School Committee discussed the change and some of their concerns at their Wednesday night meeting.

The addition, which would be added language to the Memorandum of Understanding (school-police cooperation agreement), is still under review by town counsel and the issue will be back for an official vote of the School Committee.

"This is a way we feel will make the school safer. We're trying to get drugs off our campus," said Dr. Mike Gill, high school assistant principal. The Handbook Review Committee agreed there are students who are in possession of and/or sell drugs while on school property. Gill said the school administration believes this is to be the case, but they don't necessarily know which kids are involved.

Gill said the knowledge that a police canine search could increase the likelihood of maintaining a safe and drug-free school by acting as a deterrent to those few individuals. Cohasset High is one of the later schools in the area to allow police K-9 searches, he said.

The additional Memorandum of Understanding includes the following language: contents of classrooms, and lockers (backpacks, gym bags, etc.), vehicles in school parking lots and other areas of campus may be open to the search. Canines will not search classrooms or confined areas where students are present. Procedures established by the Memorandum of Understanding between the Cohasset School District and the Cohasset Police Department will be followed for reporting offenses.

The searches would be random and the students (and possibly the faculty) could have little or advance notice, Gill said.

School Committee vice chairman Alfred Slanetz raised the more philosophical question of whether allowing the schools and students to be randomly searched by dogs and police really promoted a safe environment. He asked what more positive things the school was doing to curb drug use.

Gill said while he felt the schools could do more to communicate with parents and foster a partnership with them, the health education curriculum was a big piece.

School Committee member Helene Lieb wanted to be certain this addition would be communicated clearly and verbally to the student body in September. Gill said it would be covered during the middle-high school's first day of school assemblies.

Gill pointed out other past handbook additions, like having a Breathalyzer before school dances, have yielded positive results.

"Since (breathalyzers) were implemented, there hasn't been a single incident," Gill said. "That isn't to say it isn't ever going to happen, but it spells out to me that it is not going to happen as often…to me it comes down to safety, and maximizing and optimizing student safety."

The School Committee, which reviewed several recommended changes to the Parent-Student Handbook, voted to approve those changes with the provision the Memorandum of Understanding, which addresses the police canine searches, would be back before the School Committee for a separate approval vote following review of town counsel.

Cohasset drinking water project eligible for federal funding

State Representative Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, and State Senator Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth announce that the System Wide Capital Improvement in Cohasset has become eligible for assistance through the federal American Recovery and Reinvestment Act, as the Obama Administration is making $133 million available for Clean Water SRF projects and $52 million available for Drinking Water SRF projects.

The System Wide Capital Improvement Program in Cohasset was chosen as a Drinking Water Project is eligible for $3,063,942. This project is essential for protecting public health and the environment.

"I am pleased that Cohasset is beginning to benefit from the Federal Stimulus Funding being distributed to Massachusetts. It is critically important that we maintain and improve our sources of clean, safe drinking water," Rep. Bradley said.

To be eligible for Clean Water or Drinking Water SRF funding, municipalities, waste water districts and water suppliers filed applications with the Mass Department of Environmental Protection last year demonstrating that the proposed projects offer significant public health or drinking water quality benefits. The projects on the awards list must now obtain local funding authorization by Aug. 1, and submit final plans and specifications by Aug. 1 to qualify for Recovery Act "shovel-ready" funding. Projects that fail to qualify for Recovery Act funding will be awarded 2 percent loans and must submit their plans and specifications by Oct. 1.

"These low-interest loans will provide real and actual savings for the taxpayers of Cohasset," Sen. Hedlund said. "This funding is also reflective of the long-term plan put together by Cohasset town officials and approved by the town's voters to replace the town's aging water infrastructure."

Relay for Life one of many inspiring events

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Hello Cohasset. Oh my gosh, what a busy, wonderful and inspirational last few weeks we have had here in town with graduations, the Relay For Life, the opening of the Thursday Farmers Market and this weekend, The Arts Festival and Father's Day to boot. Now, if we could just find more than a day or two of sunshine and warmth, it would be perfect. I am sure it is on its way so we can talk about it again next week. When it all goes into the big picture, a bit of cool and damp weather is not a big deal. I was involved in last weekend's Relay For Life with so many amazing people who unfortunately all know someone or they themselves are dealing with the dreaded "C" - cancer. The part that I am always so blown away with is how families, friends, survivors and caregivers all join together, rain or shine to honor and remember those who have lost the battle and to celebrate life as a Survivor, Caregiver, family member etc. Last Friday, as the Relay began at 3, people started to arrive and the rain at this point was happening in bursts. The grey skies did nothing to dampen the spirit of all who were there as they decorated sites, gathered and walked lap after lap and all of us decided that rather than complain about the weather, we would say, "No problem, we can deal!" As we drew closer to the official start at 6, Harry St. Onge, the co-chair of the event started to speak the opening remarks. We had music, some stories of survival and then, Harry was recognized as "Volunteer Of The Year!" At that point, all Survivors, caregivers and families were asked to come take the Survivor Lap and the most amazing moment that I can remember and cannot really put into words happened. Lilly Carbone Sestito began her song of "We Are The Champions" dedicated to the Survivors and at that moment, the sun broke through the clouds, which was so beautiful but it got better than that. As the Survivors began to walk, a rainbow appeared which, in my opinion truly summed up what life and living is all about. This was a sign from above as a thank you for continuing the battles and the fight and was a strong message to our survivors that we will continue to fight this dreaded disease and all work together in our world to try and accomplish this goal. Absolutely the most inspirational and amazing lap that I, among all who were there have ever seen. The event had 34 teams with over 350 participants, 40 survivors and over $85,000 has been raised to date. The new spirit that was at the event with children, families from all over and friends old and new was super. For more information or to make a donation, please visit www.RelayForLife.org or call, 1-800-ACS-2345.

Happy Fathers Day this Sunday to all of the "Dads" in our lives.

GETTYSBURG HONORS

Congratulations to Megan Lia Sacks, daughter of Ronald and Michele Sacks, who was recognized at Gettysburg College, for achieving dean's honor list this past 2008-2009 spring semester.

PC DEAN'S LIST

Also, Daniel Sullivan, a resident of Cohasset, and a member of the class of 2011, has been named to the dean's list at Providence College for the spring 2009 semester. To qualify for the dean's list, students must achieve at least a 3.55 grade point average with a minimum of 12 credits. Nice work Daniel!

FESTIVITIES BEGIN

I cannot believe it is that time of the year all ready but starting today, the South Shore Art Center Arts Festival kicks off at 2 p.m. and runs through Sunday, June 21 on Cohasset Common. The Arts Festival features three art exhibitions, over 80 juried craft and fine art exhibitor tents, artist demonstrations, food booths, and live music throughout the weekend. Visitors should take advantage of free parking and trolley shuttle running between the Common and South Shore Music Circus, Sohier Street, Cohasset. There is a $5 suggested donation at the Arts Festival entry arbors. For more information visit www.ssac.org. Rain or shine, this event is so much fun for the whole family and what a great way to kick off the summer and on Sunday say, Happy Fathers Day, Dad!

CHIP AND WIN

Congratulations are in order for Colin Hoehn, a Cohasset resident who won the "Amica Challenge" chipping contest at the Mutual Funds Against Cancer Golf Tournament on June 11. The tournament was held at the Pinehills Golf Club and Waverly Oaks, both of which are in Plymouth, Mass. The tournament is one of approximately 160 that raise funds for the Jimmy Fund in support of cancer care and research at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. Colin will advance to the Amica Challenge Finals on Oct. 5 to compete for a golf vacation to Florida. Nice work Colin and good luck in the future.

Cohasset Relay For Life Director Harry St. Onge is recognized as American Cancer Society's Volunteer of the Year Friday evening by Patrick Connors, staff partner for the American Cancer Society.

SAIL AWAY

Please join the Cohasset Sailing Club Summer Launch Party on July 11th! All adult family and friends of the sailing club are invited to a lobster and chicken feast and a silent auction to benefit the club. The party will be held from 6 p.m. till 11p.m. rain or shine. Dinner will be served between 6:30 and 8:30; BYOB. Tickets are $50 pp payable to the Cohasset Sailing Club and are available by calling Joyce Driscoll at 781- 383-0122 or Claudia McKeon at781-383-6125. Donations for auction items are welcome. Contact Jim Porter at 781-383-2029. Make sure to mark this in your calendar.

CREATIVE NITES

Looking for a fun nite out on Friday, June 26 while your kiddos are well cared for and enjoying a Zumba Blast? Well, look no further. The Our World Children's Museum is resuming the Creative Nites programs on alternating Fridays and Saturdays and will begin on June 26. This Friday Nite Frolick is going to be "HOT" with a fun-filled Latin theme. A certified Zumba Instructor will be at the Museum to provide some high energy, "Kidz Style" fitness full of dancing, singing and fun. Some tasty snacks, art projects, drama and more will also be included and this event is for children ages 3 and up. This is a drop-off program from 4:30-8:30 p.m. and children can attend for some or all of the time. Please call 781-383-3198 or send an e-mail to ourworldprograms@comcast.net for more information.

HOME WORK

This upcoming weekend at the SSAC's Arts & 2nd Congregational's Strawberry Festivals, be sure to stop by the front of the church to support the Cohasset Appalachia Service Project. On June 27, 150 teens and adults will be heading to Kentucky, Virginia, and West Virginia to work on 23 home repair projects. At the Festivals CASP will be sponsoring a Silent Auction, a Raffle for Red Sox Tickets (Go Sox!), and home-baked goods baked by the volunteers. We want to thank the local merchants and individuals who generously contributed items for the Silent Auction and raffle. This is Cohasset ASP's 22nd year, and we are very appreciative of the generous community support throughout the years. If you would like to know more about the ASP Project and how you could participate, please stop by over the weekend and talk with the ASP volunteers or visit us on the web at www.CohassetASP.org. Thank you in advance from all who are involved and for your support!

MILESTONES

Wards celebrate 50th wedding anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Geoffrey Ward

Mr. and Mrs. Geoffrey Ward of Cohasset, formerly of Hingham celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary on June 13, 2009.

Geoffrey and Maryann Ward grew up in Hingham, met while attending Hingham High School, and were married in the Church of the Resurrection. They raised four children, Bobby, Tommy, Jimmy and Jackie in Hingham, before moving to Cohasset 10 years ago. They enjoy their 13 grandchildren and love attending their many activities. They are also avid golfers and like spending time with friends, both locally and in South Carolina, where they spend time during the winter months.

Having just returned from an anniversary trip to Bermuda, the Ward's will be celebrating with their family.

Anne and Frank Evans celebrate 60 years of marriage

Anne and Frank Evans

Anne and Frank Evans, long time Cohasset residents, recently marked their 60th wedding anniversary at the home of their daughter and son-in-law, Jane and Ed Goff of Cohasset. Their seven children and their spouses, 20 grandchildren, and one great grandson gathered together in celebration and toasted the remarkable example Anne and Frank have together set for the family.

Four of Frank and Anne's other children reside in Cohasset; Rosemary and Michael O'Connell, Priscilla and Stephen Sullivan, Larry and Darilynn Evans, and Rich and Lisa Evans. Nearby in North Easton are Anne and Dennis McMenamy and in Marblehead are Frank and Lisa Evans.

Anne and Frank were married June 4, 1949 at St. Mark's Church in Dorchester. They currently reside in South Yarmouth, but are looking forward to relocating to the South Shore to be closer to their family.

Thirteen local students were honored by GateHouse Media as The Best & The Brightest in an awards ceremony last week.

The Best & The Brightest is a recognition program designed to spotlight outstanding young adults in communities covered by GateHouse Media's local newspapers. Readers were invited to nominate individuals between the ages of 16 and 21 who deserved to be honored, whether for academic achievement, volunteerism, athletic prowess, artistic acumen or the pursuit of excellence in another field. The program was sponsored this year by Jack Conway & Company.

The 13 winners, chosen by a selection committee of community leaders, were featured in a special section that was published the last week of May.

The winners are: Robert Bergquist, of Norwell; Samantha Fallon, of Pembroke; Lila Haffey, of Duxbury; William Hall, of Hingham; Elizabeth Hogan, of Plymouth; Kevin Hufnagle Jr., of Marshfield; Brett Julian, of Weymouth; Kristina Nyman, of Hanover; David August Oddleifson, of Cohasset; Eric Palmer, of Scituate; Cherise Robinson, of Wareham; Brian Talbot, of Braintree; and Emily Warnock, of Kingston..

Infusing the room with energy and enthusiasm, Conway commented on the group of students being honored.

"They're champions, they've got courage, they've got determination, they've got a varied group of attributes and skills. The one thing they've all got in common, in my opinion, is that they set goals for themselves."

Conway congratulated the students on staying above the sometimes negative aspects of today's culture and recognized the important role that their mentors, oftentimes their parents and grandparents, have played in their lives.

"The words I take from reading your stories," Conway told the students, "are goal setting, determination, balancing your lives and, best of all, set your own course. Be individuals, go your own way. No one else can set your course for you.

"You'll have failures and temptations but you'll have to move on. Get on with it and never take your eye off your goal."

The students received gifts from GateHouse Media and a citation of recognition from the Massachusetts Senate.

MEHNDI DEMO

Mehndi Demonstration at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library on Wednesday, June 24, from 2-4 p.m. Subhashini Coburn, a native from India, will share her knowledge and skill of the ancient art of henna handpainting, or Mehndi. All ages are welcome. This event is exciting and wonderful to learn and the event is free for all.

3A FARM OPENING

Oh my goodness! After four years of planning, fundraising, and nine months of construction, the Scituate Animal Shelter will be relocating to its new, larger building this month. The new adoption facility will be located at 780 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, also known as the "3A Farm" on Route 3A in Scituate. The expanded community resource will offer many benefits over the existing facility including a larger adoption area, separate "wings" for dogs and cats, a medical suite, and 4 acres of peaceful land. A special grand opening community celebration is planned for Sunday, June 28 from 1-5 p.m., rain or shine. The event will include guided building tours, a chance to meet some of the adoptable animals and shelter alumni, plus raffles, refreshments and other fun activities for kids and animal-lovers of all ages. The day will be highlighted by special guest appearances. Professional dog trainer Dorothy O'Connor of Canine Concepts will offer helpful training tips, and popular children's author Barbara O'Connor will be signing copies of her books including "How To Steal A Dog" from 2-4 p.m. The Armstrong Brothers will provide music for a festive afternoon. Parking will be available at the Scituate High School with shuttles to the event. The grand prize raffle item is a set of four grandstand tickets to the Red Sox/Yankees game scheduled for Sunday, Aug. 23. Raffle tickets are $10 each or four for $30 and will be on sale at the event and prior to June 28 at various locations. The prize drawing will be held at 4 p.m. on June 28; the winner will be notified if not present at the time of the drawing. Please visit the Web site or call the shelter at (781) 545-8703 for more information on where raffle tickets may be purchased. The Scituate Animal Shelter is an independent, no-kill animal shelter serving the Greater South Shore Region. To date, more than 4,300 companion animals have benefited from the shelter's services and have been adopted into loving homes. The Scituate Animal Shelter is a non-profit, tax-exempt organization funded by private donations. Please visit the Shelter online at www.ScituateAnimalShelter.org.

Pride in the ranks

Newsweek ranking indicates more kids are taking AP classes

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The School Committee is proud of the fact more students at Cohasset High School are challenging themselves by taking Advanced Placement (AP) classes.

That fact was reflected on a national level this month when Cohasset High was ranked in the top 6 percent of public high schools as defined and ranked by Newsweek magazine. In its annual list of the top 1,500 public school in the US, Cohasset High was ranked 338th in the nation. For Massachusetts, Cohasset High was the sixth ranked public high school in Massachusetts.

This year's ranking is a huge jump over last year when Cohasset ranked 1029 on the same list.

Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh made the announcement to the School Committee Wednesday night. While admitting school administrators have mixed feelings on ranking – "we like them when we're on top, and we don't like them when we're not," she said honestly. However, she said the "huge improvement" over the last couple of years tells us something the school district is doing right.

"Our philosophy is we want to see more students challenged and taking the AP courses. We can be very pleased with the individual students who set out to prove to themselves they could do it," said Walsh. She said interest and enrollment in AP classes has grown where they are now offering two sections of AP English.

According to Newsweek.com, public schools are ranked according to a ratio devised by Jay Mathews: the number of Advanced Placement, Intl. Baccalaureate and/or Cambridge tests taken by all students at a school in 2008 divided by the number of graduating seniors. All of the schools on the list have an index of at least 1.000; they are in the top 6 percent of public schools measured this way.

"This is quantifiable evidence we are at the top of the class according to Newsweek," Walsh said.

School Committee member Paul Schubert said the Massachusetts high schools ranked above Cohasset were charter schools and exam schools, with the exception of Weston High.

The top three public high schools in Massachusetts were charter schools (Stugis Charter Public in Hyannis, MATCH Charter in Boston, and Mystic Valley Regional Charter in Malden), followed by Boston Latin, Weston and Cohasset.

"It's very impressive," said Schubert.

School Committee chairman Adrienne MacCarthy said it was important to keep this up – and to start early encouraging students and challenging them.

"It's very important moving forward that this starts early (in middle school) on building the foundation," she said.

Kelsey Poole helps make strawberry shortcake for the Strawberry Festival at the Second Congregational Church during last year's arts festival weekend.

Arts Festival tradition continues this weekend

Every Father's Day weekend, a sprawling eight-pole tent, hundreds of artists and a hive of activity transform the oceanside town common in Cohasset, into one of New England's premier arts festival. South Shore Art Center's Arts Festival has become a highly anticipated three-day event, greeting summer with something for everyone — art exhibitions, handmade crafts, and performances.

The centerpiece of the Arts Festival is the Main Exhibition Tent, showcasing hundreds of artists in a Juried Exhibition and a Members' Show. In addition, nearly 100 juried craft artists offer unique handmade jewelry, ceramics, clothing, fine art, photography, and home and garden products. Art comes to life as ceramicists, wood carvers and painters demonstrate their work. The popular KidsTent, sponsored by LemonLime/Aveda Salon and Yachting Dog, showcases a Young Artists' Exhibition and offers children the opportunity for hands-on creativity. Musical entertainment ranges from singer-songwriters to bluegrass to the popular "O'Reilly's". Fresh lobster rolls and homemade strawberry shortcake sold at the churches on the common are part of the festival tradition.

Among the artisans participating in 2009 are jewelry designer Betsy Frost of Ipswich, Frieda Grotjahn, of Gloucester, who makes bags and totes out of old sails; Jennifer Ecker of Vermont's well-known Fat Hat Factory (clothing); and Richard Reynolds' Tide Clocks, of New Hampshire.

Festival hours are Friday, June 19, 2 to 7 p.m.; Saturday, June 20, 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.; and Sunday, June 21, noon to 5 p.m. A free trolley shuttles visitors from parking at South Shore Music Circus. A $5 entrance donation is requested. For a complete schedule of events, visit www.ssac.org, or phone 781-383-2787.

Lobster roll sale returns to festival

Lobster Rolls, a tradition at the South Shore Arts Festival, will once again be on sale at the Parish House of First Parish Unitarian Universalist in Cohasset, 23 North Main St., June 19, 20, and 21.

Lobster lovers will be glad to hear that the all-meat, fresh lobster rolls, with no filler, will remain at last year's size and price of $13 including a bag of Cape Cod potato chips. First Parish accepts cash or checks (sorry, no credit cards).

"The rolls are so good that quite a few buyers return the next day for yet another taste of summer," says Art Myles, co-chair of the sale with his wife, Penny Myles.

They suggest getting coworkers together at lunchtime on Friday, or bringing lobster rolls home for dinner with family and friends on Friday, Saturday or Sunday, which is Father's Day.

Lobster rolls will be available at the Parish House on Friday and Saturday from 11a.m. to 7 p.m. and on Sunday from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.—or while quantities last. Last year was so successful that the lobster was sold out to walk-ins early on Sunday, so if lobster is your thing, make sure you get yours early, don't miss out!

There will be a lobster pick-up parking zone in front of the Parish House. For more information e-mail or call Penny Myles at tfparish02@comcast.net or (781) 749-1989.

Police issue Arts Festival traffic advisory

The South Shore Art Center will be holding their annual Arts Festival on Cohasset Common from June 19, 2009 through June 21, 2009.

Police advised residents in an e-mail to expect heavy congestion in and around Cohasset Common, with parking temporarily restricted on Highland Avenue, North Main Street, and Beach Street.

The hours of the festival are Friday, June 19 from 2p.m. to 7p.m., Saturday, June 20 from 10a.m. to 7p.m. and Sunday, June 21, noon to 5p.m.

To sign up for the Cohasset Police EMAS (email alerting system) service, visit www.cohassetpolice.com. Police send those on the EMAS list alerts, follow-ups and announcements as they occur.

Series Premiere June 24: "Two Angry Moms"

There are nearly 73 million school-aged children in America. "Two Angry Moms" takes a look at the school food programs responsible for a large portion of each child's daily meals. Following the filmmaker's quest to understand how the system works, "Two Angry Moms" explores the roles the federal government, corporate interest, school administration and parents play in the feeding of our country's school kids. The film offers successful and often inspirational examples of how to improve school food programs and make a difference in both the health of each child and the long-term health of the country.

"Two Angry Moms" is a documentary that asks the question: What happens when two "fed-up" moms try to change the school lunch program?

Are you sick and tired of packing your kids' lunch box everyday because the cafeteria food is unfit for human consumption? Do you feel guilty when your kids "buy"? Are you annoyed at all the junk being handed out and sold at school? Are you angry enough to do something about it? We are!

Short Films Night, July 15: "La Raccolta," "Pollen Nation" and "Homegrown Revolution"

"Homegrown Revolution" (16 min.) is set in the midst of densely urban downtown Pasadena, where radical change is taking root. For more than 20 years, the Dervaes family has been transforming their home into an urban homestead. They harvest three tons of organic food annually from their 1/10 acre garden. "Pollen Nation" (26 min.) follows the journey of one commercial beekeeper – third generation beekeeper Jeff Anderson – from the honey harvest on the High Plains to the warm winter-feeding grounds of California. It also explores the history of human interaction with bees, a story that reflects the development of agriculture. Finally, "La Raccolta" (29 min.) takes us to Umbria Italy for the olive harvest. Olga, Oriana, Luigi and Renato have been harvesting olives for more than 50 years but they worry that a changing social fabric which threatens the future of this lyrical tradition.

Aug. 5: "Black Gold"

As westerners revel in designer lattes and cappuccinos, impoverished Ethiopian coffee growers suffer the bitter taste of injustice. In this eye-opening expose of the multi-billion dollar industry, "Black Gold" traces one man's fight for a fair price.

Series Finale, Aug. 29 (starts at 7p.m.): "Tableland"

This rich, beautifully filmed documentary chronicles filmmaker Craig Noble's two-year journey across Canada and the U.S. as he visits small farms, wineries, and artisan producers across North America. "Tableland" is a wonderful testament to sustainable living and the pure enjoyment of freshly prepared food!

Tri-ing for a cure

The relay team is especially appropriate for the Cohasset Triathlon, which raises money for the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF) each year. JDRF is the leader in research leading to a cure for Type 1 diabetes in the world.

Colin, a seventh grader at the Middle-High School, was diagnosed with Type-1 diabetes, or insulin dependent diabetes, at age two. The disease currently has no cure, but it can be managed though multiple daily insulin injections. It's not an easy task.

"You can't ever forget you have diabetes," Colin said at his kitchen table earlier this week.

Simple things take extra planning, forethought and constant diligence. When going over to his friend's house on a bike, or walking the dog, he has to remember to bring a juice box in his pocket. Cereal for breakfast has to be measured out, the carbohydrates have to be counted and the proper amount of insulin has to be taken to ensure his blood sugar doesn't get too high or too low.

Type 1 diabetes strikes children suddenly and makes them dependent on injected or pumped insulin for life, and carries the constant threat of devastating complications. The condition is diagnosed most often in childhood or adolescence, but it can strike adults as well. According to the JDRF Web site, Type 1 diabetes is an auto-immune disease in which the body's immune system attacks and destroys the insulin-producing cells of the pancreas.

The disease is demanding, like others with juvenile diabetes, Colin and his parents must constantly monitor his insulin levels through pricking his finger six to eight times a day.

"It's a lot," said Nancy, adding finding a cure is a cause close to the Whelans' heart. "My dream, shared by all parents of kids with diabetes is for a cure for 24 hours or a lifetime. They deserve a break for just one day."

Despite the constant obstacles, the Whelans do not let diabetes keep them from accomplishing their goals or doing anything and everything.

"Diabetes is something that can be managed and every child or adult who has diabetes should know they can lead the life they want to. It may take some hard work and determination, but it can be done. This is the philosophy we raised Colin with," Nancy said. She was diagnosed with Type-1 diabetes while in her 20s.

The Whelans' match with Hall is fitting. Hall's diagnosis came later in life at age 23 and on the heels of winning four medals—two of them gold—at the 1996 summer Olympics. According to his Web site, doctors told him he would never again be able to compete at the same level. He went on to prove them wrong at the 2000 and 2004 Olympics. Hall took home the gold medal for the 50-meter freestyle at both the 2000 and 2004 games.

The team came together as part of a fundraiser for the JDRF in May. As part of a live auction at the annual JDRF Gala held in Boston one of the items was a chance to participate in the Cohasset Triathlon as part of a relay team with Gary Hall Jr.

Race Director Bill Burnett, who got in touch with the swimming Gold medalist via a message on Facebook, put together the package for JDRF.

A friendly bidding war took place between Cohasset residents Sean and Suzy Doherty, who also have a son with Type-1 diabetes, and the Whelans. The Dohertys won out, but offered the chance to Nancy and Colin.

Hall is set to start the race with the quarter-mile swim, Nancy will complete the second leg of the race on the bike and Colin will finish the race with the run around Little Harbor.

Being an active family already, the Whelans have incorporated their training into their regular athletic activities. This spring, Colin has been playing lacrosse, a sport that has its players constantly running the field, five days a week. He plans to run the course a couple of time before race day, but he knows his body is up to the 3.2-mile challenge.

Participating in athletic competition is a cornerstone to Colin's life – hockey, skiing, tennis and golf are among his favorite sports in addition to lacrosse. Colin's parents' goals since he was baby were to let him be whoever he wanted to be by supporting and nurturing his passions. For Colin that meant playing any and all sports.

Competitive hockey started at age four, participation in soccer started shortly after. Colin started skiing the expert slopes out West when he was 6 years old. This summer he'll play hockey, go to lacrosse tournaments and camp, play tennis, golf, and even catch a few waves on a surfboard off Nantasket Beach.

"We are incredibly proud everyday of what he accomplishes," Nancy said. "He just deals, pricks his finger, counts carbs, gives himself multiple shots throughout the day and enjoys his life."

The Whelans are looking forward to next weekend's race—they haven't spoken to Gary Hall Jr., but plan to meet him before race day. Nancy said there was no real strategy to discuss – they may be racing with an Olympian, but this isn't an Olympic race. The "baton" for relay teams in a triathlon is the computer racing chip that velcros to each athletes' leg. The chip records the overall team time and split time for each leg.

Colin plans to ask Hall how he gets ready for his athletic competitions as far as managing his diabetes and what its like to be gold medal Olympian.

"Hall is an inspiration to keep going, to stay strong with this disease. It's an opportunity of a lifetime and I think it will keep Colin motivated to keep doing what he's doing and stay strong with this disease," Nancy said.

The Whelans hope seeing their relay team finish the triathlon strong will have an impact on others who are struggling with Type-1 diabetes, help raise awareness about the disease is—and what someone can accomplish with the disease.

"It's a demonstration of not letting diabetes get in the way of what Colin is capable of doing and wants to do," Nancy said.

Cohasset Triathlon Fact Sheet

What: 3rd Annual Cohasset Triathlon

When: Sunday, June 28, start at 8 a.m.

Where: Start and transition area will be at Sandy Beach

The Swim: The race begins with a 1/4-mile ocean swim off Sandy Beach. New this year is the elite field will complete a 1/2-mile swim off Sandy Beach because this year's race is a US Junior World Team qualifier. The top boy and girl, ages 16-19, will go to Australia to compete in the World Championships.

The Bike: A 12-1/2-mile bike will follow the swim. The clockwise bike course includes 12 miles of scenic roads winding through Cohasset and North Scituate. The course will begin at the beach and will head down Atlantic Avenue to Border Street. Riders will continue down Border to Gannett Road. In North Scituate, the course makes a right on Main Street towards the Cohasset Town Common and continues to Cedar Street. Follow Cedar and turn right on Route 228. The final leg will take riders onto Jerusalem Road and finally back to the transition area at Sandy Beach.

The Run: A 3.2-mile run that will loop around Little Harbor. Runners will follow Nichols Road to Jerusalem Road and turn left. The course will take the runners around the Common to Beach Street. Runners will follow Beach Street to Atlantic Avenue with the finish just a short distance from the transition area.

How to register: The Triathlon reached capacity four days after registration opened. 850 individuals and 30 relay teams will compete.

Volunteers: Anybody 16 years of age or older is welcome to volunteer for this event. Sign up on the Cohasset Triathlon website at www.cohassettri.com or contact Catherine O'Callaghan at cathocal@aol.com or Suzie Montgomery at s.montgomery33@comcast.net.

Rusty Skippers and Conservatory's Adult Jazz Ensemble to perform together

South Shore Conservatory's Adult Education Program will present a jazz/pops concert at 6 p.m., on Saturday, June 20, in the Carr Amphitheater, 1 Conservatory Drive, Hingham. The adult music-making concert showcases the Conservatory's Adult Jazz Ensemble and the Rusty Skippers, a 30-piece concert band based in Cohasset.

Adult Jazz Ensemble, comprised of Mike Webber of Hingham, Eric Braun of Hanover, Karen Doherty of Hull, Jake Porter of Hanover, Ken Anderson of Weymouth, Alex Judge of Hanover and Ed Sorrentino of Braintree, has been performing throughout the South Shore over the past year, including the recent North River Arts Festival in Marshfield Hills. Their program includes traditional and contemporary jazz.

The Rusty Skippers play a pops-style program of marches, jazz, Broadway and light classical music. Among their June 20 selections will be Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever," a medley of Blues Brothers favorites and Holtz's "Jupiter from The Planets."

The Skippers appear annually at several events including South Shore Festival of the Arts, American Cancer Society Relay for Life and Cohasset Memorial Day Parade. Other venues include concert series at the Hanover Bandstand, Marshfield Town Green, St. Andrew Church in Hanover and the concert hall at Hingham's Linden Ponds.

Tickets are $5 at the door. Audience members are encouraged to bring a picnic dinner and enjoy the outdoor setting. Tables will be set up on the lawn, and seats are also available in the amphitheater pavilion.

Paul Carlson.

While Carlson recognized many citizens will have already decided how to cast their votes before arriving at Special Town Meeting, he encourages those who may not know all the nuances and issues involved to attend and listen to the discussion.

The article has a higher threshold to meet than most Town Meeting articles as a two-thrids majority vote is required to enact all zoning bylaw amendments.

Selectmen, the advisory committee and the planning board have yet to make their recommendations on this article.

The wind energy conversion facility bylaw, which passed unanimously at the 2008 Annual Town Meeting, made wind turbines a permitted use by special permit and establishes criteria in which projects are evaluated. The current zoning bylaw, which is about three-and-a-half pages long, establishes definitions specific to wind turbines and criteria on various aspects and impacts of the structure—height, setback, color, noise generation, visual impact, lighting and shadow flicker, to name a few.

The article will face opposition at Town Meeting. In letters to the editor this week, the Alternative Energy Committee, the primary force behind the drafting of the wind turbine bylaw, opposes the article. Members of the local environmental group Sustainable Cohasset have come out against the moratorium proposal.

When asked what he expected in terms of discussion and attendance, Planning Board Chairman Al Moore found himself at a bit of a loss.

"In my experience there hasn't been one of the these," Moore said, noting he has served on the board for about 20 years. "We could have trouble getting a quorum or it could be packed. It's pretty hard to tell."

With the anticipated uncertainty of the crowd, he said the planning board has erred on the side of caution in booking auditorium for their public hearing to be held on Wednesday, June 24, the night before Town Meeting. By state statute, the planning board must hold a public hearing before any proposed zoning bylaw changes are voted on by Town Meeting. Each of the public hearings on the Cohasset Heights wind turbine project proposal, which was denied by the planning board in early May, were attended by close to or more than 100 residents.

Members of the planning board have made no secret in previous meetings of their opposition to this process preferring a more deliberative process completed over a period of time.

"Zoning shouldn't be done on the fly," Moore said. Moore added a 45-day time period, the amount of time the state allows from the time citizen call a special Town Meeting to the time it takes place, is not the way to change zoning. He noted the state laws take that into account by given planning boards 65 days to hold a public hearing on zoning bylaw amendments.

He said the process could set a bad precedent for future zoning bylaw changes – when neighbors or residents are unhappy with some piece of zoning, they can try to "ram something through quickly" by means of calling a special Town Meeting.

Jeff Patterson, a citizen proponent for the article, said the article is not requesting zoning bylaw changes be made, but asking voters to give the town breathing room to assess the current bylaw without the threat of future applications being grandfathered in under the current bylaw.

Although the warrant article does not contain any set period of time where the bylaw would need to be revised, according to Patterson, it has always been the intention of the citizen's group to amend and improve the bylaw as soon as possible.

As an answer to some who have said the intent of the article is to get rid of the bylaw, an amendment is being drafted to reinstate the current bylaw as of Annual Town Meeting held in the spring 2010 if no amendments are proposed. The amendment will be made on the floor of Town Meeting, Patterson said.

Patterson, who was among those who vocally opposed the Cohasset Heights wind turbine project application during the Planning Board's public hearings and is one of the leaders in the citizen group Cohasset Wind Advisory Committee that started in opposition to the turbine project, added there are several general areas he and other proponents would like to see changed in the bylaw including: confirming the planning board's authority to place conditions and monitor those conditions over a period of time, confirming the planning board's authority to take into account the economic benefits and detriments to the town, adding in specific objective requirements to various aspects specific to wind turbines (shadow flicker, visual) and alignment with the state's Green Communities Act.

A lawyer himself, Patterson said the article as written or any article, for that matter, could be airtight as to not allow a wind turbines application in Cohasset.

"I can't guarantee this will stop all projects, but I think it makes sense to have a deliberative process to make the bylaw better," he said.

The applicant for the Cohasset Heights wind turbine project put forth by CCI-Energy, which was denied by the planning board in May, has already gotten approval for a "Form A" (approval not required, or ANR). Effectively that means the property will be immune to the moratorium and the current wind turbine bylaw will hold for that property for a period of three years.

Aside from the wind turbine issue, voters will be asked to revise a decision they made at the November 2008 Town Meeting.

For more than a year, the Cohasset Sports Partnership has been working to raise money for a turf field to replace the current natural grass Alumni Field at the high school. In that time, they have raised over $475,000 in private donations.

When the article passed at Town Meeting cost estimates were $1,050,000. Town Meeting voted to bond $500,000 to construct the field, if cash donations totaling $550,000 were raised.

Earlier this month the project went out to bid. The low bid came in at $950,000.

George McGoldrick, president of the Sports Partnership, said there is $25,000 contingency and, if not used, he expects both the town and the private donations to be equal contributors at $475,000.

The article requests Special Town Meeting to adjust the numbers to reflect the new estimate. If the article passes muster at Town Meeting McGoldrick said the turf field construction could begin in July and be ready for fall sports.

The Selectmen placed the article on the warrant, but have yet to vote on whether to recommend the article. They will discuss the article at their meeting Monday, June 22 meeting.

OPINION

Vote 'YES' – Clear, Rational, Reasonable

COMMENTARY

LORI LANGENHAGEN

Clear Objective

Place a temporary moratorium, up to nine months, on new wind turbine applications so that the wind bylaw can be reviewed and amended to address concerns and unintended consequences of the bylaw learned during the first application review.

The purpose is not to eliminate the wind bylaw, but to improve it with what we now know and make it a more objective tool that meets the needs of our town. A floor amendment will be proposed at the Town Meeting that will reinstitute the current bylaw after next year's spring Town Meeting if a revised bylaw isn't passed.

The purpose is not to throw away or invalidate the current bylaw, but to leverage current industry knowledge and learnings from the first turbine application to strengthen the bylaw. The AEC's good work on the bylaw will not be lost. Most of the bylaw should remain unchanged.

The proposed temporary moratorium has no impact on the Cohasset Heights project that was already proposed.

Rational and reasonable

What do we have to lose by taking a time out?

The town does not have any plans to commence a turbine project in the next year so what have we got to lose?

Ultimately, when/if a wind turbine application does get approved, it will be a major project and presence in the town for 20 to 30 years. Let's take the necessary time now (six to nine months) to make sure we have a by-law that is complete and comprehensive enough to define the standards that protect the interests and welfare of the town and residents.

This is a reasonable, no-risk approach to the bylaw. It would be irresponsible and shortsighted not to want to strengthen the bylaw for the benefit and welfare of the town and residents. We owe it to our neighbors and town to act responsibly, and right now that means taking the time to improve the bylaw.

Vote "Yes" in support of the moratorium on June 25 to ensure we won't just get wind power but we will get the "right" wind power.

Potential topics for discussion and change to the bylaw

Financial benefit – to ensure there is clear financial benefit to the town. We should have defined economic benefit, including advantageous energy benefits, as part of any permit. We should strive to require this of all applicants, not just the most recent applicant, CCI Energy.

Increased objectivity – to add, where possible based on a general consensus, objective language defining the general terms in the bylaw for flicker or shadow effect, noise and visual impact. There was significant discussion on these topics during the public hearing. For example, the bylaw says shadow flicker cannot be significant. What is significant? There are industry guidelines available that should be considered for the bylaw.

The language should address the standards for a single stand alone project as well as the standards for the cumulative effects of more complex, multiple application projects. The bylaw does not take into account existing turbines and how additional proposed turbines in the same area should be reviewed.

More clearly defined standards will not only benefit the town but also developers. The town will have greater assurance that a turbine or turbines will be consistent with the goals of the town. Developers will have a clearer understanding of what would and what would not be permissible. The risk of litigation should be reduced significantly for all stakeholders with clearer, more objective standards.

Safety setbacks – to ensure the placement of turbines will protect against toppling towers on nearby buildings or structures and to protect against broken blades, ice and other falling debris.

Comply with the Green Communities Act and Industry Safety Standards – the Green Communities Act has a program to provide technical and financial help (statewide) to promote renewable and alternative energy facilities. At a minimum, we should review our by-law against the standard for the Green Communities Act to determine whether it meets the standards.

Lori Langenhagen lives at 24 Sanctuary Pond Road, Cohasset.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

AEC recommends a 'no' vote

TO THE EDITOR:

As written, Cohasset residents are being asked to invalidate the vote of the 200-plus residents that took the time to attend and participate in spring Town Meeting 2008. Cohasset residents are being asked to overturn a unanimous vote. Nothing like this has ever been done before. Cohasset residents are also being asked to invalidate the work of the appointed/elected town officials that make up the Alternative Energy Committee, the Planning Board, the Zoning Board of Appeals, the Board of Selectman and the Advisory Board, all of whom worked for close to two years researching, writing and rewriting the current wind bylaw.

The most recent development regarding the proposed moratorium is an amendment that will be made on the floor of Town Meeting that will impose a six- to 12-month time limit on the proposed moratorium. Without this amendment, the warrant article, if passed, will effectively "sunset" or eliminate the Wind Bylaw. The AEC has heard this amendment proposed in public meetings and has read mention of it in the Mariner article "Reasonable approach to wind bylaw amendment" dated June 12, 2009, but as of Monday, June 15, has not been presented with a draft of this new wording. It seems unfair to town residents to not have the wording made available for review prior to Town Meeting.

It might appear that there is willingness on the part of the opponents to reach agreement at this time. However, it is important to note that after nine months of Planning Board hearings for the Cohasset Heights Wind Project, in which seven separate engineering firms presented their expert opinions and where the applicant relocated both turbines to better comply with the standards set forth by the current bylaw, the opposing group remains firmly opposed to the project.

In light of the extensive information that was made available to the Planning Board and in light of the fact that no agreement has been reached as yet, it is our concern that an additional six or 12 months of deliberations will not resolve the differences but stall the decision making of those whose obligation and responsibility it is to reach proper compromise and achieve consensus.

Cohasset Wind: perceptions and realities

COMMENTARY

SUSTAINABLE COHASSET

At Town Meeting in 2008, a wind bylaw, which allows for the consideration of wind turbines in Cohasset, passed with a majority vote and resounding audience applause. This bylaw represented the culmination of 28 months of rigorous due diligence and due process through various leadership bodies including the Selectmen, the Advisory Committee, the Zoning Board of Appeals, the Planning Board and Town Counsel.

When an actual project came before the Planning Board and a location for the turbine(s) was announced, a group of opponents came forth. In the midst of the debates and heated discussion, the key points of the project seemed to get lost. When dealing with something so pivotal to Cohasset's future, we felt a responsibility to make sure that every citizen has a clear understanding of the issues. We developed the following "top 10 perceptions and realities" so that citizens of Cohasset can be well-informed and do what is most important: show up and vote at Special Town Meeting on Thursday evening, June 25 at 7 p.m. in the CHS gym.

Financial Benefits

Perception: Cohasset will not benefit financially from the recently-proposed wind turbines.

Reality: In lieu of taxes, the developer has agreed to pay the Town $78,000 per year. Also, all Town buildings will receive electricity at below-retail rates. Conservative estimates average around $250,000 annual benefit to the Town.

Energy Contract

Perception: The Developer has not formally committed to an energy contract with the Town.

Reality: Although the Selectmen could not meet with the developer before the Planning Board approved the application, the developer has gone on public record at Planning Board hearings with the offer of an energy contract with the Town.

Property Values

Perception: Property values in Cohasset will suffer if any wind turbines are erected here.

Reality: There is no hard evidence, as of yet, of the impact of turbines on property values. The best example to date is the town of Hull, where initially there was a reduction in property values as abutters sold their properties at reduced prices in anticipation of a perceived loss in value. Recent sales data show that abutting properties enjoy current market values.

Wind Viability

Perception: The potential of wind energy is too trivial to replace oil as our chief source of energy.

Reality: Our energy sources are already a mix: Approximately 50 percent of our energy is generated by coal, 25 percent by oil, and the remaining 25 percent a mixture of wind, solar and bio-fuels. The mix is already changing and new technologies are being developed and made more cost-effective. The coastal northeast, with its conditions highly favorable to wind energy, must invest in this, as a critical part of our mix.

Moratorium

Perception: The proposed Article, effectively a moratorium on the bylaw permitting wind turbines in Cohasset, is only temporary.

Reality: By the very definition of the word, one would infer that the proposed moratorium on the wind bylaw is a temporary hold on building turbines in Cohasset. In reality, the article, if passed, will disallow any application or consideration of a wind turbine, now or ever.

Turbine Height

Perception: Cohasset's proposed turbines will be the tallest in the State.

Reality: For a time, this will be true. Many Cohasset residents will be proud of this addition to our landscape, representing as it does a big step toward greater sustainability in every town. The proposed turbines would be 100 meters or 328 feet from the base to the nacelle or rotor. This is the wind industry standard for measurement. The height of the blades are 48 meters, making the distance form the base to the top of the blades 480 feet. It is interesting to note that Hull Wind II at 80 meters is functioning at only 23 percent of capacity; 100 meters is becoming the wind industry standard because more height creates more energy and greater efficiency.

Green Communities

Perception: Cohasset's wind turbine bylaw does not comply with the Green Communities Act.

Reality: This is true. The Green Communities Act requires that towns have a "by right" ordinance that allows turbines to be developed without having to go through a special permit process. Our wind bylaw is more protective of our community, as it allows for conditions to be imposed by the Town's governing authority: the Planning Board.

The Bylaw

Perception: The wind bylaw is flawed because it did not receive adequate input from the community.

Reality: The Town-appointed Alternative Energy Committee (AEC) based their development of the bylaw on the MA State Electrical Compact and the Cape Light Compact. The bylaw was crafted over a 28-month period, beginning in November, 2006, and was presented for review and commentary to the following parties: the Selectmen, the Advisory Committee, the Zoning Board of Appeals, the Planning Board and Town Counsel. The bylaw was unanimously approved at the spring, 2008, Town Meeting.

The Developer

Perception: The Town should have its own wind turbine and not let a private developer benefit from our valuable wind resources.

Reality: The cost to the Town, if we were to put up our own turbine at the landfill, is estimated at $3.5 to $4 million. The Town's Bond rating would be impacted by this financial commitment. One advantage of privately developed wind energy generation is that the Town would receive the $250,000 annual income without the capital investment.

Affluence

Perception: Cohasset is an affluent town that need not concern itself with alternate sources of energy.

Reality: From a practical standpoint, energy shortages are expected in the next few years. From a financial standpoint, Cohasset is vulnerable to rising energy demands, placing additional risk of burden on our already-constrained budget.

Deep Run island spruced up with lilac trees

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Little Harbor Project – This past week, the project replanted the island on Deep Run with two ivory lace lilac trees and the island was loamed and seeded. These are the same type of tree that the Town has planted near the intersection of Elm and Main streets in the center of the village. As of right now, they are covered with flower buds and should be in full bloom within the next week or so. Take a look at them if you have a chance.

We have included a photo of the drainage structure at the edge of Jerusalem Road, near #365, to which the Hydroguard in the center of the road will be connected. In the photo, the scale and perspectives are hard to see, but near the base of the ladder is a hole in the side of the cylindrical concrete manhole structure. That hole is about eight feet below the steel plates sitting on the road, shown at the top of the photo. This hole is where the pipe from the Hydroguard will connect. Also, notice the two groups of horizontal cables in the center of the photo. These cables supply power to the homes in the area, one of which is high voltage rated at 4,000 volts. These cables are just typical of in-the-ground obstacles that the construction crews must to work around.

Little Harbor Project paving update – This current week we had more paving scheduled for Thursday, June 18th. However, for the third time, the paving contractor has called with last minute changes in their paving schedule. This is unacceptable to the Town. We are currently working with alternate paving suppliers that will be more responsible going forward. There is too much paving that needs to be completed to attempt to rely on a paver that can't meet the Town's commitments.

More tree happenings this past week – Ordinarily, trees would not seem to be a very interesting story. But, like Paul Harvey used to say, "Now for the rest of the story." There are two parts to this tree story. Back early in the spring we commented about two trees in the village that had been severely hit and consequently damaged by motorists who then absconded into the night without owning up to their damage.

One was a beautiful white lace lilac tree in front of Atlantic Brokerage that someone actually hit and smashed so badly it was nearly flat on the sidewalk. The DPW had to remove the tree to clear the sidewalk. The other tree, a zelcova, was hit by a truck (we think) that totally wiped out the MIA POW sign on the memorial island on Depot Court at the South Shore Community Center. If you looked at the tree you could see scrapes about five feet up on its trunk and might think that the tree might survive the damage. But, close inspection showed that the tree had been bent so far over that it had been broken half-way through at the bottom and was cracked about three feet vertically up the middle. Even though this tree did get its leaves this spring, its long term chances were not as good as a healthy tree, according to Cohasset's tree warden.

You may notice a dark green bag at the base of each of these new trees. That is an ingenious watering device.

This past week, the Town had both of these trees replaced with the same type of tree that was there before the accidents. The new ivory lace lilac tree is just ready to burst into blossom. Within the next week you should be able to enjoy the delicate white lilac blossoms on the new tree as well as the other two lilac trees that extend further down Elm Street. (Don't you think that it sounds anachronistic planting lilac trees on Elm Street?)

You may notice a dark green bag at the base of each of these new trees. That is an ingenious watering device. These bags zip around the tree trunk and when filled with water, let a small amount of water trickle into the soil at the tree base. These are especially useful in areas with soil that dries out easily. We have asked that these be used on these transplanted trees to help them have a better chance of survival.

Another bit of civic pride – There is a forlorn island between the "in" and "out" driveways of the main Town Parking Lot, which up to now has been sort of a no man's island. Recently, the Chamber of Commerce has taken this island under its wing. Last weekend a group of C of C volunteers spent time clearing the island of weeds and debris to prepare it for bigger and better things. We must admit it looks better already.

Gas company work – Last week and this week National Grid (gas) spent time redoing the gas mains on Beach Street. Currently, National Grid is working on South Main Street and on Lincoln Lane. This South Main Street area work should take about 11 days. National Grid has undertaken a planned renewal of some of their most troublesome underground gas mains. We'll talk more later about their ongoing plans in other parts of town.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Proposed bylaw amendment is a 'Trojan horse'

TO THE EDITOR:

One has to suspend all belief to listen to the latest pitch by the opponents of wind projects in Cohasset (or at least any project within their view).

At the Advisory Committee meeting two weeks ago, the same people who have distributed flyers, written letters, and proclaimed vociferously at multiple public hearings that the proposed Cohasset Heights Project was going to cause all sorts of damage to the town and their neighborhood are now stating that the project is (and I quote) "as good as it gets." That's got to upset the citizens they convinced otherwise to sign their petition.

Assuring the Advisory Committee that they have no intention of affecting the proposed project and that they actually support wind energy projects in Cohasset, their argument for the suspension of the town's wind energy bylaw is that they want to (a) provide certainty for developers seeking to permit wind projects in town, and (b) make it less time consuming for the Planning Board to evaluate such projects. Their approach is to add more conditions, and they have already drafted over 30 of them, to the existing bylaw which is currently 3.5 pages of mostly 10-point type.

What are some of those proposed conditions? They say they are the same ones they seek to impose on Cohasset Heights: Require turbines to be turned off seven hours a day for four summer months out of the year because the projected noise outside the windows at the nearest residences would be less than rustling leaves (based on modeling done using winter conditions) and in the Rose Hill neighborhood could be the sound of a whisper (if you can hear it over 3A traffic). And since noise is even less of a valid concern in the winter because windows are closed, they propose turning off the turbines whenever the temperature drops below 35 degrees. They propose requiring any developer to escrow 1.5 times the total construction cost for the life of the project (making it 2.5 times as expensive to construct a turbine in Cohasset) on the assumption that deconstruction is more expensive than construction. While it's against the law to do so, they propose requiring a project to provide "a total minimum annual financial benefit to Cohasset to be 1 percent of the town budget – until the turbines are taken down" and to "escrow funds for payments so town is assured payment." (Just think, with 100 projects we could cancel property taxes and have an unlimited town budget.)

With conditions like these, they will accomplish both of their goals as it would be certain that no one would seek to build a wind project in Cohasset and hence the Planning Board would save 100 percent of its time that might be devoted to reviewing any such project. With results like this and a name like Cohasset Wind Advisory Committee, clearly they are looking out for the best interests of the town. (Reminds one of the "Environmental Literacy Council" funded by ExxonMobil.)

It's amazing that the two years of research and work that the Alternative Energy Committee, the Planning Board, the Selectmen, the Advisory Committee, the Zoning Board of Appeals, Town Counsel, the Massachusetts Attorney General's Office, and other interested citizens (but obviously not these concerned citizens who were not then interested) put into the current bylaw did not come up with these stellar suggestions. For unbiased background on the process, see the statement of the Alternative Energy Committee at http://www.townofcohasset.org/AlternativeEnergyCommittee/AECresponsetotownresidentquestions.pdf.

Given that the currently proposed project is "as good as it gets," what projects are the proponents so concerned about that they call for a Special Town Meeting to impose a "temporary moratorium" on new permits? Yes, the town has talked about doing its own project but that is not going to happen in the near future and any such project would have to come before a Town Meeting anyway. Avalon, originally opposed to having a wind project near its property, is now considering "greening" its proposed housing in Cohasset, but is moving slowly on any development given the state of the economy and the weak housing market. And the Trustees of the Reservation, an organization well respected for its concern about the environment and aesthetics, has started looking at wind at Turkey Hill; of course, all they have to do is move the site 20 yards to have it Hingham rather than Cohasset.

How nice of the opponents to be willing to assist (at this late date) the town. Sure their proposal looks good. Who could be against more study and improvements? Fortunately, the Advisory Committee saw through their ruse. One does not do fine tuning with a sledgehammer. Their call for "suspending the bylaw" has the effect of killing the bylaw, not addressing any perceived flaws. Only after they kill the bylaw would they agree to "work with the appropriate town bodies."

Without a plan for proceeding and without any deadlines (they call a deadline "counterproductive to the expeditious redrafting"), Cohasset does not have a wind bylaw. Without a wind bylaw, Cohasset will lose benefits otherwise available to it under the Green Communities Act. Without a wind bylaw, Cohasset may very well lose control of its siting decisions to the state which has proposed "as-of-right" siting for wind facilities. So rather than leave decisions to duly elected representatives in Cohasset who have demonstrated an amazing willingness and ability to grasp the details and deal with concerns of our residents, we could be dealing with state appointees with an agenda.

The proposed bylaw amendment is a Trojan horse offering – don't let it pass through the gates at Town Meeting. Reject it and allow Cohasset to address any potential issues with wind development in the proper manner and through the proper processes.

The opponents of wind will say I am biased and they are absolutely correct. For over 30 years I've helped to develop and finance energy projects in 19 states. But none is more exciting and rewarding than the Cohasset Heights Project which seeks to supply 100 percent renewable, non-polluting and locally generated energy to the town I've called home for 28 of those years.

Repeal the Wind Energy Bylaw? Really?

TO THE EDITOR:

Why do we have a wind energy bylaw? The overwhelming consensus is that renewable energy is an essential component to our national security as well as our economic and environmental well-being. However, in Cohasset as elsewhere, traditional zoning codes prohibit wind turbines. The 2005 Annual Town Meeting voted to create the Alternative Energy Committee to look into this. The AEC worked with the Board of Selectmen, the Advisory Committee, the Planning Board, and the Zoning Board of Appeals, took advantage of state assistance, held public hearings, solicited a variety of views and received a great deal of information, and also did its own independent research. For more information, see http://www.townofcohasset.org/AlternativeEnergyCommittee/AECresponsetotownresidentquestions.pdf) After almost three years of work and collaboration, the AEC proposed a wind energy bylaw that balanced environmental policy, community protection, and commercial feasibility. The Planning Board submitted the AEC's proposed bylaw to the Annual Town Meeting last year. The bylaw was recommended and adopted virtually unanimously.

What does the current wind energy bylaw contain? The wind bylaw designates several areas of town where wind turbines may be located, and addresses a variety of areas of concern, such as noise, shadow flicker, setback, height, and visual impact. The only location with active interest is Scituate Hill, an area set back from Route 3A that for many decades has been devoted to industrial and commercial uses. It is the location of a Cohasset water tank and the closed Cohasset Heights landfill.

If adopted, what would the warrant article do? It would repeal the wind bylaw. Not a "time-out," a "moratorium," or a "sunset," but an immediate repeal of the three years of work by the AEC. No wind energy will be generated. The town will lose the opportunity to purchase electricity at a discount. And without a bylaw, Cohasset becomes vulnerable to the proposed Chapter 40T, which emphasizes state approvals over local control.

Why such a hasty repeal of a bylaw adopted unanimously just a year ago? The proponents say the Planning Board's public hearings for the CCI Energy project on Scituate Hill, the first and only wind energy project considered so far, showed that the current bylaw gives the Planning Board insufficient guidance and needs to contain more specifics.

Is that true? There was, of course, a learning curve in applying a new bylaw to the first wind project. But the Planning Board synthesized its own research and consideration with information from the project sponsor and comments from the public, and developed an understanding of wind energy, turbines, the potential negative impacts on the community, and how to apply the bylaw to a particular project. Members of the Planning Board spent many hours observing the turbines in Hull and talking to residents of Hull, especially those living near the turbines, to understand the community's actual experience living with wind turbines.

The Planning Board rejected the CCI Energy project. However, the Planning Board made it clear any approval would have included extensive conditions addressing noise, shadow flicker, visual impact, setback, etc., just as the bylaw provides.

Bottom Line: Should we repeal the wind bylaw? All of the reasons in 2005 for encouraging renewable wind energy remain—global warming and sea level rising; dangerous dependence on foreign oil; air and water pollution. There are new ones as well—the recent Green Communities Act allows Cohasset to buy electricity at a discount from local turbines and gives a strong incentive to the developers to sell at a discount. There are reasonable, thoughtful people who oppose wind energy in Cohasset—some people object to the visual impact; people who live very close may experience a little noise and shadow flicker at certain times of the day on certain days of the year; some people support only wind energy farms in remote locations; and some people would emphasize more production of domestic oil and domestic coal.

The bylaw was developed over a period of almost three years of public hearings, recommended by the Planning Board, the Board of Selectmen, and the Advisory Committee, and then adopted unanimously at Town Meeting only one year ago. This suggests that the bylaw is not "deeply flawed" and that there is no emergency. Whether you agreed with the three members of the Planning Board who voted in favor of issuing the CCI Energy permit or the one member who voted against (four votes were required), there was little doubt the existing bylaw gave the Planning Board the customary tools of a zoning bylaw to make the same kind of decision that the Planning Board and Zoning Board of Appeals make all the time. If the people behind the repeal want to try to persuade the town to repeal the wind bylaw, or adjust the balance of interests in the bylaw a little this way or that way, that is perfectly appropriate. But let's vote responsibly, after there is a full airing of the supposed flaws, after all of the town boards have had the time to consider the issues and make recommendations, and after we as a community have had an opportunity to consider and formulate our own opinions. And let's vote at an Annual Town Meeting, which will better reflect the views of the entire town, rather than a special purpose town meeting arranged by one energetic, partisan group.

Vote against the repeal now and make your decision when you have all of the facts.

Lauren Cook's Second Grade Students • Osgood School

My dad is very special. He has brown hair, blue eyes and he's pretty tall. My dad is as cool as science. He's like a sport player, a good worker and a good cook. My dad works at Sunguard and he has a lot of meetings. At home my dad mows the lawn and he helps me practice for my baseball games. Some of my favorite things to do with him are playing catch, playing games and fishing. My dad makes me feel loved because he gives me hugs and kisses and says, "I love you." My dad is the best dad ever!

Sam Albino

My dad is the best dad in the world!!! He is tall and he has brownish-blond hair and blue-gray eyes like me. My dad is smart, nice and funny. He cooks for the Boston Celtics- It's awesome! At home he helps in the yard and he plants new bushes. My dad helps me reach high things. I like to go shopping with my dad at the plaza. I like it when my dad watches Sponge Bob with me; after it's over he says, "Are you my Sponge Bob?" I say, "NO!" The other favorite thing I like is when we go to Storyland and my dad goes on the fish ride with me. My dad makes me feel special when he says, "Good job!" I feel loved when he tucks me in at night. I LOVE MY DAD!!!

Grace Czajak

My dad is so cool in so many ways. He is tall and he has blue eyes and he has a friendly smile. He has black hair and it's kind of spiky like a porcupine. My dad is awesome, funny and smart. He's as funny as a squirting flower! For work he sells software to people. At home he always helps my mom with the dishes. My dad always helps me with my baseball playing, hitting and catching. Whenever I get hurt my dad always helps me. My favorite thing to do with him is play baseball and I love when he takes me to Red Sox games. I also like to watch sports on TV with him; especially baseball and hockey. Sometimes I get in really big trouble with him; but no matter what- I love my dad! I love my dad so much!!!

Charlie Devin

My dad is the best! He is very tall and he has dark brown hair and blue eyes. He is as smart as Mr. Harvard. He is always very happy and he is very funny, too. He's as funny as Terry Francona trying to coach a football team! My dad works at home on Fridays and in Boston the rest of the week. His company buys other companies to sell. At home he works on a lot of the electronic stuff that needs fixing and he does yard work. My dad helps me practice baseball and soccer and he also helps me with my homework. I like to go on our boat with my dad and I love when he takes me to Red Sox games. I feel special when my dad calls me 'Finn Do' and when he brings me to my sports. My dad is awesome!

Finn Doherty

My dad is the best dad in the whole world! He has brown eyes, brown hair and he's very tall and very-very handsome! My dad is funny and cool. He is as strong as the strongest person in the whole world. My dad gets up really early to go to work in Boston. When he gets home from work he takes our dog Coco for walks. When I am lifting something really heavy he helps me lift it. My dad helps me with my homework all the time. I love to go to the dump with my dad. It's really fun to play board games with him and I love when we watch movies together. My dad makes me feel special when he calls me Princess, Cupcake and Liz-za. I feel loved when he kisses me and says, "I love you." I love my dad so-so-so much! He is awesome, "YES, HE IS!"

Lizzie Donahue

My dad is the best dad in the world. He is kind of tall and has gray hair and a little mustache. My dad is funny and smart and serious. He is as nice as a fun day of fishing! My dad works at the Boston Globe and he writes papers. At home my dad takes out the trash and mows the grass. My dad helps me when I can't do something and when I learn something new he helps me do it. I like when my dad takes me fishing and boating. I like when he plays baseball and football with me, too. My dad makes me feel special when he takes me on our boat. I feel loved because before my dad goes to work he gives me a hug and says, "I love you." My dad is awesome!

Joe Donoghue

My Dad is the best dad anyone can get. He is very handsome and he has a nice smile. He has good hair; it's black and flat...but cool. He is very smart and very funny. My dad has the biggest heart of anyone I know. He is really loving and he never gives up on stuff. Every night when my dad's at work I really miss him. When he gets home everyone gets excited so I go up to him and hug him. He works very hard at everything he does. When he babysits us it's hard work. There are six kids in my family but he still does it! When one of us needs help my dad always helps them. My dad helped me make my timeline for my very first Power Point at school; I'm working on Albert Einstein. I love watching TV with him and I like when he plays games with me. I love when my dad takes me with him somewhere-anywhere, "JUST ME!" Sometimes he takes me out to breakfast, lunch, or dinner. I love that! I feel loved when my dad calls me 'Caleigh-Waleigh' and when he hugs and kisses me. I love my dad because he's as nice as a puppy. I love him so-so much!

Caleigh Durkin

My dad is the best ever! His hair is as dark as a black lab and he has tan skin. My dad is as funny as the funniest joke on earth. He is as cool as Tony Hawk. He is really good at skiing. My dad is a doctor and he takes care of people who are sick. When I'm sick with a sore throat he gives me ice cream. At home my dad helps by mowing the lawn and cleaning the yard. Sometimes my dad helps me with my homework and sometimes he plays catch with me. I really like when he takes me to Red Sox games and when he plays basketball with me. When we go to Maine I like going in the boat, fishing, and walking around the island with him. My dad makes me feel special when he calls me "Bud-Bud" and when he plays games with me. If I do a good job pitching he gives me a 'high-five' and says, "Great job!" and that makes me feel good. My dad makes me feel loved when he tucks me in at night and when he says, "I love you." My dad is an awesome dad!

Aaron Froio

My Uncle Keith is special to me. He has light brown hair and he's big and strong. Uncle Keith is smart and caring. For work he saws wood and at home he helps wash dishes and helps take care of the kids. Uncle Keith helps me with my homework and he helps me set the table. I love when we play chess and when he tickles me. Uncle Keith makes me feel loved when he gives me a hug. Uncle Keith is a special dad because he's nice.

Megan Guglielmini

My dad is great. He has curly brownish-gray hair, brown eyes and he has a great big smile. My dad is funny, caring and kind-hearted. For work my dad sells clothes and he also works to keep the town pool clean. My dad helps at home when he washes the dishes and sometimes he cooks dinner. He helps me with my homework and he helps me get up when I get hurt. I like to go swimming with my dad. Sometimes when the town pool isn't opened, my brother and I get to swim in it. I like when he watches movies with me and when we have a tickle war. My dad makes me feel special when he calls me 'Pooch' and when he snuggles with me. I feel loved when my dad hugs me and says "I love you." I love my dad so much!!!

Abbey Johnson

My dad is the best dad in the world. He is tall and he has gray hair and brown eyes. He is very-very smart because he knows a lot about baseball cards. When he is looking for old baseball cards on the computer he's like a detective. My dad works in Wilmington. He is the boss of his work. At home he cooks for us on the weekends and he cuts the grass on weekends. He is nice to me and always helpful. My dad helps me sort my baseball cards and sometimes helps me with my homework. I like when my dad plays baseball cards and catch with me. My dad makes me feel special when I'm at soccer. When I'm playing my game and get a goal he shouts, "Way to go Tommy K!" I love my dad...Even more than my baseball cards!

Thomas Kierce

My dad is the nicest dad in the world. He has dark brown hair and brown eyes. He has soft skin that is as tan as the sand on a very sandy beach. My dad is really nice, very helpful and super smart. For work he delivers oil in Abington. His record is 53 miles, but I do not know from where to there. At home my dad mows the lawn and does the laundry. My dad helps me a lot with my math homework. He also helps me when we go lobstering with my Papa because my dad helps me put rubber bands on the lobsters' claws. My dad and I like to go bowling together. Once he took us to a zoo in Rhode Island and it was sooo much fun! My dad makes me feel loved when he spends time with me and when he says, "I love you." My dad is the best dad in the universe!

Hannah Laugelle

My dad is awesome. He has dark brown hair, brown eyes and he has a goatee. My dad is as smart as Albert Einstein. He is very nice and caring. My dad works for Engineered Solutions. At home he helps with the yard and he helps me with my pitching. My dad is coach for my soccer team. My favorite things to do with my dad are playing baseball and watching TV. I like when my dad plays MLB Power Pros against me. My dad and I like playing pranks on my mom and my brother Stephen! The thing that makes me the happiest is when my dad takes me to a Red Sox game. He makes me feel loved and special when he hugs me when I go to bed. I love my dad a lot!

Turner Martell

My dad is the best! He is very tall and his skin is really tan from the sun. He has brown eyes that are as tan as his body. His smile is as wide as the world. My dad's a loving dad. He's as caring as my two dogs but he gives me even more love than that. He gives love the size of the universe. My dad loves XBOX-360. He's crazed with it! My dad works for #1 Redman Construction workers. He's the #1 worker! My dad does the dishes sometimes. He taught me how to ride a two-wheeler bike. I like when my dad plays with me and I love when he takes us camping. My dad makes me happy because he loves me and my family (of course) A LOT! My dad says, "I love you" all the time. My dad gets me everything- So on this paper I want to say, "Thank you Dad" and "I love you!"

Katrina McCann

My dad is awesome. He has green eyes, he is kind of tall and he is bald. My dad is as strong as King Kong! He is funny and really cool and really nice. My dad works in Boston. He is a business man. At home he helps when he does the dishes and cuts the lawn. My dad helps me with my homework and he helps me get better in sports. He is one of the coaches on my baseball team. I really like playing whiffle ball and lacrosse with him. I love when he takes me for ice cream. My dad makes me feel special when he tells me I did a good job on something; like when I bring home a good spelling test. He makes me feel loved when he tucks me in at night and says he loves me. My dad is the best dad in the world!

Judge Murphy

My dad is the best dad in the world! He is tall and he has brown hair and he has brown eyes, just like me. My dad is thoughtful, understanding and helpful. He is as funny as a bear wearing a bikini! He works for a wine company and he sells wine. My dad goes away on business trips a lot. When he's home he helps clean up the yard and gardens. My dad helps me with my problems. I like when my dad takes my brother and me camping. I like to play baseball with him. I like to go fishing with him on the island in the harbor. My dad makes me feel loved when we are talking outside on the porch. He makes me feel loved when he tucks me in at night and hugs me and says, 'Good night.' My dad is the best dad in the whole wide world!

Lucie Novelline

My dad is the BEST! He has black hair, bluish-greenish eyes and he looks really tall. He is as nice as a lobster dinner! He's funny and fun to play with, too! My dad works in a tall building and sells stuff. He helps at home by taking out the trash. My dad is a really good skier and he teaches me everything he knows. He helps me with projects and he helps me when I'm fishing; like if I can't get the hook out of the fish he does it and he helps me untangle lines, too. My favorite things to do with my dad is going fishing with him and going on vacation with him. My dad makes me feel special when he tells me I'm the best person in the world. I feel loved when he says, "I love you" and gives me a hug. I think my dad is the BEST dad in the world!!!

Cole Speer

My dad is like a dream come true! He's the best dad ever. He has blue eyes, white skin and a great big smile. He is as loving as a puppy. He is a great swimmer and he's a wonderful chef. My dad works at home and in Boston. He grows the grass and moves heavy things. He helps me with my homework and my problems. I like to go to the beach with my dad and I like when he plays Sorry with me. I love to go on boat rides with him. My dad makes me feel special and loved when he calls me 'Soph' and when he hugs me. My dad always says, "Good job" when I get something right. My dad is better than a pot of gold! I love my dad!!!

Sophie Swartwood

My dad is my super hero! He's really good looking and very tall. He has black hair, big hands and really cool thumbs. My dad is loving, really-really nice and always helpful. He is funnier than a clown! He always does funny things to me and my friends; like he makes scary noises and he tells us jokes. For work my dad is an engineer. We love science. At home we do chemistry and experiments. When I grow up I want to be a scientist or engineer, too. My dad helps me do the recycling and he helps me with my homework. He helps the family by making all the food in the house. I love it when my dad plays games like Megazord with me. The most fun is when my dad runs around the house and catches me and then he picks me up and tickles me. We have a lot of fun!!! My dad is awesome! I feel loved when my dad calls me 'Bunny' and when he gives me big hugs and tells me he loves me. My dad is as nice as a flower on a beautiful summer day! My dad is the best!!!

Ally Tolosko

My dad is loving for my family. He has green eyes, brown hair and he looks like a fast runner. My dad is as nice as an ice cream cone! He is kind and helpful. My dad is the sales manager at Coastal Nissan in Cohasset. At home my dad mows the lawn. My dad helps me with my homework and when I'm sad he makes me feel better. My dad always plays with me. He helps me practice baseball. When we play catch he is so nice. He hits pop flies at a baseball field and I have to catch them. When we go to Red Sox games my dad always gets me stuff. I like when we walk our dog and when I ride my bike my dad runs with me. My dad makes me feel special when he says he's proud of me. I feel loved when he says, "I love you" and when he gives me hugs. My dad is awesome!

Swine flu claims first fatality

HEALTH NOTES

S.N. Bobo

This week, the state had its first swine flu fatality. It marks perhaps the latest and strangest manifestation of the annual flu season. Each year, Massachusetts citizens are beset by the flu virus with about a thousand illnesses, four or five deaths and much discomfort; coughs, aches and pains but generally few serious side effects. This year, however, flu outbreak has been different. In April, Massachusetts had two of 66 cases nationwide. Today there are more than 1,200 statewide with one death and 80 hospitalizations, mostly in children and young adults. Generally the elder population is beset with symptoms and by and large, flu season is over by April. This year, it's June and we are in the midst of a flu pandemic worldwide, the first in 40 years. The northeastern states are being particularly hard hit with Massachusetts and New York faring the worst.

Moreover, the appearance of both swine flu and seasonal flu strains are taxing the supply and availability of medications and equipment to cope with the large number of illnesses. Disease specialists fear that the appearance of both swine flu and regional flu strains could sorely strain the nation's healthcare system, which have faced supply shortages since the first cases of swine flu were diagnosed. In the early days of the epidemic, Massachusetts doctors have reported that some patients had trouble getting prescriptions filled for Tamiflu — the main medication used to treat the novel virus — as drug-store reserves ran low. As a result, the state Department of Public Health distributed enough antiviral medication from its stockpile to treat the flu or prevent it in 53,000 patients. Some hospitals have reported that surgical masks, used to slow the virus transmission, have been in short supply and difficult to replace. Even the basic swab ran scarce as the state initially asked physicians to collect two nose or throat samples from patients with suspected cases of the disease.

We are repeating April's plea to do your part in the current health crisis by following a list of recommendations from the National Center for Disease Control (http://www.cdc.gov/swineflu/). Use common-sense precautions to keep from getting and spreading the flu.

1. Wash your hands often with soap and water or with an alcohol-based hand sanitizer.

2. Cough or sneeze into a tissue or into your elbow instead of into your hands.

3. If you're sick, stay home from work or school and limit contact with others to avoid infecting them.

One of the most disturbing characteristics of this pandemic is its similarity to the 1918 Spanish flu epidemic. In August, 2007, Health Notes carried a description of the progress of a flu virus which killed over 40 million people worldwide and infected one fifth of the world's population. The article also told of the part a ship, the USS Cohasset, played in the event.

The 1918 pandemic was different in degree, but not in kind, from the ongoing pandemic. Despite the extraordinary number of global deaths, most influenza cases in 1918 were mild and essentially indistinguishable from influenza cases today. However, some characteristics of the pandemic appear unique: death rates were 5–20 times higher than expected, apparently the result of a higher proportion of severe and complicated infections of the respiratory tract. Also, the deaths were concentrated in an unusually young age group. Finally, in 1918, three separate recurrences of influenza followed each other with unusual rapidity, resulting in three explosive pandemic waves within a year's time. Finally, both humans and swine were infected simultaneously.

There is no reason to expect an unusually large mortality or any other severe conditions to result from the current pandemic, but it would be unwise not to be aware of the potential scope of a seemingly simple illness like the flu.

Letters to the Editor

Trustees of Reservations support current bylaw

To the Editor:

I am writing to urge you to attend the Special Town Meeting on June 25, where residents of Cohasset will vote on whether to place a moratorium on the town's wind energy bylaw. The Trustees of Reservations supports the current bylaw and opposes the moratorium. As a member of The Trustees, I hope you will consider making your voice heard on this crucial issue.

The Trustees are dedicated to preserving the Massachusetts landscape for everyone to enjoy, forever. We care for more than 100 special places, like World's End and Whitney and Thayer Woods. Climate change is one of the greatest threats to the natural lands we care for across the state. The changing climate is already impacting the plant and animal communities that define our properties, and rising sea levels will dramatically impact our coastal lands.

We need concerted action to slow climate change. The Trustees believe the production of renewable energy is one of many critical steps that society must take to combat this global threat. Without the active participation of everyone and every community we run he risk of forever altering the nature of our communities and the special places that define them.

The construction of local wind power turbines and other sources of clean, renewable energy is a critical part of the effort to preserve our natural heritage and reduce the toll that global climate change will take on the vitality of our lands and waters. If wind power is to play a meaningful role in slowing the rate of climate change, we must encourage participation by the public, nonprofit and for profit sectors. None of the three can do it alone.

Last March, Cohasset Town Meeting took a leadership position by voting unanimously to enact a forward-looking bylaw to encourage wind development in the community. Please participate in the June 25 Special Town Meeting and consider supporting your favorite woodlands, meadows and beaches.

Please do not hesitate to contact me if you have questions about The Trustees' position on wind power and its impacts and benefits. This is an important dialogue, and we value your thoughts and ideas.

Supporter of wind power

To the Editor:

What is at the heart of the near paranoia and strong emotions that seem to permeate discussions of the Cohasset Heights Wind Turbine project? I attended most of the public Planning Board meetings to inform myself of the issues and to understand the concerns of our community.

On the surface many questions seemed to be reasonable concerns about "flicker," ice throw, blade noise and tower safety. On these issues I was very impressed with the responsiveness and thoroughness of the developer and the consultants in conducting detailed engineering studies and reporting the results. They all seemed to bend over backward to take these concerns seriously and apply the best available analyses.

However, in the Planning Board meetings, most of those Cohasset residents opposing the project seemed more concerned with the esthetic qualities (visual impact) of the turbines. I have to admit that I am totally unable to understand that concern, probably because I happen to think that wind turbines are beautiful. I had the impression that some people felt that if they gazed on a turbine they would turn into a pillar of salt!

Reading "between the lines," I came to feel that the real fear of those opposing the project was that the turbines would adversely affect their property values. This argument I also find difficult to understand. After all, the Graham Waste Site is zoned for industrial development, and it is difficult to see what sort of industrial development could have less impact on surrounding property values than two benign wind turbines.

Since the potential physical problems associated with the turbines (noise, etc.) appear insignificant and the esthetic concerns are in the eye of the beholder, what is the fallback strategy for the project's opponents? The new strategy is the proposed wind bylaw amendment. But this amendment, misleadingly advertised as a "moratorium," is a thinly disguised attempt to keep wind turbines out of Cohasset, forever.

From a strictly financial point of view the Cohasset Heights Wind Turbine project is a good deal; the town does not have to put up any money and will get $250,000 in fees and electricity rate benefits per year (a conservative estimate).

However, the real reason that I support wind power in Cohasset has nothing to do with the financial benefits. I want my town to do its part to set an example in the fight against human-induced climate change. Cohasset is lucky to have a clean energy resource. Let's join with other communities to move away from fossil fuels and toward a sustainable energy future.

Please come to the Town Meeting on June 25 and vote "no" on the article to ban wind turbines in Cohasset.

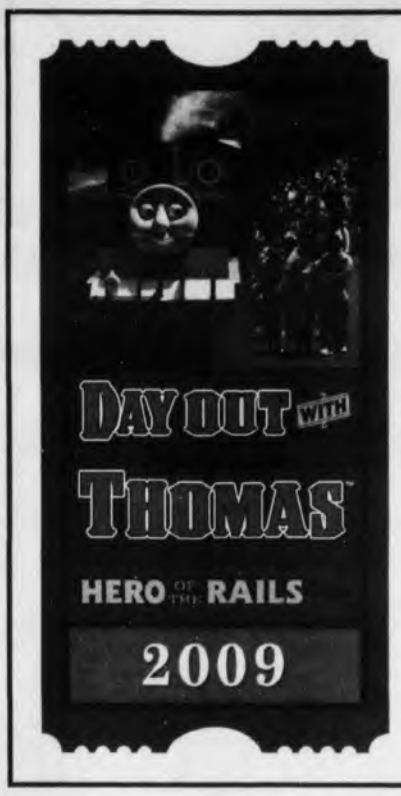
Lax Jam a success

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Cohasset Lacrosse Boosters, I want to thank everyone in our community who helped make our 4th Annual South Shore Lax Jam another tremendous success and showcase for Cohasset Youth Lacrosse. On June 14, we hosted one of the largest boys youth lacrosse events at Milliken and Alumni fields. One long day of non-stop action which features 38 teams from a dozen different towns with over 700 players and their families. We had equipment vendors, skills contests, raffles, summer camp sponsors, local merchants and of course, some of the best youth lacrosse in the area to wrap up our spring season.



As you know an event like this takes a lot of planning and community support to have it run as well as it did. This year we would especially like to thank the following groups for their continued support of our effort: Shaw's Supermarkets, Del's Lemonade, SportsStop, Kinneally Meats, Atlantic Bagel, St. Anthony's, Prime Time Lacrosse, The Libby Family and GoodSport whose generous donations made it all possible. We would also like to thank Cohasset Youth Soccer, Cohasset Middle High School, The DPW and The Cohasset Recreation Department whose support and cooperation in coordinating the events were greatly appreciated.

We also wish to recognize our entire parent and high school volunteers from the "grill masters" to the "apparel sales group" to the "clean up crew" that took time out of their weekend to make sure that the kids had as much fun on the fields as off. Lastly, we want to thank all of our youth coaches for the countless hours that they put in throughout the season to provide the kids with a positive team and athletic experience week in and week out.

It has been another fantastic season for Cohasset Lacrosse and we wish everyone a great summer and look forward to seeing those lacrosse sticks out on the beach and all of you back out on the fields next year.

The Cohasset softball team did what no softball team at Cohasset had done before – win a Sectional Championship.

The next step was the end though, as Cohasset lost a 4-3 decision in nine innings to eventual state champion St. Mary's, last Wednesday at Taunton High School.

"They executed the small ball very well and that's a big part of the game," Cohasset coach Rob Spofford said. "I thought we played as well as we could have played. We made some errors, but we overcame them."

Spofford said his Skippers worked in and out of trouble all evening.

Softball

"They left 14 runners on base," Spofford said of St. Mary's. "That's a tribute to Kelly Naegelin and the defense. They bore down in big moments. Inning after inning they were knocking on the door. They pushed us to the brink."

The sacrifice squeeze they got down on us was spectacular

The loss had coach Rob Spofford and his players feeling down, but looking back, Spofford found much to be happy about, for now and the future.

He also apprceciated the St. Mary's loss for what it was – well played softball by top-tier teams.

"They executed a little better than we did," he said. "The sacrifice squeeze they did was just

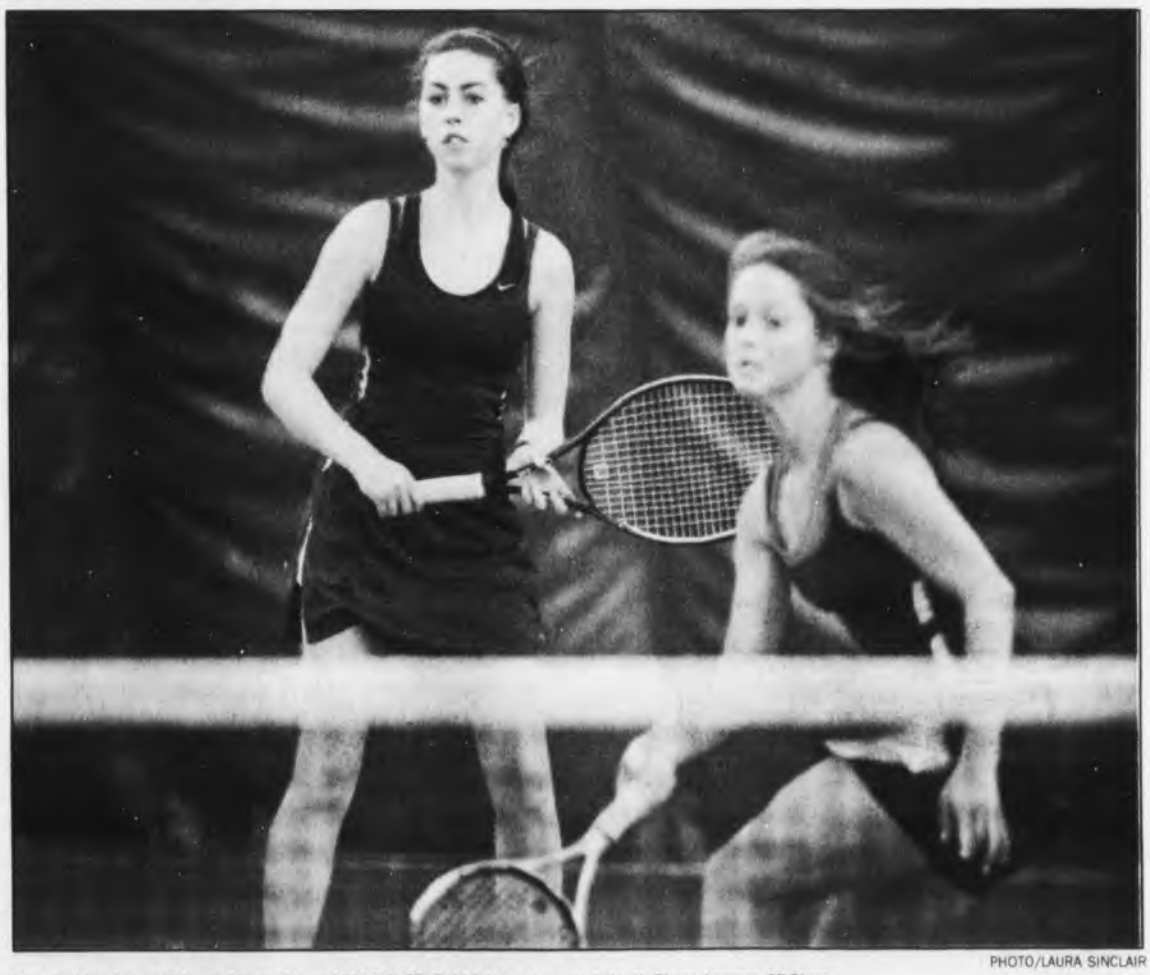
The South Shore League just released their boys and girls tennis all-star teams, and Cohasset players were a big part of it.

For the girls, who lost to eventual state-champion Dover-Sherborn in the Division 3 South Sectional Final, seven players were named to the team.

Maddie Altholtz, Jean Thomae and Lauren Allen got the nod in singles, while Maggie McGoldrick and Jenny Magruder, along with Tina D'Antonio and Danielle Sookiasian were honored for doubles.

The girls were also named the winners of the Team Sportsmanship Award.



On the boys side, Victor Hartmann was named for singles, and Robbie Hill and Ivan Sceery headed up the doubles selections.

Mike Filbey and Travers Craven were also selected for doubles.

On the softball diamond, Cohasset coach Rob Spofford brought up an interesting point about being disappointed about not winning a state title.

"Only one team wins it," he

Private clubs going for the green

Economy plays in golfer's favor

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

You want to join a private club?

If you do, this is the best time.

One of the benefits of a down economy, is you can find deals just about everywhere.

Gone are the days where you need to have four letters of recommendations, ace the crucial interview, and spend a purgatory of time as a social member, waiting of an opening to become a full-fledged member with all the privileges.

Those days are gone.

Waiting lists are just about extinct. Most clubs have openings. You can put down your money and play today. Some clubs have relinquished the dreaded initiation fee. Furthermore, a few are offering discounts.

What are the advantages?

Private courses, by and large, are better courses and in better condition, which means posh fairways and glassy greens.

Bob Giusti, the head professional at the Country Club of Halifax, sums it up best. "You can play how much and when you want. If you're a public player and you have time to play three or four holes after or before work, you don't go down to the public course and pay a nine-hole fee of $25 or $30 and just play a couple of holes. We have guys who come here from work in the afternoon, hit balls, play our first, second and third holes, then come in for a beer."

Halifax is one of the few progressive clubs that has realized what has happened to the economy and made some alterations to its membership fees. There is no initiation fee. Unrestricted dues, meaning you can play during prime time (read: Saturday and Sunday mornings), is $3,600, restricted member's dues are $3,060.

"But right now we are offering a $500 discount," said Karen Messina, who is in charge of memberships. "It's for both the unrestricted and restricted members."

COURTESY OF HALIFAX COUNTRY CLUB

Halifax's 10th hole is one of the finest short par-4s you can play, a dogleg to the left with a receptive green awaiting your approach shot.

Earlier in the year, the club offered a stimulus package of its own to members. For anyone who brought in a new member, the new member would get a $500 discount and the member who got them to join had $500 taken off his dues.

It had results.

"We have somewhere between 30 and 35 new members right now," said Giusti, who added more new members are applying every day. (Membership information is available on the Halifax Web site (halifaxcc.com).

One private club in the region, whose general manager asked not to be identified, said his equity-owned club still has a waiting list, "but it is not as healthy as it once was," he said. Equity-owned clubs are those private courses that are owned and operated by its members.

"We're holding our own," he said. "We lost about 30 members last year, but we picked up 30 new members. We're not doing as good as the clubs in Boston, like the Brae Burns and The Country Clubs. They have wealthy members and are insulated from the downturn in the economy."

Some clubs are offering a yearly membership, risk free without the initiation fee. Indian Pond is offering an annual family ($6,900) or individual ($5,562) membership without the $12,500 non-refundable initiation fee. But, after a year, you are required to pay the initiation fee if you remain a member.

If you think that is expensive, Black Rock in Hingham has an annual fee of $7,500 for a single golf membership. But you must pay a $20,000 initiation fee that is non-refundable, plus a non-interest bearing refundable bond fee of $80,000. Oh, yes, for 11 months a year you must spend a minimum of $75 in the clubhouse restaurant.

If you decided to resign as a member at Black Rock, you don't get the $80,000 refundable bond right away. You have to wait until a new member comes into the club and pays his fees.

Some clubs, like LeBaron Hills in Lakeville, have what you might call menu memberships. You can pick and chose exactly what sort of membership plan fits your lifestyle.

There is their "Ultimate Shot" membership program, where for as little as $295 per month, golfers who are not prepared to make a lifetime commitment can pay in monthly installments and get to play on their championship golf course. There is no initiation fee. Conversely, the annual membership for full golf is $4,400 per year and you must spend $81.81 as a food minimum. The family full golf is $6,400 annual dues and $127.27 in food minimum.

Tee to Green

North Quincy's Michael Welch will be in the last group to play on Thursday in the first round of the US Open on the Black Course at Bethpage State State in Farmingdale, N.Y.

That doesn't matter to Welch. He's happy to be there. Just making this tournament is like hitting the lottery. Welch made the US Open the hard way. He began at the first stage of qualifying, advanced to the 36-hole sectional tournament, and now to the US Open. Of the 156 golfers in the US Open, only 23 made it from the local qualifying stage to the championship. How many golfers began at the local stage?

This year the USGA received a record 9,086 entries. Most began at one of 112 local qualifiers around the country.

On May 18 at Crumpin-Fox in Bernardston, Welch was one of four qualifiers out of 99 golfers to advance to the 36-hole sectional qualifier in Purchase, N.Y., June 8, where he was one of four who qualified for the US Open out of 77 golfers.

Welch, the winner of the New England Amateur in 2003 and 2004, will tee it up on at 2:42 p.m. Hopefully, there will be enough daylight for him to finish. These are usually the longest rounds of golf during the season.

Why are they so long?

First, it's the US Open and nobody takes a shot until they are absolutely ready. Second, they are playing Bethpage's Black Course. It's a monster and trouble lurks everywhere. Third, USGA will set up the course where the average golfer might not break 200. The fairways are narrow, the rough is jungle deep and the greens are like formica. The last groups might take six hours to finish 18 holes.

Lucky seven

A round of applause for Shelagh Joyce of Plymouth, who got her first hole-in-one after seven years of playing golf. She was playing with Cathy Dwuer and Donna Hayes. She did it at Presidents Golf Course in Quincy on the 107-yard seventh hole. Of course, she used a 7-iron and she did it on May 7. Lucky seven I guess . . . The Braintree High School Athletic Association is hosting its annual golf tournament at The Braintree Municipal Golf Course on July 13 to benefit the interscholastic athletic programs at Braintree High School. For more information about the tournament and an application, visit www.gpvillage.com/gowamps. You may also contact Michael Denise at (781) 848-4000 x2124 or John Collier at (781) 843-3330 . . . The Taunton Chamber's Women's Golf Outing will take place Friday (June 19) at The Back Nine Club in Lakeville. Players can sign up as a single, twosome, threesome, or foursome. Crosswinds gives the public course golfer the conditions that are usually found at private clubs.

Three 9s a winning hand

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

CROSSWINDS GOLF CLUB

One of the best buys in golf is Crosswinds Golf Course in Plymouth. In an area where several upscale (read: expensive) public courses were recently built, the Town of Plymouth commissioned nationally recognized designers Dr. Michael Hurdzan and Dana Frye to build a 27-hole public facility that won't cost you a mortgage payment to play.

And they came through in flying colors.

"I like to think of it as a public course with private course conditions," said head pro Dan Neary.

One reason for the terrific conditions, says Neary, is course superintendent Brian Smoot, a transplant from Ohio, who served his apprenticeship at famed Pebble Beach Golf Links in California.

What makes Crosswinds special is that it has three nines. That means three foursomes can tee it up simultaneous and play 18 holes. The nines are named after three golfing legends – Bobby Jones, Francis Ouimet and Babe Zaharias – and they are legend worthy.

The Zaharias nine is the newest.

"A lot of golfers seem to want to play the newer nine, but I've played all three and I like them all the same. They are all championship holes, not a bad one in the bunch," said Neary.

His favorite hole is the ninth on the Jones course. "You hit from an elevated tee and there is water down the right side and in front of the green," said Neary.

The most challenging green is the second hole on the Jones course. "There are a couple of tiers and a lot of undulation," said Neary. Walking off that green you are satisfied with a two-putt performance.

There are plenty of specials offered at Crosswinds. For those who are frequent golfers, they should pick up a discount card that allows golfers to play 10 rounds with a cart for $400 during the week.

Neary, one of the top teachers in the region, offers a free clinic most Sunday afternoons from noon to 1 p.m. for golfers who want to improve their game.

He is also initiating a short-game school. This Crosswinds Short Game Improvement Series covers the fundamentals of putting, chipping, sand shots and specialty shots. It is an ideal program for golfers who feel their long game is strong but need to develop their shots around the green. It consists of three one-hour lessons for a period of time.

Extraordinary season

spectacular on their part. We did everything we should have done. I called a rising fastball and Kelly pitched it right where we wanted it. The girl did a great job getting her bat on it and getting the bunt down."

Spofford said he's planning to be back next season, and hopes to go those two games better.

He should be in good shape to do it.

The Lady Skippers will lose four seniors, Carly Salerno, Kristen Monaco, Carly Zappolo and Brittany Dunn, but have the majority of the team coming back, along with some exciting young players coming through the Youth League in town.

"Carly Salerno will be a big loss," Spofford said. "She was dominant in the playoffs. She had the big hit in the Hull game. She pounded the ball against Dimant, got to second to set up the game-winner against Nantucket and had a hit to tie St. Mary's. Then she had a double in the ninth and almost had the tying run in that game. She hit over .500 in the playoffs."

Monaco also had a knack for getting on in the tournament.

Spofford will have Naegelin, his start pitcher back, along with solid backups if the need is there. He'll also have Meredith Kelly back. Kelly was the power on the team.

One thing Spofford was excited about was the play of some of his younger players.

"I think the player who stepped up the most was Letra Kimle," Spofford said. "She was a junior varsity player and she had to take Kayla Orner's place in the playoffs after Kayla was injured. She made all the plays in left field. That was an extraordinary performance from an unproven player."

Another big performance from a younger player this season came from Carly Martin.

"Carly isn't a natural third baseman," Spofford said. "She asked to play the position. As a freshman, she played JV last year. This year she played the toughest position in softball. She worked harder than anybody. She's been phenomenal."

One thing that helped Spofford was knowing that his team played the champs better than any other team in the tournament.

"We played the state champs better than anyone else did," he said. "We had them on the brink. I think that helped them as well. It made them better."

From the beginning, Spofford felt his team was primed for something special.

"I have high expectations for the girls," he said. "It was terrific to be part of something special. This was a magical season. I don't know if it can be duplicated, but the foundation is there. I think we can be challenging every year."

One thing that Spofford was most proud of this season was the way his players picked up their games.

"You ask yourself, did we improve over the course of the season," Spofford said. "Yes, we did. Did you maximize the potential of the team. I think the coaching staff did a great job of that, and the girls left everything on the field, and finally did your extraordinary players do extraordinary things? I'd say yes. We also had ordinary players do extraordinary things."

It was a great season."

Top of the League

said. "In the end one team is the winner. We were disappointed about not winning it. I think if you don't win and you're happy about it, in some ways you are losers. We want to get back and go further next time."

With all the coddling we do with our kids these days, the idea of no winners and losers, or everyone is a winner, everyone gets an award, I have to say I appreciate the honesty.

Spofford isn't saying lose and you're a loser.

He's just saying that if you have a goal and that's winning, that it's normal to be down.

It seems that these days if someone gets upset about losing, well they're bad sports.

Look at LeBron after losing to Dwight Howard and the Magic.

LeBron walked away disappointed and didn't stop to shake hands.

Immediately he was labeled a bad guy, even if he did email Howard later that night.

Look at Clay Bucholz and the Red Sox.

Bucholz is destroying at Pawtucket and wants to pitch in the big leagues. When he was caught saying he would take a trade if it got him pitching in the Major Leagues, media and fans jumped on him.

Fortunately, he had Terry Francona saying that if a player didn't want to be at the highest level and was happy with just being there, it wasn't a player they want.

That said, the Cohasset softball team and the tennis teams can look back and feel great about their seasons, because in the big picture, there's only one ultimate winner.

For everyone else, it's all decided by the perspective.

In my perspective, these teams are all winners.

Cohasset firefighters to face Patriots in softball showdown

The Cohasset Firefighters Local 2804 is sponsoring a Patriots Celebrity Softball Game! The event will be held on Saturday, June 20 at 1 p.m. at Milliken Field.

This game will feature the Cohasset Firefighters All-Stars against the All Pro Patriots Celebrity Softball Team. The event is scheduled to include current and former New England Patriots.

Patriot Alumni scheduled to appear include Steve DeOssie, Max Lane, Tim Fox, Scott Zolak, and Tony Simmons. The current New England Patriot names were not available at press time.

The event will benefit the Local 2804's Scholarship Fund, fire prevention programs, M.D.A., and the general purposes of the Local 2804.

The players in attendance will be signing free autographs. Tickets are $10.00 each, with children under 12 free.

Vote for Cohasset Soccer Club board of directors

Voting for the Cohasset Soccer Club's new Board of Directors will take place from June 15 through June 26, 2009.

Each family with a child registered in the soccer program for the 2008/2009 season will be eligible to vote. Voting will be performed online only, with the ability to review statements of interest and actually vote for the new Board members on the Club's website cohassetsoccer.com – by clicking through the "ELECTIONS" and "VOTE HERE" links located in the left hand menu bar. Each family will be able to select up to 13 candidates — the number of available Director slots. Voting will close at 5 PM on June 26th, with votes then tabulated and validated by the election committee.

Elected directors will be announced no later than June 28, 2009 and results will be posted on the club website. The first new meeting of this Board of Directors is tentatively scheduled for June 30, 2009.

Background

The Cohasset Soccer Club is the not-for-profit organization that organizes and runs the community's in-town soccer programs for pre-K to 4th grade players and the travel soccer programs for players in 5th grade and above. Fall, winter and spring programs are offered, with the goal of providing all players the opportunity to learn the game of soccer, enhance their soccer skills and have fun. The Club currently has approximately 700 children playing in the program with approximately 100 adult volunteers supporting and managing the programs.

The Club is currently seeking to establish a new Board of Directors to ensure continued program success and to set the future direction of the organization. Over the past few years the Club leadership has dwindled such that Club direction and management are now handled by just a few individuals who strongly believe that new leadership is needed to ensure future success. Wallace St. John, in particular, has shouldered the majority of this burden — but he will be stepping down as the President of the organization after this spring season is completed. As a result, a new Board of Directors needs to be elected and all interested parties need to be encouraged to become active members of the organization.

In order to facilitate setting up this new Club leadership, a completely new slate of Directors will be elected this June, with Club leadership and direction then determined by this new Board. The Board of Directors will be composed of 13 persons, with the only requirement being that the Board members be willing and able to assist and support the Cohasset Soccer Club as it moves into the future. The initial term for new Directors will be one year.

People interested in being considered for a board position were asked to submit a brief statement of interest describing why they would like to be part of the Board and what qualifications they may be able to bring to the Board. Statements were submitted online and were accepted through June 12, 2009. In order to ensure that interested parties were made aware of the positions, a club wide email was sent to all families registered for the 2008/2009 season and an article was published in the Cohasset Mariner.

Quincy Dealer Slashes Prices To Meet Sales Quota

Quincy Area Shoppers Express Disbelief But Dealer Remains Optimistic As Unprecedented 5-Day Sale Approaches This Thursday, June 18th – Monday, June 22nd

Vehicles to be sold for as low as $69* down and only $89* per month!

By Daniel Ready

QUINCY, MA — Ms. Elizabeth O'Brien, General Manager of Tom O'Brien Hyundai, announced plans today for a great new way to buy cars that's simple and inexpensive. This unique event, also known as the "National Automotive 'Insider' Sales Event," has been sweeping the United States. The customers who take part in this event are on the 'inside' to great savings on near new vehicles and pay only $69* down and $89* per month. The event will be held for five days only, this Thursday, June 18th through Monday, June 22nd regardless of any weather conditions that arise.

O'Brien offers a simple explanation for this unprecedented event, "As one of the leading dealers in the area, we're overstocked with high quality near new vehicles including recent lease turn-ins, factory-program cars, recent trade-ins and bank repossessions." She adds, "I can't remember the last time so many rare opportunities were available to us at one time, so we decided to let the general public take advantage of these incredible values rather than sell them to wholesalers or strangers at auctions." During the "National Automotive 'Insider' Sales Event," every vehicle will be clearly marked and available for the low down payment of $69*. Every effort will be made to obtain credit approval for those who may have had credit problems in the past.

During this event, the vehicle selection couldn't be any better. Many of them are late model vehicles with low mileage and the balance of their factory warranties remaining. There will be many makes and models from which to choose including Hyundai, Toyota, Honda, Dodge, Chevrolet, Ford, Chrysler, Nissan and Lexus. An abundance of SUVs will also be featured, including Santa Fes, Kia Sportages, Suzuki XL7s, Xterras, Grand Cherokees, Explorers and more.

"Customers can purchase vehicles for as low as $69* down and $89* per month this weekend at Tom O'Brien Hyundai."

— Elizabeth O'Brien, General Manager

For auto shoppers looking for a very low monthly payment there will be many choices, including a 2006 Hyundai Elantra with air conditioning, power features and CD player for only $69* down and $89* per month. Sample payments will be clearly marked on all vehicles. All you'll need to do is obtain credit approval, pick a vehicle and a payment. It's that simple.

Arbor Day celebration at Osgood School

An Arbor Day Celebration was held on Friday, June 5 at the Joseph Osgood School to mark the donation of a red maple tree called Red Sunset by the Community Garden Club of Cohasset. The Cohasset Tree and Parks Department had previously planted the tree in the traffic island in front of the school.

Principal Janet Sheehan welcomed parents and guests and introduced members from the Community Garden Club who were present. Lee Jenkins, president of the club, spoke of the importance of Arbor Day and of the Club's mission to promote interest in the environment. The weather cooperated in spite of a gray start and the ceremony was held outside on the lawn and was enjoyed by a large crowd of parents and guests.

Kindergarten, first and second graders each sang songs to delight us. Afterwards, all were invited to stay for lemonade and cookies.

School's out for summer

LIFE AT CHS

SEAN MACCARTHY

That's right folks, in words of Alice Cooper, "Schooooooools out for summer!" That means morale was at an all time high at CHS this past week as everyone had been looking forward to bridge jumping, boating, and waking up at mid day.

The classes everyone has been struggling through have finally come to an end after some last minute cram sessions for finals and some late night paper writing. The 2008-2009 academic year was a tough one (especially for juniors) but that just makes the year ending a whole lot sweeter.

While of course everyone has been looking forward to summer, it's safe to say that many people are looking forward to the 2009-2010 academic year. This year's juniors are looking forward to being the top-dog seniors. This year's sophomores are looking forward to finally becoming upper classmen. This year's freshmen are looking forward to...well not being freshmen anymore. The eighth graders this year are looking forward to being pushed around, beaten, and tormented...wait, did I say that out loud? I mean they are looking forward to a new and fresh start in high school being treated fairly and accepted by everyone...sort of...

In the slow and final week at CHS, next year's captains for boys' lacrosse, girls' lacrosse, tennis, softball, baseball, wrestling, and golf were announced. Congrats to all of those who were chosen by their fellow teammates, or coach in some instances, to lead their respective teams on the field.

In other news, a newspaper that is, the Cohasset High School Spinnaker staff was chosen for next year. Headed by the female half of the Durant twins, Kate, next year's school newspaper looks to be better than ever despite having journalism removed as a course. This didn't stop anyone though as all the staff spots were filled out and all staff members vowed to work their hardest to deliver the best Spinnaker possible whether it's organized after school, at lunch, or late at night.

Finally, in senior affairs, the seniors of the student council had an exclusive meeting in which they proposed many changes that will be beneficial to the seniors next year...and the rest of CHS...sort of. Just a few hints at what will be going on next year are the words "senior trip". Be jealous.

Oh, by the way, I apologize for any mistakes I have made in past articles and any mistakes I make in future articles. Hey, at least I didn't make any spelling mistakes in this article. Doesn't that make you hapy? Remember people, pobodys nerfect.

This is my final article of the year. I look forward to starting this up again in September. I hope you all have a grand and fun summer. Enjoy it while it last because next thing you know, you'll be waking up at 6:30 a.m. to be lectured all day.

Ciao.

CRAZY EIGHT

A record-number of consecutive jumpers – eight boys – made quite an impression on folks during "Snapper Sneaker Day", which was held recently at the Osgood School. The eight jumpers are, from lef, Jackson Stone, Bradley Albanese, Trevor Glavin, Daniel Galvin, Henry Thomas, Nicolas Simone, Jack Mahoney, John Albright.

Extra Credit Cards demonstrate appreciation

Cohasset Education Foundation is a nonprofit organization dedicated to enhancing, enriching and maintaining Cohasset's history of excellence in education.

A donation to CEF is a way to honor a specific teacher or school employee at the holidays or anytime. Donations may also be made in honor of relatives, friends, coaches, grandparents, other special people or as a memorial remembrance. A child's teacher or other recipient will receive a card acknowledging that a donation has been made in his or her honor with a personalized message. The amount of the gift will not be disclosed.

All proceeds from extra credit are earmarked for professional development, classroom and program grants, helping Cohasset's teachers affect and inspire students.

Extra Credit Cards: With each donation, CEF will mail an acknowledgement card to a teacher or other special recipient. Cards are available with a suggested minimum donation of $15 each – $50 for five cards; larger donations are always appreciated. Donations can be for any special occasion and are tax-deductible. Checks should be made payable to: Cohasset Education Foundation, P.O Box 309, Cohasset, MA 02025.

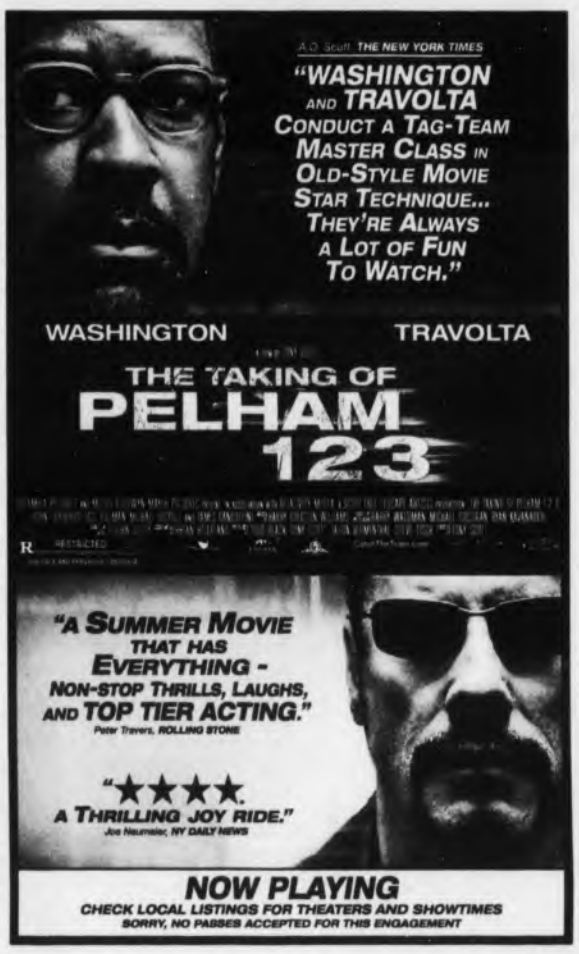
For more information or additional applications, contact sarah.murphy@comcast.net or visit the Web site at cohasseteducation.org to print out a form.

CEF Extra Credit raffle winners announced

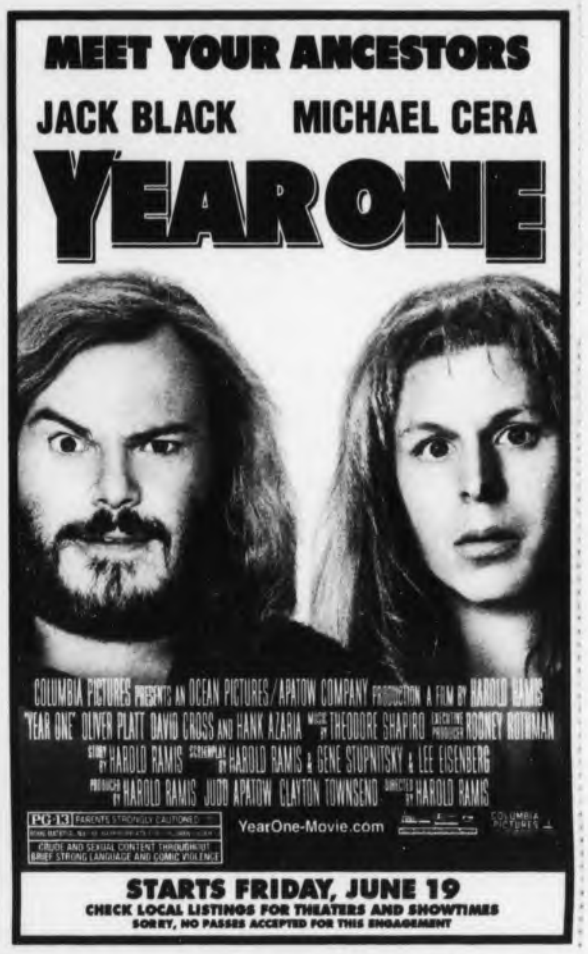
To celebrate the 2009 school year, each time a teacher was honored with an Extra Credit Award, that teacher was entered into a raffle to win prizes, including a Del's Lemonade party for their entire class!

The following Extra Credit raffle winners were recently announced by Cohasset Education Foundation and are: Mrs. McDavitt, Osgood School; Mrs. Grossman, Osgood School; Ms. Sanges, Cohasset Middle High School; Mrs. Marat, Cohasset Middle High School; Ms. Jordan, Deer Hill School; Ms. Hanson, Deer Hill School; and Mrs. Corkhum, Deer Hill School, grand prize winner of the Del's Lemonade party.

CEF congratulations all winners, and thanks all who participated in the Extra Credit program.



Tennis benefit for Children's Hospital



Save the date. The annual Cohasset Tennis Benefit for Children's Hospital Boston will take place on Friday, July 17 through Sunday, July 19th. The event wills kick-off with a Friday evening reception at the Lightkeeper's Residence on Cohasset Harbor.

A weekend tournament takes place Saturday and Sunday on private courts throughout Cohasset. Mixed-doubles teams of all configurations (parent/child, spouses, friends) are guaranteed two matches and play within one of three categories: Pros, Intermediate or Social.

To register or to learn about sponsorship opportunities, visit www.cohassettennisbenefit.org.

Register your tennis team. After June 15 team donations are $250.

"The real difference is in our plan, the strength of our great new products, and our quality, fuel efficiency, safety and value."

—Ford CEO Alan Mulally

By not taking any government assistance, we are in control of our own future. We'll just stay focused on making the best cars and trucks possible.

We're doing our part to keep the economy moving in the right direction by offering you value for your money. You'll find this value in any of our fuel-efficient, high-quality, technologically advanced cars and trucks.

QUALITY

We take durability testing to the extreme to make sure our vehicles will last. In fact, we have more trucks on the road with 250,000 miles than any other brand.[1] And not even Honda or Toyota can beat our quality.[2]

GREEN

With unpredictable fuel prices and deepening concerns about the environment, we are dedicated to building fun, fuel-efficient vehicles. That's why we've created the most fuel-efficient midsize sedan and SUV in America.[3] And our EcoBoost™ technology allows our engines to create the power of a V8 with the efficiency of a V6.[4] You won't find that in any other showroom.

SAFETY

Ford Motor Company has more Top Safety Picks from the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety (IIHS) than any other manufacturer. The exclusive AdvanceTrac® with Roll Stability Control™ is the element of calm you need in an unstable driving situation, helping to keep your wheels firmly planted on the road.

SMART

Ford has more industry firsts than ever. With voice-activated SYNC® powered by Microsoft,® making calls and playing music has never been easier.[5] And SIRIUS Travel Link™ helps you avoid traffic jams, check sports scores, and can even find the lowest fuel prices[6]—something all of us could use right about now.

Get behind the wheel of any one of our vehicles, and you'll discover that the future is bright at Ford. Now, wouldn't you like to be a part of it?

106 Years ago a company was founded on the premise that an automobile should be affordable to everyone.

Today, that vision is as clear as ever. Because, while other automakers say no to leasing and no to financing, we are committed to helping you get behind the wheel of a brand-new car, truck, SUV or crossover. With Ford Credit, we offer outstanding personalized terms and options. For more information, go to jannellford.com.

We're proud to be Ford dealers and feel fortunate to be associated with a great Ford team. The leaders in Detroit and the Ford dealers and employees here and everywhere know this is an important time. These men and women are working hard every day to bring to market the vehicles that America deserves, along with providing the service that current Ford customers rely upon, with state-of-the-art service departments and certified technicians.

If you're in the market for a new vehicle, we hope you'll at least consider a Ford. We'd love for you to come in and Drive One.

Thank you for your time and attention.

For 75 years Jannell Ford has been proud to go the extra mile for sales and service and you can count on Jannell to continue that commitment into the future!

Stories of strength and survival

Cohasset Relay for Life volunteers light luminarias Friday evening along the Cohasset High School track. There were approximately 3,000 luminarias lit for the ceremony that followed that evening. At the foreground are luminaria bags that have the names of those who have cancer.

One-year-old Sadie Coffey, is held by her mom Kristina of Cohasset, during the Cohasset Relay For Life Friday evening. Sadie's dad, Greg Coffey, gave a heart touching story about his survival of cancer.

Cohasset Relay For Life cancer survivors and caregivers walk hand-in-hand during the Survivors and Caregivers Walk Friday evening around the Cohasset High School athletic track.

Cohasset's Relay For Life Director Harry St. Onge holds a cake knife up before cutting a birthday cake commemorating the 25th year of the Relay For Life event.

Cohasset youth Colby Litchfield pushes her cousin Hannah Laugelle, around the track as they were advertising the children's tent located at the high school during the Relay For Life.

This luminaria bag delivers a message to all. There were more than 3,000 luminaria candles at Cohasset's Relay For Life Friday evening.

Cohasset resident and cancer survivor Greg Coffey tells his survival story to Cohasset Relay For Life attendees Friday evening.

218th Derby Day exercises

By Carl Schwaber
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

On Thursday, June 11, Reverend Michael J. Connelly of Weymouth, a 32-year veteran teacher of Latin and public speaking at Derby Academy, gave the 218th Derby Lecture, the 202nd from the pulpit in New North Church, to students, faculty, trustees and parents assembled there for the traditional Derby Day graduation ceremonies. The program was preceded by the annual all-school Derby Day procession from the school campus, down Fearing Road, to the church. Bagpipers and Color Guard led the procession, which included faculty and trustees in academic robes. The two academically top-ranked eighth graders, Danielle Cahoon of Hingham and Myles Garbarini of Cohasset, were designated Parade Marshals for the Academic Procession on Derby Day.

At Derby Day ceremonies at New North Church, a select number of Upper School (grades seven and eight) students received Honor Book Awards in recognition of having earned an A- or above in all academic subjects for the entire year. The recipients were:

Cohasset residents: Jimmy Maher (seventh), Myles Garbarini (eighth), Mark Brown (seventh), Mark McKenna (seventh) and Robin Spofford (eighth).

Duxbury resident: Becky Cutler (eighth).

Hanover resident: Danny Tobin (eighth).

Hingham residents: Chris Cahoon (eighth), Danielle Cahoon (eighth), Julia Cowen (eighth), Madeleine Stone (eighth), Maddie Warwick (seventh), Matthew Park (seventh), Hannah Nash (eighth), Molly Koonce (seventh), Olivia Sullivan (eighth), Victoria Parker (seventh) and Maggie Watson (eighth).

Hull resident: Jonathan Bloch (seventh).

Marshfield resident: Shawn Daly (seventh).

Norwell residents: Ale Gianino (eighth) and Lily Zildjian (seventh).

Pembroke resident: Chris Hodge (eighth).

Plymouth resident: Emily Wiklund (seventh).

Scituate resident: Chandler Devlin (eighth).

Special recognition for having completed 20 or more years of service to the school was given to the following faculty and staff members: kindergarten teacher Polly Rizzotto of Hingham (30 years) and grade two teacher Suzanne Hajjar of Hull (20 years).

The Thomas J. Waters Prize for Faculty, recognizing the individual teacher who exemplifies caring and concern for students, was awarded this year to grade five teacher and athletics coach Megan Coneys of Boston.

The Madam Derby Pin (girl recipient) and the Academy Pin (boy recipient), recognizing "the eighth grade student who most nearly embodies the values of the Derby community through demonstrated effort, interest and positive contributions in academics, arts, athletics, and extracurricular activities," were awarded to Robin Spofford of Cohasset and Will Fleming of Duxbury, respectively.

The Class of 2009

Head of School Andrea Archer awarded diplomas to members of the Class of 2009. Board of Trustees President Walter Sullivan presented them to the following students:

Cohasset residents: Myles Garbarini and Robin Spofford.

Dorchester residents: Alyssa Bonny and Anesha Moses.

Duxbury residents: Austin Scheerer, Jr., Becky Cutler and Will Fleming.

Hanover residents: Danny Tobin and Haleigh Smith.

Hingham residents: Ainsley Fahey, Amanda Hinkelman, Annalise Caroll, Chris Cahoon, Danielle Cahoon, Hannah Nash, Julia Cowen, Julian Becker, Katherine Sypek, Kevin Ginns, Madeleine Stone, Maggie Watson, Matty Mitchell, Olivia Sullivan and Rosie Murphy.

Hull resident: Kerry Carmody.

Marshfield residents: Connor Maher, Nick Craig and Bonnie Leta.

Mattapan residents: Bernard Dell and Imani Graham.

Milton residents: Abigail Chave, Conor Greaney and Julian Samuels.

Norwell residents: Abby McOsker, Ale Gianino, Jake Bennett and Matt Barry.

Pembroke resident: Chris Hodge.

Scituate residents: Alece Demetriades, Chandler Devlin and Sage Warner.

Last Chapel

Last Chapel is held on campus each June as part of the ceremonies that conclude the academic year. On Wednesday, June 10, athletic, academic and art awards were presented. This year's Eighth Grade Address was given by Myles Garbarini of Cohasset, and the Faculty Address was given by English teacher and athletics coach Richard Andriole Jr. of Framingham. The intramural team captains for the 2008-2009 school year, chosen to serve as Color Guards (girls teams: Derbies and Toppers) and Color Bearers (boys teams: Lights and Darks) for the Derby Day Procession, were introduced. Color Guards were Ale Gianino of Norwell and Anesha Moses of Dorchester. Color Bearers were Conor Greaney of Milton and Matt Barry of Norwell. Captain Ale Gianino accepted the trophy for the Derbies, winners of the Girls Intramural Competition. Captain Matt Barry accepted the trophy for the Darks, winners of the Boys Intramural Competition.

Academic awards for highest achievement were presented to the following students:

History Award – Chris Hodge of Pembroke.

Susan Feins '85 Science Prize – Myles Garbarini of Cohasset.

Francis J. Ranieri Mathematics Award – Madeleine Stone of Hingham.

Wheelwright Family Prize in English – Hannah Nash of Hingham.

Latin Prize – Rosie Murphy of Hingham.

Martignetti Prize in Modern Languages – Chandler Devlin of Scituate.

Coyle/Driscoll Art Prize – Myles Garbarini of Cohasset.

Zildjian Music Award – Ale Gianino of Norwell.

The Edward R. Foley Citizenship Prize, named in honor of Headmaster Edward R. Foley who led Derby Academy from 1992-2007 is "awarded to a 7th grade boy or girl who has exhibited the principles of respect and kindness towards others, consistent with the school's two hundred-year old motto to Improve Both Mind and Soul, and in keeping with the values of Mr. Foley himself. The prize is accompanied by a monetary award, which the recipient will direct toward a project in service to others during the 8th grade academic year." This year's prize was awarded to Jonathan Bloch of Hull.

The E. Brooks Robbins Award, recognizing "the individual coach who demonstrates a dedication to teaching skills, team tactics, and safety measures and who inspires athletes to strive for excellence and value good sportsmanship," was awarded this year to Lauren Bowe of Boston.

Derby Academy, founded in 1784 by the will of Madam Sarah Derby, to educate boys and girls of Hingham, now serves more than 300 students in pre-kindergarten through grade eight from some 20 Greater Boston communities.

DERBY ACADEMY HIGHLIGHTS

Boston area photographer and Derby Academy alum Tim Llewellyn '95 returned to campus on the morning of the day Barack Obama was inaugurated as president in order to share with students his experiences serving as Mr. Obama's personal campaign photographer in New Hampshire. Helping Tim display two of his photographs, which he generously donated to Derby, is Head of School Andrea Archer.

Over the course of the year, Derby Academy students spent some of their after-school hours at Father Bill's Place, a homeless shelter and social service agency in Quincy. Preparing dinner for the residents, whom they will then serve, are, from left: Sara Hinkelman, Luke Sullivan, Libby Graham, Jessica Jaena, Will Fleming and P.J. McDonald.

Last year more than $47 billion in small-business contracts were not awarded because no one claimed them! Create a whole new career filling these contracts and getting paid BIG by the U.S. government...

FRED STEINBERG
FOUNDER, THE B2G INSTITUTE

The federal government will spend upwards of $1 trillion on contracts and awards in 2009 bolstered by President Obama's American Recovery and Investment Act.

As a business owner or someone looking for a recession-proof business concept, this is a truly colossal opportunity.

This year you can start to create sizeable income by filling unclaimed contracts for the U.S. government – even with no inventory, no office, no employees, and no experience.

If you've been looking for an opportunity to take control of your financial security in today's frightening economy and unemployment nightmare — this is it.

Whether you're already in business, or want to start one — you need to be selling to the government. It is the biggest customer in the world and the government is waiting to buy from you.

HERE'S THE HOW AND WHY...
More than 70,000 government contracts are awarded each day nationwide. They run the entire gamut, from office supplies to T-shirts, furniture, computers and services.

Even though most businesses are tightening their belts, the government is the only customer in town with its checkbook wide open.

According to The Wall Street Journal columnist Peggy Noonan,

"Government is our most reliable current and future growth industry."

WHAT MOST BUSINESS OWNERS DON'T KNOW COULD MAKE YOU RICH.
Oftentimes the government and the small businesses that need to fulfill contracts don't connect with each other.

Last year, for example, $47 billion could not be awarded because the small businesses they were allotted for never knew, or simply didn't know how to find them. Where were you? This is where opportunity exists for you to create substantial income.

This gold mine of opportunity could mean purchasing the goods to fulfill a contract at a discount, and then selling them to the U.S. government at a profit. The goods can be bought on credit and shipped directly from your supplier to your government customer. You don't even have to have a place to keep inventory. And the government is required by law to pay you within 30 days. So, in reality, you've risked nothing.

Listen, 2.5 million jobs were lost during 2008. If you're fearful about today's onslaught of unemployment; if you're looking for a way out of your current job; or if you're in business and want to sell your goods to the largest customer in the world — this is the quick-start opportunity you've been waiting for.

B2G WORKSHOP IS A $375 VALUE — YOURS FREE.
At my free B2G Institute Workshop, you'll discover how easy it can be to locate, bid on, and win contracts you can easily fill for a profit.

You'll also discover how to purchase the discounted goods, how to obtain credit, and how to ensure you get paid by the government within 30 days — GUARANTEED.

THE BUSINESS OF SELLING TO THE GOVERNMENT IS THE HOTTEST BUSINESS TODAY. FIND OUT HOW TO BEGIN.
There's never been a better time to take control of your professional, personal, and financial destiny. Don't wait until you're the next to be laid off. Start acting now to ensure you and your family are financially bulletproof in today's economy.

Learn how you can know when the contracts will be available AND discover how to build a network of product suppliers that you can tap to fill the contracts.

The workshop is free. So you have nothing to lose and a world of opportunity to gain.

Discover How To:

- Bid for contracts in three basic steps
- Skyrocket your chances for success by bidding on contracts with no competition
- Position for a steady stream of jobs that require no formal contracts
- Locate and network with key government contracts

5 Facts That Can Lead to a Rich Future

1. The government awards contracts to companies of all sizes — even one-man shops.
2. The government is projected to spend an additional $500 billion in 2009.
3. $47 billion in contracts could not be awarded last year simply because no company bid on the job. Where were you?
4. The government is REQUIRED BY LAW to pay within 30 days.
5. Thousands of contract bids require no paperwork — just a phone call could win you a contract for up to $100,000... without bidding on contracts.

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
JUNE 15, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Things that usually come easily and quickly for the Aries Lamb might need more of your time and attention during the next several days. Try to be patient as you work things out.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A changing situation can create some complications. But if you apply that sensible Bovine mind to what seems to be a hopeless tangle of confusion, you'll soon sort things out.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Creating a new look for your surroundings is fun. Expect to hear mostly positive comments on your efforts, as well as some well-intended suggestions you might want to note.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Maybe you'd rather do anything else than what you're "stuck with" right now. But if you stop complaining, you might see how this could lead to something with real potential.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Even a proud Leo ultimately recovers from hurt feelings. However, a damaged relationship might never heal unless you're willing to spend more time and effort trying to work things out.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) There are lots of changes on the horizon, so be prepared to make some adjustments in your usually fine-tuned life. One change might even impact a personal decision you've been putting off.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Being the dependable person you are could work in your favor for a project that requires both skill and accountability. But check this out carefully. There could be a hidden downside.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A temperamental outburst about a mishandled project causes some fallout. Be sure to couple an apology with an explanation. A new opportunity beckons by week's end.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Changing horses midstream is usually unwise but sometimes necessary. Examine your options carefully before making a decision. A trusted colleague offers good advice.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) While much of your time is involved with business matters, fun-time opportunities open up by week's end. Enjoy yourself, but be careful that you don't overspend.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A "revelation" opens your eyes to what is really going on in the workplace. What you learn could make a difference in your career path. Continue to be alert for more news.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Not wanting to make waves might be the safest way to deal with a difficult situation. But no substantive changes can be made unless you share your assessments with others.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of talking to people that makes them want to listen. You could find a successful career in politics.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

The renowned healing powers of Chianciano Terme's thermal waters have attracted visitors to the Tuscan spa resort town for centuries. The Grand Admiral Palace Hotel, shown here, houses the Oasi Four Roses Wellness and Beauty Center.

Secret jewel in Tuscany offers thermal springs and charm

Gail Spector
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

CHIANCIANO TERME, ITALY — Tuscany serves up savory wines, breathtaking vistas, world-class art and mouthwatering cuisine.

But what visitors also should not miss is a visit to one of the area's spa towns. A special jewel, tucked away in a pocket about 43 miles south of Siena, is the small municipality of Chianciano, as plentiful with welcoming hosts as it is with thermal spring water — it's a friendly and healthy place.

Italians have been visiting this little hill town for years, which explains the multitude of hotels, inns and bed and breakfasts that blend into the climbing streets. While just 7,000 people call Chianciano home, the population doubles May through October, when Europeans most like to visit the region.

The town itself dates back to the 5th century B.C., when the Etruscans built a temple dedicated to the god of good health. Residents of the town proudly talk of the legends of their bathing pools filled with local water whose curative powers made the place a popular destination in the Roman times. The Roman poet Horace heightened the fame of the thermal waters when he wrote of visiting them in the 1st century B.C., upon the advice of a physician, and claiming he was cured.

The waters continue to be integral to the region, and perhaps the biggest draw today for Chianciano is the thermal spring spa Terme Sensoriali di Chianciano. On the grounds of the green and luscious park called Parco Termali del Acqua Santa the privately owned spa's treatments focus on the five Greek classical elements of nature — water, air, ether, fire and earth.

Visitors can select from a menu of four itineraries, each of which lays out a list of stations to follow according to your own preference. If the goal of your visit is to purify, you can walk on a path of river rocks through alternating hot and cold water jets (and treat vascular problems as an added bonus), and follow that with a relaxing bath with hydro massage. If you'd prefer to relax or rebalance, your next stop after the river walk is the "emotional showers": hot/cold water followed by perfumed water jets in soothing color schemes. A Turkish bath stimulates metabolism, while a color and music therapy room rebalances psychophysical and energy rebalance. (OK, even if you're a little skeptical about the rebalancing part, sitting in a peaceful room listening to gentle music is not such a bad experience.)

Then there's the water you drink, touted to serve several physical purposes. Surfacing from different springs, the room-temperature water treats kidney, liver and intestinal problems, according to therapists. And the water packed into the spa's mud baths is effective ministering to cardiovascular problems, or so the spa claims.

Some patients visit the thermal waters of Terme di Montepulciano twice a year for 12 days stays to treat respiratory, pulmonary and other illnesses.

If you're the type who likes to throw on a bathrobe and head down to the spa for a day of pampering, Admiral Palace Hotel in Chianciano might be better suited for you. The hotel's Oasi Four Roses spa features a variety of treatments not often found in mainstream American spas. A "Rose of the Desert" treatment, for example, involves four 10-minute applications of compounds, each based on a different product, such as clay, sea mud, paraffin or unsaturated oils. The therapist applies the mixture to the abdomen, lets it sit for 10 minutes and washes it off with a jet stream shower. This sort of treatment is said to reduce swelling in the abdomen. Other treatments include anti-aging facials, 17 choices of massages, and immersion in a dry salt bath to regulate body hydration.

Those looking for an even more medicinal experience might choose Terme di Montepulciano, less than two miles down the road from Chianciano in Montepulciano. The 44-year-old spa, which sits on top of sulfurous and salso-bromic waters, is a regular medical stop for European patients with respiratory and rheumatic illnesses and skin infections. European health insurance covers treatments for Europeans — in some cases up to 12 days at a time — hence the popularity of the vacation spot. One brave visitor who tried the nasal inhalation for a few minutes said she was able to breathe clearer than she had in months.

All this relaxing stimulates the appetite and Montepulciano has no shortage of charming restaurants. Try Le Logge Del Vignola, which serves traditional rustic Tuscan fare prepared by a chef not afraid to experiment with surprising flavor combinations to delight the palate - basil ice cream is a must.

If you haven't had too much vino at lunch — or even if you have — don't miss a wine tasting at Cantucci in Montepulciano where proprietor Adamo will be proud to show you how he stores his Vino Nobile di Montepulciano (a red wine made with grapes grown in the region) and let you sample his product; all four vintages: two, three, four and five years old. Try them all with the crusted bread and olive oil; you might be surprised by which you prefer.

Italy is an ideal location for de-stressing, and the cobblestone-tread roads of Montepulciano are made for fine-tuning your senses. Each new pathway offers a different angle, a fresh view, a new photo, each causing you to gaze in disbelief at the beauty that is Italy. Each shop promises fabrics and leather that practically jump into your hands. Be warned that restraining yourself isn't easy. The allure of a leather handbag with a red suede lining made me late for lunch.

There's one more don't miss stop while you are in this part of the country: Palazzo Bandino in Chianciano for dinner. Run by the Valeriani family for six generations, the farm/winery produces 40,000 bottles of wine a year — both Vino Nobile and Chianti — rents apartments and serves occasional dinners. Marta, the gracious 7th generation hostess, explains the Tuscan cooking philosophy of "don't throw anything away," as she describes a menu that includes the Tuscan favorite: ribollita (the literal translation is reboiled), a thick soup made with beans, cabbage and stale bread.

IF YOU go...

GETTING THERE: Alitalia (www.alitalia.com) flies to Rome and Florence, and from there you can rent or hire a car, or take a train to the Chianciano train station.

Touring there: Booking a visit through Donna Franca Tours of Boston (800-225-6290; www.donnafranca.com) is an easy way to take care of all your land arrangements. Donna Franca Franzaroli, a Tuscan homeowner herself, loves to share her delight in the land, art, people, wine and food. You'll end up in some off-the-beaten path art gallery that you never would have known was there, or maybe she'll show your around her own magnificent villa. Franca's Spa and Wellness Vacation package is six days/five nights, and is "designed for those who wish to lose weight and tone up while still enjoying delicious Mediterranean cuisine at one of Italy's most popular spa destinations." The package includes transfers from Florence to Chianciano Terme, five nights at the Admiral Palace Hotel, breakfast and dinner daily, entrance to the Wellness and Beauty Center at the Admiral Palace Hotel, and several treatments in the spa. The starting price is $1,599 per person (based on double occupancy).

STAYING THERE: The Admiral Place Grand Hotel in Chianciano (www.admiralpalace.it/ing/hotel.php) is a modern and very comfortable, four-star hotel with a restaurant and bar. For alternative accommodations, consider a farmhouse holiday. Palazzo Bandino is a nice vacation spot for a romantic getaway - the kind where you really need to escape the city scene and just enjoy the sounds of quiet in the country, with great food and wine (gabrielvalierani@libero.it; +39 0578.61199).

What's happening on the South Shore

JUNE 18-26, 2009

Read all about Huey Lewis and the News

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

When Huey Lewis and the News pull into the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset on June 27 and the Cape Cod Melody Tent in Hyannis the next night, they will be celebrating a silver anniversary of sorts. It was on June 30, 1984, that "Sports," their third album, reached number one on the Billboard charts, propelling the San Francisco-based group from American rock band to international sensation. Producing four Top 10 hits in the U.S., including "I Want a New Drug" and "The Heart of Rock & Roll," and even more worldwide, the multi-platinum release finished second, behind Michael Jackson's "Thriller," on the year-end album chart for 1984. During the 1984-85 "Sports" tour, Huey Lewis and the News were the highest grossing touring act in North America. There have been more albums and more hits since then, of course, and, while things have calmed down a bit over the last 25 years, the band is still having fun on the road.

"There are four of us who've been together for 30 years now," explained Huey Lewis by telephone from his home in Stevensville, Montana, last week. "These days we prefer to go out in luxury tour buses and play gigs we can drive to whenever possible. We've always traveled by bus, but in the early days everyone was on one bus. Now, we have only five or six people to a bus, which makes a big difference.

"We golf, too. And, man, has that saved us more than once. We play some fabulous golf courses on the road. And, most importantly, we don't do 250 shows a year anymore. We do about 80 shows a year which is much better all around."

The band may need those 80 dates and more just to get to all their hits, which include "If This Is It," "Hip to Be Square" and "The Power of Love." That's fine with Lewis, however, who co-wrote many of the songs and says he understands their lasting appeal.

"When it comes to songwriting, we always tried to write songs that would be timeless."
— Huey Lewis

"When it comes to songwriting, we always tried to write songs that would be timeless. We knew it was important that the songs not be too specific to a certain time. In fact, some of the songs we wrote in our late 20s work even better now. That is the paradigm of pop songwriting. You can't be trendy or the music won't hold up over time."

For Lewis, born Hugh Anthony Cregg III in New York on July 5, 1950, to an Irish American father from Methuen and a Polish refugee mother, holding up over time has meant branching out beyond music. As an actor, Lewis has appeared in feature films like "Short Cuts" and "Duets," on television as a guest star in the series "Just Shoot Me!" and "One Tree Hill," and on Broadway in the long-running musical "Chicago."

"I don't chase acting roles, but I do look seriously at something when it is particularly creative. I'm not doing the acting as a career, however, so that allows me to be more selective," says Lewis, who says he and his band mates are sometimes selective, too.

"We love each and every one of our hits. And, fortunately, we've had enough of them to be able to alternate them in our shows. The goal is to be able to play music with people you love, have people show up and get paid for it. I've always believed that if you make decisions creatively then you won't have any regrets."

Huey Lewis and the News will be at the South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier St., Cohasset, on June 27. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 800-745-3000, or go online at themusiccircus.org. Huey Lewis and the News will be at the Cape Cod Melody Tent, 21 West Main St., Hyannis, on June 28. For tickets and information, visit the Melody Tent box office, call 800-745-3000, or go online at melodytent.org.

Huey Lewis and the News will perform in Cohasset and Hyannis June 27 and 28, during their summer tour.

JUNE 18-26, 2009

Michael Feinstein will perform with the Boston Pops June 19 and 20.

Taking on Sinatra

Michael Feinstein has his work cut out for him

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

"This is one of the most intimidating things I've ever attempted in my career."
— Michael Feinstein

Michael Feinstein is one of the most devoted interpreters of the Great American Songbook in contemporary music today, but the singer and pianist admits he was nervous when it came time to do an album of Frank Sinatra music.

"I've paid tribute to composers, of course, but I've never done anything else just like this. This is one of the most intimidating things I've ever attempted in my career. I am most concerned about pleasing his fans and so I have been very cognizant of doing this right," said Feinstein by telephone last Friday from New York about "The Sinatra Project." Feinstein will perform selections from the Concord Music Group release with the Boston Pops at Symphony Hall on Friday and Saturday. The new album marks the first time that the 52-year-old has recorded an album in tribute to another performer.

"By doing this, I am trying to express appreciation for everything Frank Sinatra did. He considered himself, first and foremost, an interpreter of song, and his influence on other entertainers is incalculable. He has become so thoroughly entrenched in the history of American popular song that it is impossible to open your mouth and sing without his influence being part of that."

Feinstein's own immersion in the music of Tin Pan Alley began in the late 1970s, with a six-year stint as assistant to the late Ira Gershwin. Following the famed lyricist's death in 1983, Feinstein embarked on a performing career that earned him his reputation as a foremost interpreter of the music of not only George and Ira Gershwin, but also Irving Berlin, Jerome Kern, Johnny Mercer, Duke Ellington, and Harry Warren. He formed The Michael Feinstein Foundation to help preserve and increase appreciation of the golden age of popular song, and has recorded albums of music by the Gershwins, Jimmy Webb, and Jerry Herman.

There have been many prior Sinatra tributes, but Feinstein – who first met the legendary crooner when he was hired to play piano at a birthday party for his wife, Barbara Sinatra, at Chasen's some 30 years ago – was determined that his would be different from so many that came before.

"I'm faithful to his musical sensibility on this album, but in my own way," says Feinstein, who is quick to note that he had no intention of trying to copy what Sinatra had already done. "I was interested in creating an album that would explore his style of singing and his style of music. He worked very hard, of course, but he also had a real gift in his ability to communicate. It was his very essence, because it came from his soul. This album is a tribute not only to Sinatra, but also to the many great arrangers he worked with like Nelson Riddle and Axel Stordahl, and others including Count Basie, Quincy Jones, and Don Costa."

Feinstein partnered with producer/arranger/conductor Bill Elliott to reinterpret songs like "Begin the Beguine," which Sinatra recorded in 1946, and which Feinstein and Elliott reworked with a Riddle-inspired swing sound. "The style of that track is an homage to Nelson Riddle's arrangement of 'I've Got You Under My Skin.' It was a lot of fun to do that because people will think they've heard it before, even though it is brand new."

Sinatra got his start with big bands led by Tommy Dorsey and Harry James, and Feinstein says he is looking forward to singing with an even bigger band when he comes to town next week.

"Working with the Boston Pops, one of the great orchestras of the world, will free me," says Feinstein. "I'm looking forward to the sweetness of the strings and the great brass and rhythm sections. With all those great musicians, the music will sound like very authentic Sinatra."

Michael Feinstein will perform songs from "The Sinatra Project" with the Boston Pops at Symphony Hall, 301 Massachusetts Avenue, Boston, June 19 and 20. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 617-266-1492, or go online at bostonpops.org.

CNC SUPER TEAMS

...Volleyball...

NAME: Derrick Quach
SCHOOL: Weymouth
GRADE: Senior
STATS: - For having only a few years of setting experience, Derrick has done a great job of leading this team. By far Derrick has the most pressure on him and each year he gets more mentally tough. "He is the heart of the team and works hard at volleyball both on and off the court," said Sullivan, "improving his own passing, hitting and defense and assessing other teams for their weaknesses for us to utilize."

NAME: Raf Kosakowski
SCHOOL: Braintree
GRADE: Senior
STATS: - "Raf is our best all around player, he reads the other teams offense and defense very well. His hitting began to peak in the latter third of the season, which definitely helped us in making the tournament. Raf takes control in pressure situations and when he is on, our team plays better," said Sullivan.

NAME: Chris Rogerson
SCHOOL: Weymouth
GRADE: Senior
STATS: He was the leader on and off the court. Rogerson led the team in blocks and tied with Josh Ledin for kills. He is also one of the better passers on the Wildcats. "Chris is a tremendous leader. He gives us everything in the flow of the game. Chris is an inspiration on and off the court," said coach Bill MacEachern.

NAME: Patrick Leary
SCHOOL: Braintree
GRADE: Senior
STATS: Although he is soft spoken, he hits with authority. "Pat is both a strong hitter and blocker and for being a tall guy, at 6'4" he plays very good defense. He passes pretty consistently and his serving has been strong all year. When the team is playing inconsistently Pat is most often the player who is playing pretty solid; he was definitely our go to guy during the regular season," said Coach Sullivan.

NAME: Kenny Le
SCHOOL: Weymouth
GRADE: Sophomore
STATS: He was the find of the season. Nobody knew of Lee before the season began but every knew who he was once the season began. A transfer from Florida, Le provided Weymouth with a talented setter. He led the team with assists as he had just over 600 for the season. Ken Le is a key guy that Weymouth will build around next year.

HONORABLE MENTION

...Golf...

NAME: Emma Keller
SCHOOL: Duxbury
GRADE: Senior (captain)
STATS: Keller, who missed a handful of matches due to injury, finished with a 5-2 record and a team-high 87 percent (double bogey or better). She came in second in pars and bogeys, and she fared well at the state tournament despite playing on one of the toughest courses around – Sterling Country Club.

NAME: Melissa Donahue
SCHOOL: Hingham
GRADE: Junior
STATS: Melissa is a Mass. Bay League All-Star, and was Hingham's team leader all season, playing in the No. 1 spot.

NAME: Colleen O'Connor
SCHOOL: Duxbury
GRADE: Senior (captain)
STATS: With a 61 percentage rate shooting double bogey or better, O'Connor finished third on the team in bogeys and pars, went to the state finals, and was instrumental in Duxbury winning the league title and finishing fifth in the state.

NAME: Mary Mulcahy
SCHOOL: Scituate
GRADE: Freshman
STATS: Mary finished tied for fourth place with a round of 89 in the MIAA State Individual Meet in May at Newton's Woodland Country Club. With no girls team at Scituate, Mary wasn't able to compete in the girls regular season, but played tournaments instead. She also played in the fall with the boys team.

NAME: Briana Connolly
SCHOOL: Duxbury
GRADE: Sophomore
STATS: After missing some matches earlier this season, Connolly came back and went 6-2-1, playing at number 1 or number 2. She led the team in pars and bogeys and finished the season with an 84 percent rate (shooting double bogeys or better). She won the Bay State League South Division individual tournament, shooting a 42, and she came in eighth at the state finals.

Wind bylaw at a standstill

Planning Board continues public hearing

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Citizens expecting to head to the high school gymnasium Thursday night to cast their vote on a proposed amendment to the wind energy bylaw were not given the chance.

On the eve of the scheduled Special Town Meeting Wednesday a majority of the Planning Board determined they needed more information, discussion and clarity on the citizen petition article concerning the wind energy bylaw.

According to state law governing zoning bylaw, the planning board must hold a public hearing on any zoning bylaw amendments and issue a report or recommendation to town meeting in order for town meeting to take action on the zoning bylaw amendment. Town meeting can take action on the zoning bylaw even without a planning board report but 21 days after the public hearing closes.

"I got to say using special town meeting to establish zoning regulations is completely and utterly inappropriate."
— Charles Samuelson, Planning Board

The Planning Board did not close the hearing; it has been continued to Wed. July 29 at 7:15p.m. That means the earliest Town Meeting could take action on the wind energy bylaw is sometime in August, if the planning board closes the hearing at that point.

The vote was 3-2 in favor of continuing the public hearing on the bylaw and seeking input from the zoning advisory committee, a committee appointed by the planning board. Planning Board members Al Moore, Stuart Ivimey and Charles Samuelson voted in favor of the motion; Planning Board members Clark Brewer and Jean Healey Dippold voted against.

The decision followed nearly two hours of public comments, where the majority spoke in opposition of the proposed "moratorium" of the wind bylaw.

"I'd submit every (zoning) bylaw in town could be improved...but this is no way to amend a bylaw," said Ed Lappen of Deep Run.

Several speakers felt the proponents should have come forward with specific amendments to the bylaw, as opposed to seeking a "time out" from the bylaw. Others refuted the proponents' list of what they would like to see improved in the bylaw and did not see them as critical flaws.

Putting a face on Type-1 diabetes

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

At Sunday morning's Cohasset Triathlon each athletes will be focused on their race – swimming, biking and running to the best of their ability.

A group of 10 athletes will have to do all that — and keep close track of their blood sugar because they have type-1 diabetes.

In a fitting complement to the Triathlon's fundraising efforts for type-1 (juvenile) diabetes a team of seasoned and newbie triathletes who share in the challenge of living with diabetes will take to the course.

The Tri Team for Diabetes, as it has been dubbed, hopes to raise awareness and inspiration around what type-1 diabetes is – and is not.

A team comprised solely of athletes with type-1 diabetes was the brainchild of Karen Lyons. Over the past two years Lyons has become an integral part of the Cohasset Triathlon; she lost her husband, Joe Lyons, when he suffered a heart attack during the first triathlon. Their son, nine-year-old Sam, has type-1 diabetes. Last year, she and dozens of others completed the race in her husband's honor as part of Team Lyons. A group of 55 athletes, including Lyons, are back again this year to race.

Following the 2008 race, Lyons decided to seek out diabetic athletes to compete in the triathlon to bring a real life picture of what the JDRF fundraising is all about. She said for the many that don't have juvenile diabetes or first hand experience with a child or family member the disease can be an abstract concept.

"It's a good opportunity for those who have type-1 diabetes to show a lot of people the disease doesn't have to limit what they do in life," Lyons said. "At the same time demonstrating the great effort it takes to make it happen and why a cure for the disease is so important."

Having a son with type-1 diabetes and dealing with the daily challenges of balancing blood sugar, insulin, food, exercise with everyday life makes her appreciate the accomplishment of what the Tri Team for Diabetes will do on Sunday all the more.

"To me it's incredibly impressive and inspiring," Lyons said.

With the help of the Cohasset Triathlon website and word of mouth Lyons recruited a group of 10 for the team.

"They are all at all different levels of experience," some have completed Ironman triathlons and marathons and other,s while active in other sports, are new to this multi-sport event.

The shared goals of the team, in addition to challenging themselves, is to raise money for research and eventually a cure for juvenile diabetes and raise awareness about the disease.

"It doesn't have to be a life limiting disease," said Karl Amber, one of more seasoned triathletes on the team having competed in the first two Cohasset Triathlons and an Ironman Triathlon.

Dog's life is spared

'Tyson' will go to pet sanctuary in Colorado

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The pit bull's life will be spared, but he will live out the rest of his days far away from Cohasset.

Tyson, the pit bull that has stirred up the Highland Court neighborhood over the past few months, got his marching orders from the Board of Selectmen Monday night.

The dog, owned by the O'Connell family at 17 Highland Court, will be transported to Mariah's Promise, a no-kill dog sanctuary in Colorado where it is hoped he will be adopted.

The Selectmen's office was packed with a standing room only audience for the roughly half-hour proceeding.

"I think this is a very good option, it takes into consideration the concerns of the neighbors, the town and is sympathetic to the feelings of the family."
— Selectman Karen Quigley

When Selectmen chair Paul Carlson opened the floor to the complainants – primarily, the neighbors – none wished to speak. Amyra O'Connell, the owner of the dog, represented her family.

"I would like to convey that Tyson was not a vicious puppy, he was not brought up to fight, he was loved and cared for by my family," said O'Connell, who had to stop at one point to collect herself in the face of emotion.

After several months of letters from neighbors to the animal control officer, a preliminary hearing was held by the Town Manager in late May. The weekend following the hearing the pit bull allegedly was fighting with a neighborhood dog and bit a young girl in the face.

Following the dog bite, O'Connell said she signed the papers authorizing the dog to be put down after Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy explained to her the seriousness of the situation and the likely outcome the town would have the dog euthanized. O'Connell said she didn't want Tyson to have to

Golf course liquor license expanded

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The change in liquor license will allow the golf club to serve beer and wine at a stand located behind the green of the ninth hole and via a beer cart.

In the near future, golfers could be sipping beers at the ninth hole at the Cohasset Golf Club.

The Board of Selectmen, acting as liquor license authority, granted the golf club an expansion of its liquor license to include the entire course grounds.

The change in liquor license will allow the golf club to serve beer and wine at a stand located behind the green of the ninth hole and via a beer cart.

The present licensed premises consist of the clubhouse, which has a basement, main floor and partial second floor. The bar and lounge are on the main floor. The application requested to extend the premises to also include the grounds of the golf course.

The club will abide by the state regulations limiting the serving and consumption of alcohol. Signage will be placed at the parking lot and the crossing of public ways as well as appropriate locations bordering the course in conspicuous places stating "no alcoholic beverages beyond this point." The sale of alcoholic beverages to any patron will be limited to two drinks while on the golf course grounds. The servers handling and serving alcoholic beverages will be 18 or older.

Public ways intersect the course so drinks purchased at the ninth hole snack bar could only be consumed while playing the seventh, eighth and ninth holes of the course.

Police Chief James Hussey said there had been no liquor license related incidents at the Golf Club in recent memory.

The Board of Selectmen supported the expansion of the liquor license in a 4-0 vote (Selectman Ralph Dormitzer recused himself as he is a member of the Cohasset Golf Club).

All facility stickers to expire June 30

The expiration date of the beach and Recycling Transfer Facility permits is June 30. A copy of a current registration is required. If leasing a vehicle, people will need proof of residence in addition to the registration. Stickers will be on sale starting Monday, June 15, during normal business hours at Town Hall. Stickers will also be available at the DPW garage on weekends from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., starting June 20, and during the week starting June 15, from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. Sticker prices will remain the same as last year - $50 for residents under the age of 60 and for $15 for seniors.

This sticker will allow access to the Recycling Transfer Facility, Sandy Beach, as well as, parking at all areas in town that require a sticker. In addition, residents will be required to purchase special bags in which to dispose of all trash that cannot be recycled. These bags will be offered at the Department of Public Works building and various locations throughout the town. All commercial contractors and vehicles registered in a business name should pick up their stickers at the Department of Public Works. People are encouraged to purchase stickers through the mail by providing the appropriate fee, a copy of a current registration and a self-addressed return envelope.

Party host charged under Social Host Law

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The 20-year-old party host is being charged under the Social Host Responsibility Law that can hold a party host responsible for underage drinking at his premises.

Police responded to an underage drinking party on Summer Street on Friday (June 19) at 10:48 p.m.

The 20-year-old party host is being summonsed to court on charges of providing alcohol to minors and for being a minor in possession of alcohol. Chief James Hussey said there were about 14 people at the party, including two, who were of legal age – the others were all under 21. Police identified the minors and called their parents. One of the 21-year-olds was also released to his parents because he was intoxicated the other 21-year-old was not intoxicated and was allowed to leave. He was not driving, police said. Police found about three cases of beer at the party.

The 20-year-old party host is being charged under the Social Host Responsibility Law that can hold a party host responsible for underage drinking at his premises.

The Social Host Responsibility Law, enacted in 2000 as a result of a Cohasset party where minors had been drinking, eliminates ambiguity in holding party hosts criminally responsible for allowing minors to drink on their property. In other works, anyone who owns or controls a property can be charged if a minor is drinking there, even if the person does not provide the alcohol.

Police were alerted to the party by a concerned caller.

OUI arrest

A 54-year-old Cohasset woman has been charged with operating under the influence of alcohol (second offense) after an accident on South Main Street at about 10:38 p.m. on Friday (June 19). An officer observed the woman trying to park and saw her back into a vehicle. Further investigation revealed she had apparently been drinking and she was placed under arrest. There was minor damage to the vehicle she backed into, police said.

Plate

It is not clear if a license plate missing from an Atlantic Avenue resident's Ford Explorer is lost or stolen, police said. Police responded to a report of a stolen plate on Monday (June 15) after the SUV owner noticed the front plate was missing. Chief Hussey said police put the plate number into the National Crime Information Center (NCIC) which alerts other police departments about the license plate should it turn up on another vehicle.

Vandalism

Police are investigating reports of a rock being thrown at a home on Elm Street and a previous incident of broken glass in the driveway of the home. The rock incident was reported on Monday (June 15) when the resident went to the police station. The incident had occurred the night before. Police said the woman's daughter heard a loud bang about 11 p.m. but did not see anything. The next morning, they found a rock next to the house. Detectives are investigating to see if the incidents are random or if there is motivation behind them.

ID theft

A Cohasset police detective has met with the apparent victim of identity theft and is investigating. The resident reported that someone had obtained his social security number and name and used those to open accounts at Target and Home Depot in California. The victim became aware of the fraud when bills started arriving. Police also provided the resident with an identity theft packet.

Unlicensed

A 44-year-old Brazilian man living in Weymouth is being summonsed to court for operating without a driver's license. Police stopped the car the man was driving after seeing him cross the centerline on Hull Street on Wednesday (June 17) at about 2 p.m. and determined based on his passport information that he did not have a license. He was also cited for marked lanes violation.

Green pickup

Police are trying to identify a green pickup truck seen on Surry Drive several times. The operator has allegedly yelled out obscenities at children playing ball in the area, police said. The kids have yelled back telling him to "shut up," Chief Hussey said. On one occasion the man driving the pickup had a passenger. While police have a description of the vehicle, they do not have a plate number. The operator has been described as being in his late teens.

Wallet

Police called the owner of a wallet found on June 18 and as it turned out the wallet had been stolen from the Jerusalem Road resident's car sometime after 11:30 p.m. on Wednesday (June 17). Missing from the wallet was about $25 in cash. Also stolen from the unlocked car was a digital camera. Police are investigating the incident.

Accidents

• A Scituate woman was cited for failure to yield after she pulled out of Leo's Gulf Station on Route 3A to head toward Scituate, cutting across lanes of traffic. Her 2000 Jeep collided with a 1999 Ford operated by a Weymouth man who was headed north. There were no tows and no injuries, police said The accident occurred at 10:28 a.m. on Friday (June 19).

• A vehicle apparently hit a fire hydrant on Atlantic Avenue sometime overnight Friday (June 19) to Saturday (June 20). A caller reported the accident after seeing some debris from a vehicle and tire marks. Police think the operator lost control of the car along the curve near the 300 block of Atlantic Avenue and slid sideways into the hydrant. They think the car, based on the paint chips at the scene, was black or dark green.

Missing teen

A concerned mother notified police that her 19-year-old daughter had not returned home at 3:17 a.m. on Saturday (June 20). She was not answering her cell phone and did not have the car, police said. The mother also contacted her friends to no avail. Her father went out to look for the girl and located her, so all turned out OK, police said.

Weathervane

Police are investigating a report of a stolen copper weathervane from a King Street home. The victim said the weathervane had been on the garage roof and cannot be sure when was the last time he had seen it. Nothing else is missing. However, if the weathervane had fallen off – it would still be on the ground. Therefore, the weathervane that is valued at $500 was probably stolen, police said. The incident is under investigation.

Missing items

A tenant who is moving out of a rental unit in town reported that items including a diamond ring, necklace and camera are missing. Several people have had access to her unit and police are investigating, Chief Hussey said.

Planning Board stalls recommendation on wind bylaw

cle, said the proponents could have proposed substantive amendments, but opted to take this route to enable a collaborative and constructive process to the zoning amendments. "Our position is let's improve the bylaw in a collaborative fashion," said Patterson.

Some in the audience and on the planning board expressed confusion about the proposed citizen's petition article. The article printed in the town meeting warrant was considered by some to be substantially different from the motion the citizens sought to be considered on the town meeting floor. The motion proposed included an end date for the "moratorium" on the bylaw — something that was not addressed in the language of the town meeting article submitted to the town by the citizen's petition. Some speakers considered the original article printed in the town meeting warrant was a revocation of the bylaw.

"I'm just confused and I'm afraid a lot of other people are too...I'm not ready (to make a recommendation on this)," said Al Moore, planning board chair. "Procedurally this is a horrible way to write zoning."

The short time frame of town meeting, an irregular procedure and the complexity of the issue all played into the Planning Board's decision.

Planning Board member Ivimey was troubled by what he found to be a discrepancy between the language in the citizen's petition article and the executive summary found in the warrant. The article language indicated the bylaw would be repealed, while the summary said the article would be "suspending new permits for wind turbines, until which time a new bylaw is passed."

Planning Board member Brewer said it was remarkable that a neighborhood was so committed and had the conviction to follow through in what they believed in. However, he said he could not support the article as it was written.

Planning Board member Healey Dippold said she shared in some of the procedural concerns of her colleagues, but felt the bylaw did need some improvement.

"Sitting in the audience and on this board I saw at times the audience, the developer and even the Planning Board struggle with what the bylaw required," said Healey Dippold. "I think there is some opportunity for improvement in the bylaw and it could benefit from more objectivity."

Following the meeting the proponents left more than disappointed. One remarked at the number of phone calls she would have to make so people wouldn't come to town meeting expecting to be heard on the wind bylaw.

Healey Dippold noted the 1000-plus signatures collected in opposition to the first turbine project should tell the board there is great interest and concern about this type of project in Cohasset.

Planning Board member Samuelson said he was not opposed to the consideration of any zoning bylaw change, but did not like the process in which this was brought before the town.

"I got to say using special town meeting to establish zoning regulations is completely and utterly inappropriate," Samuelson said, adding the current bylaw works as was seen in the first wind turbine application and there was no emergency to sunset the bylaw.

Ivimey proposed a motion, seconded by Samuelson, to continue the hearing and seek input from the zoning advisory committee. The Planning Board would make no finding on the zoning bylaw amendment.

Brewer proposed an amendment to Ivimey's motion to not recommend the article.

"Many in the town of Cohasset want to have a definitive answer from this board," Brewer said. The recommendation would also allow Town Meeting to take action on the article at the scheduled Town Meeting. The motion was seconded by Healey Dippold, but failed to get a majority vote.

The Planning Board voted 3-2 (Brewer and Healey Dippold were the 'nay' votes) to continue the hearing until Wed. July 29.

Following the meeting the proponents left more than disappointed. One remarked at the number of phone calls she would have to make so people wouldn't come to town meeting expecting to be heard on the wind bylaw.

"I was really looking forward to some certainty on the issue," said Patterson.

When reached on Thursday morning Nathaniel Palmer of 9 Little Harbor Road, one of the main proponents of the citizen's petition, said the planning board decision is "regrettable, to say the least."

"For the many town residents who supported this article and who have lost the opportunity for their votes to be heard, they should know that we have complied precisely with the requests of each town board, as well as Town Counsel, the Town Manager and the Town Moderator. Since the beginning, the proponents of Article 2 have followed every procedure and law exactly as prescribed, and the Planning Board's decision was in spite of this.

"We have acted entirely in good faith, which of course was not reciprocated," said Palmer in an e-mail.

After the Mariner went to press, Special Town Meeting was still scheduled to convene to take action on an article amending a previously approved appropriation to build a synthetic turf field at the high school.

Selectmen waiting for legal opinion on wind bylaw

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"There is a tremendous downside to this moratorium."
— Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson

At its meeting Monday night the Board of Selectmen delayed its recommendation on the proposed wind energy bylaw until they received a legal opinion from Town Counsel.

Proponents of the wind bylaw amendments, Nathaniel Palmer, Lori Langenhagen and Jim Huse, came forward to present their case to the board.

The article proposed to sunset the current wind energy bylaw for a period of time. Proponents indicated the "moratorium" would last until the 2010 spring town meeting where more specific amendments to the bylaw could be addressed.

"Several hundred people have various concerns about the current bylaw. The purpose is not to rescind (the wind energy) bylaw, only to strengthen," said Langenhagen. "I believe we don't have anything to lose by putting on a moratorium."

Selectmen chairman Paul Carlson disagreed with the proponents' assertion there was nothing to lose by taking a moratorium on the bylaw to retool its language. The state is in the process of developing regulations to go along with the Green Communities Act and the legislature could vote to implement state regulation on local communities any day now. He feared that in the absence of a local zoning bylaw governing wind turbines, the state regulations would take precedence.

"There is a tremendous downside to this moratorium," said Carlson.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said the moratorium was needed in order to address the issues raised during the first wind turbine application.

Selectmen discussed possibly speeding up the process of revising the wind energy bylaw and bringing forward revisions to the fall Special Town Meeting.

Selectman Karen Quigley had some issues with the process in which the zoning bylaws could be changed.

"I'm concerned we're setting a bad precedent that when any group is unhappy, they can come forward and propose a change to the bylaw," Quigley said.

The Selectmen planned discuss and make their recommendation in a short meeting scheduled at 6:30p.m. before Town Meeting began. However, that discussion may be moot (see related planning board story).

With minimal discussion the Selectmen unanimously recommended the approval of the turf field article. When the article passed at 2008 Special Town Meeting cost estimates were $1,050,000. Town Meeting voted to bond $500,000 to construct the field, if cash donations totaling $550,000 were raised. When the project went out to bid, because of the economy, bids came in lower than expected (the low bid came in at $950,000).

The town meeting article requested Town Meeting to adjust the monetary values included in the original article so the project can move ahead this summer.

Changes to report cards at elementary schools

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The new system will do away with the traditional A, B, C grades for each subject matter in favor of evaluating students on various skills they should have gained mastery over the course of the year.

Beginning next fall, the elementary schools will have a brand new way to grade the students. Following a year of study and development, the elementary schools will move to a "standards-based assessment system." The new system moves away from the traditional grade reporting measures of how well the student is performing in comparison to other students to a reporting measure where a student's performance is compared to standards and grade level expectations.

The new system will do away with the traditional A, B, C grades for each subject matter in favor of evaluating students on various skills they should have gained mastery over the course of the year. The standards identify what a student should know and be able to do for each subject area and grade level. Each students will be given a 1 (approaches grade level standard), 2 (meets grade level standard) or 3 (exceeds grade level standard) for each skill.

A space for teacher comment is available under each section. Members of the School Committee wanted to be sure the comments were going to be able to be tailored to each students and not a general "pleasure to have in class."

"As a parent, I really like the comments, it gives the report cards a heartbeat," said School Committee member Lucia Flibotte.

At the elementary level, students are given progress reports three times a year – in December, March and June.

The School Committee unanimously approved the changes to the elementary school progress reports.

Karen Lyons forms Tri Team for Diabetes

The members of the Tri Team have faced the same training challenges of non-diabetic athletes, they have to be constantly aware of their blood sugar levels and adjust as needed.

The mix of experience levels has been a positive one for all involved. Leading up to race day, the team has had several conference calls and e-mail chains to exchange tips and challenges associated with training and race day competition.

"It's been great to hear others experiences, mistakes and best practices. It's much better when you can draw on the cumulative experiences of others," said Jay Hernandez, 33, of Hingham. Hernandez has been living with type-1 diabetes for 24 years. He has completed a handful of endurance challenged including the Boston Marathon and cycling across the US and Cohasset is his first tri.

"Diabetes is a factor, but not a focus in my life," said Hernandez. Through competing in athletic events, he said he has been able to learn about his body and how it reacts to prolonged periods of exercise.

Amber, who is one of the veteran triathletes on the Tri Team for Diabetes, has shared his experience, particularly of specific challenges of race day.

"Mostly I've shared things that didn't go right and how you should not do things," Amber said with a laugh.

Although each person is affected and deals with their diabetes symptoms differently, Tri Team for Diabetes member Evan Berg said it was reassuring to know others are having similar experiences.

"It's nice to know you're not the only one," said Berg, 37. "Being part of a team with diabetics is something I've never been a part of. I can count on one hand the number of (type-1 diabetics) I have shared the experience of athletic events with. It's been a great learning experience."

Hernandez, who was diagnosed in the mid-1980s at age 10, said his diagnosis came with the news he would not be able to play baseball or participate in athletics because of the disease. With the advances in medicine that no longer has to be the case.

"A focus of mine as I got older is to ensure no one with type-1 diabetes has to hear that type of speech again," said Hernandez. "I want to show kids out there who have diabetes that anything is possible."

Lyons and the team members hope to grow the Tri Team for Diabetes over the coming years and possibly do other triathlons. She hopes once her son Sam turns 13 (the minimum age for triathlon participants), he will become a member of the team.

Lyons will introduce the members of the Tri Team for Diabetes and Olympic swimmer Gary Hall Jr. at the closing ceremonies of the triathlon.

Partnership with JDRF

The Cohasset Triathlon has partnered with the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF) for the third consecutive year. A portion of the event's proceeds will go directly to the JDRF. In 2008, the triathlon was the largest volunteer driven event for JDRF in the country. Over the last two years, through our racers efforts we have raised over $300,000 for JDRF.

The JDRF was founded in 1970 by the parents of children with juvenile, or Type 1, diabetes, who were desperate to find a cure for the disease as quickly as possible. Type 1 diabetes is a disease that strikes children suddenly, makes them insulin dependent for life, and carries the constant threat of devastating complications.

Kids with Type 1 diabetes no longer produce insulin, but without it, they cannot survive. Therefore, they must take insulin either through several shots each day or through an insulin pump which is inserted by catheter into the child and worn 24 hours a day.

These kids must also have their blood sugar levels checked by pricking their fingers as many as ten times throughout every day and night in order to keep them at safe levels. The short term effects of a severe low blood sugar can be dangerous, and the long term complications from high blood sugars can include heart disease, kidney failure, blindness and amputations.

To donate to JDRF, visit the Cohasset Triathlon website, www.cohassettri.com or the JDRF website, www.jdrf.org. For more information about juvenile diabetes and the JDRF, call (800) 533-CURE (2873) or e-mail info@jdrf.org.

Cohasset swimmer joins Swim Across America

Deborah Thomas of Cohasset has joined Swim Across America to make a splash for pediatric cancer survivorship programs at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. The 14th annual Boston Harbor 22-mile relay swim will take place Friday, July 17, and the 11th annual Nantasket Beach one- and half-mile swims are scheduled for Saturday, July 18. Thomas plans to do the Nantasket Beach swim.

"The ongoing dedication and commitment that Swim Across America has shown over the years in raising financial support and awareness for cancer treatment and research is echoed by the compassion and enthusiasm of those who participate in events held all over the country," said Christine Reilly, a Swim Across America volunteer. "We are hopeful that one day, we will live in a cancer free world and Swim Across America will have played a major role in getting us there."

Every stroke and dollar makes a difference in the fight against cancer. The Boston Harbor swim is an all-day event that starts from behind Boston Harbor Hotel at Rowes Wharf. Swimmers pledged a minimum of $1,500 to participate. Swimmers taking part in the one and half-mile competitive ocean swims at Nantasket Beach in Hull must raise a minimum of $150 each.

Swim Across America is a nonprofit corporation that organizes events to support cancer research at the country's finest hospitals and institutions. Proceeds from the Boston-area swims go directly to the David B. Perini Jr. Quality of Life Program at Dana-Farber, where experts help pediatric cancer survivors with an array of issues, including long-term effects of treatment, social and psychological concerns and the risk of second cancers.

Cohasset puts out welcome mat for baby Mae!

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

THINK SUN!

Hello Cohasset. I am so hoping that by today, Friday the sun has made an appearance and might stay for a bit to dry things out. People have been in and outside even in the rain so I guess we all learn to make do with what we have but it will be nice to warm things out. I hope that everyone enjoys the weekend and look forward to a super week before the 4th of July! Here comes the news Around Town for the week.

NEW BABY

Thank Heavens for Little Girls... Welcome to baby Mae Dorothy Geddes who joins her brothers, Michael, Dereck and Gregory and big sister, Nina. Baby Mae is the new daughter of Marc and Sasha Geddes and she is being loved to pieces by all, who are so proud of their beautiful baby daughter and sister.

Congratulations to all the Geddeses on your new addition!

NEW MD

Congratulations to William Tobey Horn, who was awarded the degree of Doctor of Medicine by the Trustees and Faculty of Wake Forest University School of Medicine on May 18.

Tobey is a graduate of Derby Academy, Cohasset High School, Bowdoin College (cum laude) and the Post-baccalaureate PrMedical program at Bryn Mawr College.

During his four years at Wake Forest School of Medicine, Tobey represented his class on the school Honor Council. In late June he will become a medical resident at Dartmouth Hitchcock Medical Center in Lebanon, New Hampshire.

Tobey is the son of Richard and Carolyn Horn of Scituate, formerly of Cohasset.

CAFE

Cohasset Café will end for the season on June 29. You are welcome to attend from 9-11 a.m. on Monday for a special closing breakfast including an assortment of hot and cold delicacies prepared by The Friends of Cohasset Elders. The one time cost for this event will be $4. It is a nice way to end the season with good friends, tasty food and happy times. Call 781-383-9112 for more information.

ROWING

What a great experience for teens to learn the art of rowing, America's fastest growing collegiate sport and a lifetime of fun. CMI is sponsoring a three week program in July, taught by college rowers to introduce students to rowing for fun and, if desired, competition. The Program will run July 7 – July 23. Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday mornings from 9 – 10:30 a.m. and 10:30 a.m. to 12 noon. Applications are available on the website www.rowcmi.com. If you have any questions please call Susan Wilcox 781.383.1998 or Lisa Hewitt Dick 781.383.0204

CONNECTICUT

Rachel Danae Garber of Cohasset was awarded a Bachelor of Arts degree from Connecticut College at the 91st commencement ceremony on May 17, 2009. Congratulations!

UVM

Ellie Casey of Cohasset has been named to the dean's list for the spring 2009 semester at the University of Vermont. Casey is a first-year student English major in the College of Arts & Sciences.

To be named to the dean's list, students must have a grade point average of 3.0 or better and rank in the top 20 percent of their class in their respective college or school.

Wow, Ellie – well done!

EMORY

Thomas Greco of Cohasset received a Master of Business Administration from the Goizueta Business School of Emory University in Atlanta, Ga., at its 164th commencement ceremony on May 11. All the best for a great future, Thomas!

STONEHILL

Stonehill College recently named Cohasset resident Mary A. Previte, a member of the class of 2011, to its Dean's List for the spring 2009 semester.

To qualify for the Dean's List at Stonehill, students must have a semester grade point average of 3.50 or better and must have completed successfully all courses for which they were registered.

Great work, Mary!

WENTWORTH

Wentworth Institute of Technology announces that Edward Karcher of Cohasset was among alumni from the Class of 1959 who were presented honorary Bachelor of Technology degrees at the Spring Commencement ceremony on May 17 in recognition and celebration of their 50th year reunion and induction into the Wentworth Black and Gold Society, which honors alumni marking a 50th reunion year.

Congratulations!

BU

Boston University awarded academic degrees to 5,863 students in May 2009. Cohasset residents receiving degrees were Patrick E. Brisbane earning a master of science in computer science and Jeannette D. Daley earning a bachelor of science in elementary education.

All the best with your future plans!

NORTHEASTERN

Northeastern University has recognized those students who distinguished themselves during the course of the school year. The following Cohasset students were recently named to the dean's list for the 2009 spring semester, which ended in May.

Jacqueline M. Cahill, business administration major; Kiersten L. Swain, communication studies major; Casey L. Cavanaro, communication studies major; Jonathan Grimm, communication studies major; Samuel Steele, entrepreneurship and new venture management major; Elizabeth Fegreus, liberal arts-non science major; Rita K. Carpenter, nursing major; and Alison Krupczak, nursing major.

To achieve dean's list distinction, students must carry a full program of at least four courses, have a quality point average of 3.25 or greater out of a possible 4.0 and carry no single grade lower than a C during the course of their college career. Each student receives a letter of commendation and congratulation from their college dean.

Mae Dorothy Geddes has made her debut!

SAVANNAH

The following Cohasset students were named to the dean's list at Savannah College of Art and Design in Savannah, Ga., for the 2008 winter quarter.

Justin Fredric Wood, who is seeking a bachelor of fine arts degree from the School of Design; and Kathleen Elizabeth Dewaal, who is seeking a bachelor of fine arts degree from the School of Building Arts.

Full-time undergraduate students who earn a grade point average of 3.5 or above for the quarter receive recognition on the dean's list.

Congratulations!

TABOR

Headmaster Jay Stroud has named the following Cohasset residents to the high honors and commended lists at Tabor Academy for Semester 2 of the 2008-2009 academic year. High honors are earned by compiling an overall average of 90 or above. Students earn commendation for achieving an overall average of 80 or above, with no grade below 75, and no more than one grade between 75 and 80.

Earning High honors was Doyle Calhoun, Class of 2012, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Calhoun.

On the commended list was Samantha Bobo, Class of 2011, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Bobo.

Great work!

Sandy Beach announces new column!

SANDY BEACH

KARI O'DONNELL

The Sandy Beach Association is thrilled to announce our new regular column in the Cohasset Mariner! This column will run during the regular beach season (mid-June through Labor Day). This is a space where the supporters of Sandy Beach can find a tide schedule, meet our staff, read announcements and learn about what's happening at the beach during the season. Despite the awful weather the beach is officially open! Lifeguards are trained and on-site and we are ready to go! The storms of the last few weeks have brought a lot of seaweed onto the shore and we will have a second clean up at the end of this week.

The triathlon will be this Sunday. The beach will be open all day on Saturday (guards on duty until 7pm) but there will be a partial parking lot closure starting at 2pm. If you plan on being on the beach after 2pm we recommend parking your cars toward the north end of the parking lot. The beach will closed until noon on Sunday and there will be no lifeguards or bathhouse access until then.

Kari O'Donnell is a member of the Sandy Beach Association.

Chamber website re-vamped

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

On the verge of what is hoped to be a busy summer season for Cohasset businesses, the Chamber of Commerce has launched a completely re-vamped version of its website.

The aim is to have one place on the web where both people in town and out of town can go to find information about all Cohasset has to offer. The web address is www.cohassetchamber.org.

"We wanted to build a website that would promote the chamber's business members, but also be a marketing piece for the town," said Darilynn Evans, Chamber president and owner of the village business Darilynn's Home Presence.

"The more people who send in information, the richer the website can be."

Web site designer

Chamber of Commerce president Darilynn Evans and webmaster Jackie Fitts worked on updating the recently re-vamped chamber website earlier this week. The aim of the new website is to have one place on the web where people can go to find information about Cohasset.

The Chamber of Commerce and local businesses have always fielded phone calls and information requests from visitors, wedding planners, and could-be-residents. Now, Evans said, they have a comprehensive resource to refer those requests to.

"We're starting to get more calls and e-mails from people coming to town this summer or planning a wedding," Evans said.

While the primary focus of the Chamber is to support local businesses, Evans hope the website also fosters a sense of community for local residents. Non-profit organizations and local groups are welcome and encouraged to send in information about upcoming events and general information.

"The more people who send in information, the richer the website can be," said Jackie Fitts, who designed the new website. A member of the Chamber of Commerce and owner of WebWrite Services, Fitts' goals was to make the website easy to update and easy to navigate.

When Fitts was thinking about moving to Cohasset eight years ago she browsed all the websites related to town functions and organizations to get a feel for the area. The information she found was invaluable – and now the Chamber website puts it all in one place. All the local organizations, from the Farmer's Market to the schools to the Music Circus, have links from the Chamber site to their own individual site.

Over the past few years, the Chamber of Commerce has been working to raise its visibility both in town and to visitors. When thousands come to town for the spring's road race and the summer's triathlon, the Chamber has set up a booth to guide out-of-towners to shops and other points of interest.

The Chamber partnered with the South Shore Music Circus for its annual Box Office Day when tickets first go on sale. The goal was to get the word out about what Cohasset has to offer so when they come back for the show they would come early to have dinner, shop or check out the harbor.

The first annual Cohasset Day last fall brought the community and visitors to the village and town common.

An integral part of the website is the calendar, which Evans envisions being the go-to place to find out about business and civic events in town. The Chamber envisions big events, like the road race and triathlon, Cohasset Day, Arts Festival to be on calendar as well as chamber member events, special sales, promotions, or a speaker. The calendar is interactive and the Chamber is welcoming non-profits and other organizations to send in their big events.

There is a section entitled "Explore Cohasset" where web visitors can discover all Cohasset has to offer – history, arts, walking trails, music, dining and shopping.

In the coming weeks an additional tab —"Planning an Event"— devoted to those planning events locally (weddings, family reunions). The section will include information on things to do, where to stay, transportation, where to eat – questions fielded by the Chamber frequently.

Down the line Evans hopes to incorporate a "Shop Cohasset" program to the website where coupons and special incentives will be offered by local businesses on a rotating business.

The Cohasset Chamber is comprised of about 60 members representing a cross section of businesses from merchants to service-based businesses throughout town. Many of the members call the village their home base, but the Chamber also includes many of the businesses along Route 3A or home offices and is always looking for more businesses to join itsranks.

First-rate stuff comes second hand

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

In an economy where many are pinching pennies and trying to stretch their paycheck, some businesses have been suffering as their customers tighten their belts.

By their very nature, though, some businesses such as consignment shops thrive in a struggling economy because they fulfill a need people are looking for.

In Cohasset there are two consignment shops, both located on Route 3A. While many businesses around them are struggling to match last year's profits, both of these consignment shops are doing the same or better than they did last year.

"Overall I'm pleased with our business picture for the first six months," said Andi Merrill, manager of Sea Chest Consignment Shop. She admitted, though, that the first two months of 2009 were tough, and that business since then has come in spurts. "Some months work out really well…and we're a little bit better than last year," she said.

Marita Carpenter, president of the Social Service League of Cohasset, which oversees the operation of the Cohasset Consignment Shop, said the company is seeing an increase in both customers and consignors.

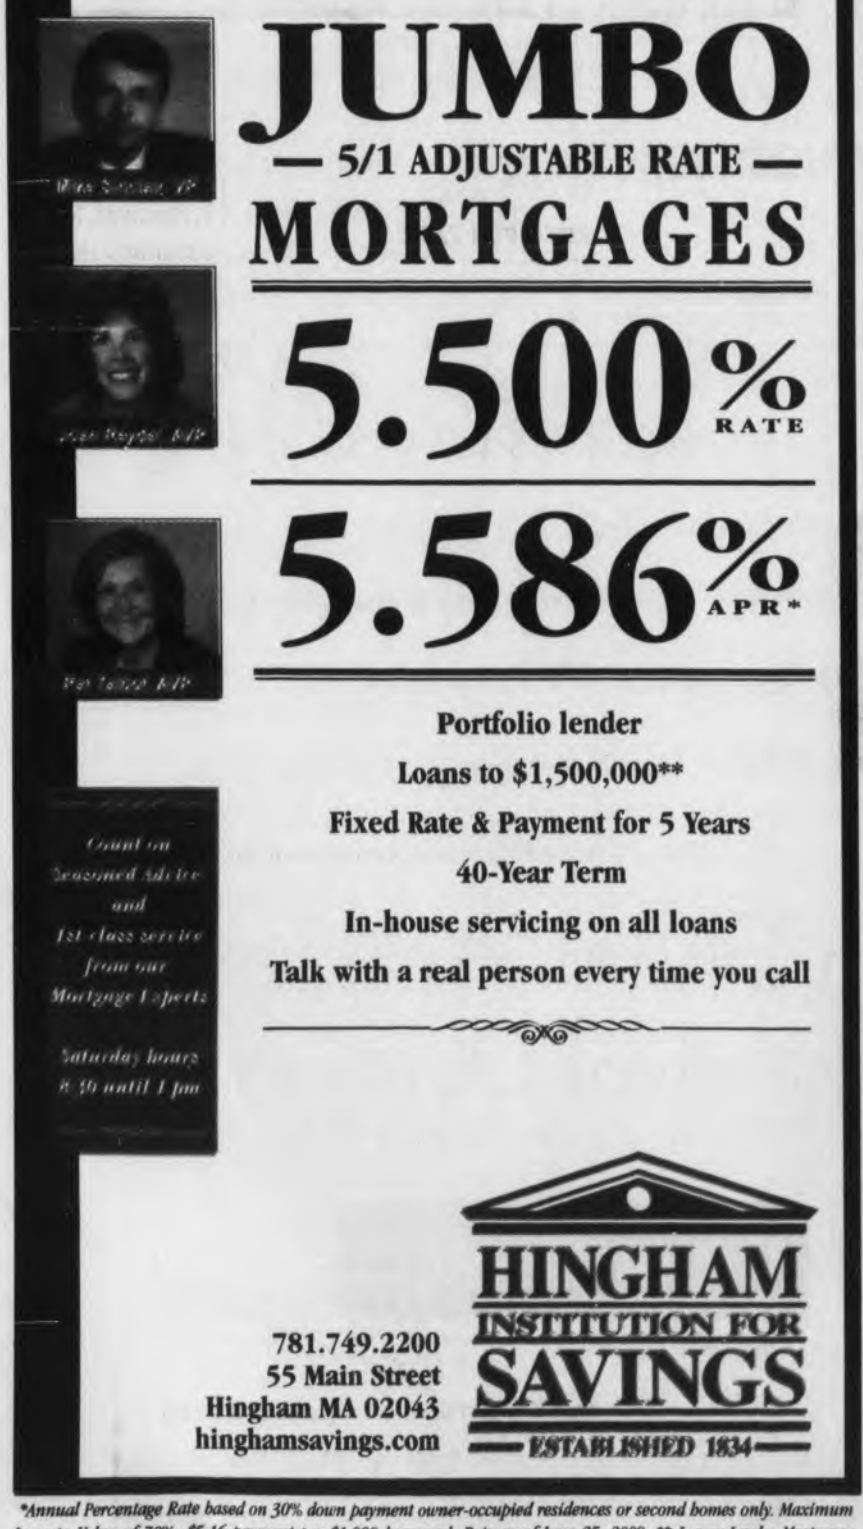
Decorative pieces like this jewelry box with drawers and a wooden standup clock can be found at the Sea Chest Consignment shop.

"We are seeing people shop second hand for the first time in their life," said Carpenter. While she said it could be an indication that families are struggling financially, she's happy the consignment shop can fill a need in the community.

At Sea Chest Consignments, the owners are seeing a steady number of regular consignors bringing items into the shop to be resold. Merrill said the one area of inventory where she is not seeing much traffic is bric-a-brac, or curio, knick-knack items.

"Real estate is down so people are not moving," Merrill said. On the whole, though, Merrill said her inventory is "fabulous."

"A lot of people are shopping in their closets, but many still come in to see the goodies and often they can't resist [a great bargain]," Merrill said, adding that the shop has beautiful clothes and unusual china, many pieces that are hard to come by.



Both shops are constantly changing as consignors bring in their gently worn or used clothing, home goods and furniture most days of the week.

"We get new stuff everyday, it's never the same store twice," said Carpenter. Consignors run the gamut from professional consignors who troll yard sales, local residents redecorating, downsizing or moving from town.

"Most like the idea of making a donation and getting a little something too," said Carpenter.

Merrill, who has been in the consignment business for 27 years, said she loves the variety that working at the consignment shop affords – from the different groups of volunteers to the items brought in to the background music played.

"I enjoy seeing the different things come in – some are real goobers," Merrill said, adding that she believes there's a sock for every shoe and a buyer for every item. "We have a lot of fun; I look forward to coming in everyday."

Both consignment shops are kept afloat by the dozens of volunteers who give their time to the shops and the causes they support.

The Cohasset Consignment Shop is affiliated with the Social Service League of Cohasset. For about 55 years, the consignment shop has been a primary funding source for the non-profit organization that provides service to the underserved on the South Shore. They are involved with Cohasset Elder Affairs, run the local Meals on Wheels program, provide holiday meals and gifts to the elderly, support Wellspring of Hull and put on various other community programs for adults and teenagers.

"We couldn't do it without them," Carpenter said.

The Sea Chest Consignment Shop, which has been in business for roughly six years, has recently formed a new non-profit organization, Sea Winds Charity, Inc. The charity, which was officially formed this year, will support local South Shore based human services non-profits. Each year, the board of directors will review applications from non-profits and the shop's 82 volunteers will vote on one, two or three charities to give the money to that particular year.

Merrill envisions the groups supporting different local organizations each year.

"I think it will work out well and it gives the volunteers a say in where their hard efforts go to," said Merrill.

Sea Chest is located in the Dwyer Building along Rt. 3A, behind Cohasset Cycle Sports, Mullaney's fish market and Lapels dry cleaners. For information, call 781-383-2293.

Cohasset Consignment Shop is located in the Tedeschi Plaza alongside Curtis Liquors, CVS and Cohasset Jewelers. For more information, call 781-383-0687.

Concerts on the Common

Rec kicks off series on July 9

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

What could be better than sitting on green grass, a fading blue sky above and sweet notes blowing in a warm summer breeze?

If the weather ever cooperates with this summer's outdoor events this is exactly what residents could be in store for at the Recreation's Summer Concert Series on Cohasset Common.

The summer concerts, which begin Thursday, July 6, feature area bands and range of music genres.

"I'm excited about the schedule of bands we have coming to town. It's a great variety, totally different types of music. I think there will be something for everyone," said Ted Carroll, recreation director.

"I think there will be something for everyone."
— Ted Carroll, recreation director

This year, in an effort to gain more audience and work in conjunction with the popular Thursday afternoon Farmer's Market, Carroll made the move to from Tuesday to Thursday evenings. The concerts will begin at 7p.m., a half hour after the Farmer's Market ends.

"We wanted to make it more of a family outing. Families can go to the farmer's market then stay, have a picnic on the common and enjoy the concert," Carroll said.

On tap for this year's concerts are O'Reilly's Irish Folk Group (July 9), Rusty Skippers (July 16), Four Guys in Tuxes (July 30) and Crossroads Blues Project (Aug. 6). The performances are free and open to the public.

The summer concert series is one of the longest standing programs put on by the town's recreation department, according to long-time, now retired, recreation director Jack Worley. The Cohasset Concert Series and the summer playground program were among the first programs put on by the Recreation Committee, the forerunner of the elected Recreation Commission, more than 40 years ago.

This year's program is funded in part through a donation from the South Shore Playhouse Associates, the non-profit that owns the South Shore Music Circus, and a grant from the Cohasset Cultural Council, a local agency supported by the state's cultural council.

The summer concert series had its heyday, drawing 200 to 300 people and eight concerts a year in the late 1970s and early 1980s, Worley said in a phone interview.

Funding for the series has changed over the years, but the recreation department has always found a way for the show go on.

For many years, the Recreation Department teamed up with the American Federation of Musicians, a union for professional musicians, Worley said. In addition to booking shows through them they received a matching grant from the organization.

When the town's recreation budget was cut the concert series survived but it was a pared down version of its former self. The program limped along sometimes doing just two summer concerts or inviting 15-piece bands as opposed to a 30-piece orchestra, Worley said.

Now, with the support of the Playhouse Associates and Cultural Council, Carroll hopes to bring back the heyday of the summer concert series.

"We encourage people to make an evening of it, bring lawn chairs, blankets, a picnic," Carroll said. "You don't need to leave town for fun this summer."

On the playbill

The Summer Concert Series will kick off with the combined musical talents of the O'Reilly's Irish Folk Group (July 6). The O'Reilly's have been together for "an awful long time," said band member Bob McDonough. A five-member band based on the South Shore, they have appeared at the Arts Festival in recent years, including this past weekend. The band consists of traditional Irish instruments and gets together regular simply to play together. In years gone by they frequently used to play the Boston Irish pub circuit. With a set list of Irish folk favorites, the band expects to please the audience with Emerald Isle's famed music.

Next up (July 16) is Cohasset's own Rusty Skippers will entertain the crowd. Band director (and Deer Hill music teacher) Steve Biagini said the set is an "entertaining mix" of musical fare. On their playlist this year is Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever," a medley of Blues Brothers favorites, Holst's Jupiter from The Planets, Broadway's "76 Trombones, " Weather Report's "Birdland" and a variety of other marches, a polka, Latin, and jazz selections.

"We haven't done this (concert series) in the past, so we're excited to be able to be there — on our home field, so to speak," said Biagini. The 30-piece concert band was founded in 1995 and its members hail from Cohasset and the surrounding towns.

The Rusty Skippers' name harkens back to many of the original members former status as Cohasset High 'Skippers,' who later returned to their musical instruments and talents. Biagini made sure to note the Rusty Skippers are no longer 'rusty' in their respective musical talents.

After a week hiatus, the concert series returns on Thursday, July 30 with Four Guys in Tuxes. The all-request band encourages audience participation and is familiar with an incredible music library.

"People are usually surprised that we not only know the song they requested, but we do it really well," said Andrew Maness of Four Guys in Tuxes. "We do lots of tunes, lots of styles."

Maness encouraged audience members to come with handwritten requests to hand to the band at the start of the concert.

The final concert on August 6 features Crossroads Blues Project. A blues and rock five-man band is comprised of music teachers, former students and current music students. The common denominator is an association with Crossroads Music in Hanover, said guitarist Paul Doolittle. They have been doing local shows for about seven years.

"We don't play together regularly, but when we get together to play music everybody knows what to do. It's fun to have a reason to play together — and we try to entertain the audience," said Doolittle.

'Tyson' will go to pet sanctuary in Colorado

wait for over a week for his fate to be determined.

Before the dog was going to be sent to be euthanized, 18-year-old Logan Chase was allowed to say goodbye to the dog. In an apparent attempt to save the dog's life, Logan allegedly assaulted the animal control officer restraining the pit bull. Police arrested Chase and he faces multiple charges including assault and battery on a public employee.

Because of confusion over the legality of O'Connell's authorization (her son Logan Chase purchased the puppy) the dog was not euthanized as scheduled. Tyson has been in the care of several different shelters in Brockton, Needham and Brockton over the past few weeks.

Over the past few weeks, O'Connell said her son Logan searched for a pet sanctuary that could accept Tyson. In a letter to the Board of Selectmen, Logan stated he found a rescue group that would take the dog.

"Because of the economy and foreclosures, most pet sanctuaries are full, but I found a wonderful place called Mariah's Promise in Colorado that has agreed to care for Tyson," Logan wrote.

A fax from Mariah's Promise was sent to the Town Manager's office confirming the agreement to accept the dog. The letter states the organization performs professional evaluation and proper training for every animal in their care, whether temporarily or permanently living on the grounds. They will determine if the dog is suitable for adoption.

"I hope you consider this place carefully and spare Tyson's life," said O'Connell.

Following O'Connell's comments, Selectmen Ralph Dormitzer was the first to speak. He felt the Selectmen should follow the advice of the expert they consulted.

After the vote, Quigley appealed to the dog lovers in the community to financially help the family in the expense to transfer the dog to Colorado.

A behavioral evaluation of the dog done by veterinarian Amy Marder, director of behavioral service at the Animal Rescue League of Boston, was conducted last week. She recommended the dog be transferred to a very experienced dog trainer in treating aggressive dogs. If such a trainer cannot be found, she recommended the dog be humanely euthanized.

"The question becomes can it be determined this dog sanctuary has experienced dog trainers?" asked Dormitzer. "We clearly don't want dog to go out and bite someone else."

Selectmen vice chair Karen Quigley spoke with Toni Phillips, director of Mariah's Promise, earlier in the day to get a sense of the organization. She said she thought Phillips sounded knowledgeable about dogs and dog behavior and had extensive experience rescuing and rehabilitating dogs. Quigley said the organization has taken "banished" dogs before and abides by whatever order is given by the community.

"I think this is a very good option, it takes into consideration the concerns of the neighbors, the town and is sympathetic to the feelings of the family," Quigley said.

The Board of Selectmen found that the dog was "a nuisance by reason of vicious disposition" and would be banned from Massachusetts and sent to Mariah's Promise in Colorado. If the dog ever returns to Massachusetts, it will be immediately euthanized.

The board also mandated the dog be neutered and microchipped; the cost to kennel the dog from here until it is transported to Colorado will be assumed by the O'Connell family.

After the vote, Quigley appealed to the dog lovers in the community to financially help the family in the expense to transfer the dog to Colorado. In addition to a plane ticket, the dog needs to be neutered, microchipped, and the family must assume the cost of kenneling the dog from this point forward.

Quigley's request was an expansion on a request made earlier in the hearing from the O'Connell's neighbor and friend Nan Roth who asked her fellow neighbors to raise money to help with the cost.

"It could go a long way to restoring some of the congeniality to the neighborhood," said Roth.

'Send Tyson to Colorado'

Friend and neighbors of Amyra and Logan Chase are raising funds to send Logan's pit bull puppy, Tyson, to Mariah's Promise Animal Rescue in Colorado. They are welcoming all contributions great and small; an account has been set up at Pilgrim Bank. Checks should be made out to "Send Tyson to Colorado" and sent to Pilgrim Bank, 48 South Main Street, Cohasset.

Editor's note: The Mariner received this information from neighbor Nan Roth who requested it be printed.

Lunch program still struggling

Although it looks like the lunch program will close out the year in the black, the school department is still concerned about it future viability. A reduction in staffing mid-year has helped the program stay afloat and turn somewhat of a profit.

Despite changes in school lunch offerings incorporated over the last year, the high school has a very low student participation rate of about 30 percent. The elementary schools have seen some improvement in student participation over the course of the year.

Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh said they were looking at collaborating with another school district on sharing a food service supervisor position and could be coming back before the board with information over the summer.

Transfer funds

The School Committee voted to move some funds from accounts with forecasted balances to some accounts with forecasted deficits.

These are the accounts with projected deficits: building maintenance (-$14,000), school committee legal counsel (-$18,000), special ed tuition (-$51,000), Deer Hill water utility (-$22,000), Osgood and Deer Hill heat utility (-$3,600) and Middle-High School heat utility (-$135,600).

These are the accounts with projected balances: salaries because of grant funding offsets ($396,000), professional development ($36,000), telephone utility all schools ($6,400), electric utility all schools ($15,800), high school water utility ($5,600), special ed transportation ($30,800) and contract services ($27,000).

The schools will make about $270,000 in pre-purchases for the upcoming fiscal year, most of which will go toward special education tuition ($255,000).

The numbers presented at the Wednesday, June 17 meeting were forecasted and were subject to change. The School Committee will look at the final numbers in late July after the close of the fiscal year, June 30.

Stepping up to the plate

Not everyone is in agreement whether to place a "moratorium" of the Cohasset wind energy bylaw.

Planning Board Chairman Al Moore often talks about "unintended consequences" when addressing changes to town bylaws and policies that could have unforeseen effects.

One classic example was the institution of the "private ways committee" some years back that spent considerable time researching all the private ways in town with the potential aim of having the town adopt them as public ways. As we recall some of the private ways needed considerable attention in terms of pothole repair, etc., and the consensus was as public ways they would be eligible for public highway funds.

At the 11th hour, however, it was determined that turning private ways into public ways could actually open those private ways up for development. We saw all the private ways committee's work go up in smoke with that revelation.

Wind power has such a nice ring to it. Few people are opposed to wind power – that is unless turbines are going into their backyard (like Nantucket Sound, for example!).

As a town, state and nation – we have to look at alternative power: "renewable" energy sources. If we don't do that then our economic future is in peril.

But with that being said, we believe in the rights of citizens and the democratic process. Our town is governed by Town Meeting. It is the right of concerned voters to redress their government if they see fit.

In this case, a legitimate Special Town Meeting was called to look at sunsetting the Cohasset's wind bylaw. The article would not allow wind turbine applications to come forward while the town worked to revise the wind energy conversion facility bylaw. A group of 100 citizens signed a petition (actually more than 400 signed) to call Town Meeting and then an article, also signed by 100 citizens, was submitted. They went through the proper and legal process.

The town had a short time frame – 45 days – to consider the citizens' proposal. It was not ideal, especially considering it deals with zoning bylaw, but that's the way it is.

The proponents of the article have spent time and energy on gathering support and spreading the word about what they intended with the "moratorium." Opponents came out as well: they wrote letters to this newspaper, they handed out flyers, they explained why they didn't like the idea of moratorium on wind turbine projects. The town was amped up, for lack of a better term, for this Special Town Meeting. Many have strong feelings and we feel deserved to be heard and a resolution determined.

However, in its "wisdom" a majority of the Planning Board did not take a stand on the citizen's petition as required. That means the moratorium could not be considered at last night's Special Town Meeting.

They said there wasn't enough time for careful consideration. They said there were four versions of the article floating around. They said they were confused. They said they didn't like the procedure.

We agree the circumstances surrounding this Special Town Meeting were not ideal, but citizens have the right to call for a Special Town Meeting and our elected officials could have and should have respected that.

As Planning Board members Clark Brewer and Jean Healey Dippold proposed, the board could have voted to not recommend approval of the article based on the information they had. A vote in this manner would have allowed Town Meeting the ability to have its say.

We are disappointed that the moratorium could not be fully vetted before Town Meeting.

In this case, democracy and faith in our elected officials are the losers.

Soldiers' drive

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to thank Ann Musto from the Outreach Ministry of Saint Anthony's Parish for organizing a Soldiers drive. I would also like to thank each and every family for your donations. I will be sending out the boxes soon and I am sure our soldiers will appreciate all the items you have donated. Thank you so much.

Downtown Cohasset

TO THE EDITOR:

We wish to thank the village businesses and town organizations and departments for the many flowers, trees, and other plantings that beautify downtown Cohasset. It is a pleasure to walk along Elm Street, Depot Court, and Main Street and see the improvements that have resulted from the town's Revitalization project and the efforts of individuals. As representatives of Village Renaissance, we want to support the continued beautification of the village. You may recall that Village Renaissance was responsible for the Town Pump project, the James Brook Walkway, the first murals by Cohasset High School students at Ship Cove Park, and, for many years, the storefront flowerboxes. We would welcome your ideas for other ways to improve the village area. Please e-mail your suggestions to Jennifer Lord at jennifer_quinn_99@yahoo.com.

Scholarship yard sale a success

TO THE EDITOR:

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee runs a yard sale each year to raise money for a scholarship for a deserving Cohasset student going on to further education. This year's Joseph Walsh III Memorial Scholarship was awarded to Rachael McMorris who will attend the University of Pennsylvania in the fall.

The funds raised from these yard sales, held in Cohasset each May, go toward this yearly scholarship. The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee wishes to extend heartfelt appreciation to all those who donated items for this very successful annual yard sale.

Through the generosity of many Cohasset donors, as well as those who give their time to work the yard sale, the Committee has been able to fund this yearly scholarship for Cohasset students since 1978. We are very grateful to all who helped make our annual yard sale scholarship drive another success in 2009.

A magical Relay For Life

COMMENTARY

HARRY ST. ONGE

This past weekend the annual American Cancer Society's Relay For Life took place in Cohasset. This event, supported by business sponsors and teams from Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and Scituate, was truly magical.

While setting up for the event it rained off and on, but at 6 p.m. as the opening remarks were being delivered, and Craig Coffey was relating his survivor experience to the crowd, the sun miraculously came out. This in itself was exhilarating, but in addition, as we were celebrating the lives of our cancer survivors with a "Survivors" lap around the track, a rainbow appeared in the southern sky. The sun and rainbow set the tone for the rest of the evening. There was a prevailing spirit with this event that I have not seen in the last 10 years I have been involved.

As everyone enjoyed the chowder and pizza under the Taste of the Relay tent, and hot dogs, hamburgers or sausages hot off the grill in the Pilgrim Difference tent, the Rusty Skippers entertained us. It was an evening of people coming together to support one another and enjoy the food and entertainment.

When all the proceeds are counted we will have raised over $100,000 for cancer research, education, support and advocacy. In the 14 years this event has been held in Cohasset our communities have raised just under $1,400,000. This is an amazing showing of support for this very worthy cause.

Many people are responsible for the success of the Relay and I am grateful for their support. I would first like to thank the committee members who worked tirelessly, putting in many hours of service. Their passion and efforts for the cause are laudable.

In addition I would like to thank the following people and organizations who contributed to the success of the event.

The vocal entertainment of the Hingham High School Chorus, Lisa Batista, Steven Gilbert and Kelsey Gilbert, Lily Sestito, Aaron Bagley, Ray Papile, and The Rusty Skippers Band.

The food for the Taste of the Relay was donated by Atlantica, Bia Bistro, Jakes Sea Food, Mill Wharf, Mullaney's Sea Food, Red Lion Inn, Red Parrot, Schooners Restaurant, Cosmos Caffe, Cohasset Pizza House, Crow Point Pizzeria, 3A Pizza and Grill, Victoria's Pizzeria, French Memories, Morning Glories Bakery, Nona's Homemade Ice Cream, White's Pastry Shop, 5 South Street, Weinberg's Bakery& Café, Starbucks in Cohasset, Windsor Tea Shop, Atlantic Bagel, and Aflac.

Business sponsors that help underwrite the event so that more of our donated dollars can be used for our mission were Cohasset Rotary, Pilgrim Bank, Rockland Trust, Sovereign Bank, Edward Jones, Cohasset Collision Center, Dean and Hamilton, Coldwell Banker, Coastal Countryside Properties, South Shore Music Circus, Seoane Landscape Design, GWS Graham Waste Services, Anderson Fuel, and Starbucks Coffee in Cohasset.

In-kind sponsors that donated space, gift items to raffle or flowers, water, publicity and other items were Cohasset High School, Curtis Liquors, Dependable Cleaners, Flemings of Cohasset, Precious Petals of Scituate, Second Congregational Church of Cohasset, Cohasset Shaws, Starbucks of Cohasset, Cohasset Stop & Shop, Cohasset Mariner, Hingham Journal, WATD, Village Greenery, and Cohasset Walgreens.

To help us set-up and clean up the event we thank Coach Afanasiw and the Cohasset High School Football Team, Cohasset Girl Scouts, Hingham Girl Scouts, Cohasset High School Math Class and all the teams that pitched in. Bob, Derik, Tommy and Mark from the high school facilities team kept the site clean and safe throughout the event. They arrived early and stayed late and

Damp weather makes paving a hot topic

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Little Harbor Project – Paving is still the hot topic on this project. There are two parts to the paving equation. First is the patching the various dirt trenches and road spots that seemed to creep up over night as a by-product of LMH's sewer testing program. The other equation component is the restoration of the road surface, which is being undertaken by the Cohasset DPW Department. But, both of these paving responsibilities come to a screeching halt as a result of our beautiful damp weather. It may be good for growing grass, but it isn't very good for paving.

For example, this week we made special arrangements to install paving on five areas that have been driving on dirt and gravel for way too long. So what happens? More wet weather. As of Tuesday of this week we hoped to be able to pave these areas by Thursday or Friday of this current week. But we'll see.

Speaking of paving, there is another reason that paving some of our roads will be delayed. Typically, National Grid has chosen to repair gas leaks rather than replace large sections of their infrastructure. Consequently, after a road is newly paved, the gas company is usually the first on the scene, digging the new paving to patch their gas mains on an emergency basis. We've seen this over and over.

For several years we have tried to get National Grid to upgrade their gas distribution lines in our roads, rather than just repair, repair, repair. Recently, our efforts have come to fruition.

The Town now meets on a bimonthly basis with National Grid's field construction personnel to review their plans. Currently, you may see National Grid (actually, their contractor, Riley Brothers, Inc. from Stoughton) working on South Main Street and on Lincoln Lane. This should be about 11 days of work.

National Grid's contractor will also be doing work in the Little Harbor Water, Sewer and Drainage Project area, from 271 to 310 Atlantic Ave. where they will place about 300 feet of new gas main. This is expected to take about 25 days. Also, a new gas main will be installed from Whitehead Road to Cunningham Bridge on Atlantic Avenue, which will take about 60 days for 2000 feet of new pipe. Lastly, they will be working for about 35 days to replace the gas main from 8 to 78 Jerusalem Road. The good news in all of this is that another bit of new infrastructure will be under our roads when they are finally paved. The bad news is that in some instances it will delay paving.

New gas main on S. Main Street.

Chamber of Commerce landscaped island.

The island sans weeds.

Civic Pride – Last week we had a brief mention regarding the "orphaned" island between the IN and OUT driveways of the Town Parking Lot on Depot Court. The MBTA had agreed to reconstruct this parking lot as a part of their Mitigation Agreement with the Town. However, they did not agree to add any landscaping features to the island space. Consequently, it became a "no man's land" loaded with weeds. Clearly, it did not add to the ambiance of the Pleasant St. / Depot Court / Ripley Road intersection.

Fortunately, Cohasset's Chamber of Commerce stepped up to the plate and agreed to take the island on as a project. Last week we mentioned that it was indeed an improvement after they removed all of the weeds, as seen in the photo. Also, thanks are due to the Cohasset Water Department, after they installed a water service on the island to assist in maintaining any plantings.

Well, what a difference a week makes. If you haven't noticed, the island has gone from an eyesore to being a real visual asset.

The second photo we have included just doesn't do justice to the improved space. Drive by and take a look at it now. We think you will agree it looks great. Even the large rocks look better in their new setting. Thanks very much Cohasset Chamber of Commerce!

'I'm Back'

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

Trust me, if there were no women, no one would join the marines. No one would go to business school, or to the moon.

Hi everyone. I'm sorry I disappeared on you for a while without any explanation but I've been in Argentina. I was there to... see the sights. Yes, that's right. I was seeing sights.

Okay, I wanted to do something a little "off the wall". You see I gave blood recently, which is always depressing, because before the Red Cross will take your blood you must testify that you've never gone anywhere or done anything. Veal calves are constantly limping in the door and cutting to the front of the line. "In the last 12 years," asks the questionnaire, "have you engaged in any risky behavior, such as traveling outside Vermont, or sharing knitting needles? Have you ever received a hickey from a liberal? If you are not trapped inside a prudish, provincial, staid suburban lifestyle so dull that it mocks the very idea of both life and style, you may hand in this form now, grab your free Lorna Doones on the way out, and please... take us with you. You don't know what it's like in here. Oh, to burn with love! To sail to foreign shores! To taste the forbidden spices of—Shhh! Someone is coming."

At one point in my early 20s I was an interesting person — I even had a shot at becoming too interesting for the Red Cross, I think — but then I got married. This is what happens: every decision a single guy makes is partly based on his own desires, and partly calculated to make him more attractive to women. Trust me, if there were no women, no one would join the marines. No one would go to business school, or to the moon. Why would we risk our lives and go to all that trouble? No one would play guitar, or paint, or act. Adam Sandler is your fault, believe it or not.

Once we get married and the pressure is off, we tend to go a bit soft. For example this week I really needed to swim at the town pool to get ready for the triathlon, but I was being a middle-aged wimp. The weather was cold and rainy, and I was doing everything I could to avoid swimming. I may even have done a load of laundry on Monday. On Wednesday afternoon it was still 50 degrees and misty but I was running out of time. I thought back to how I would have approached this challenge when I was single, and it took some effort but I remembered. I stood up straight, held my head high, buried my fear and loathing of cold water, and marched confidently toward the swim center entrance, thinking only of how impressed the female lifeguards would be by my unflinching dedication to training. The mojo was back, baby.

A male life guard stopped me on the way in.

"We just closed," he said. "No one was swimming."

"Oh thank God!" I said, and hugged him, weeping openly on his shoulder.

One brave thing I did do recently was go to Maine. They have signs everywhere up there warning about moose. "Beware of moose." "Hundreds of people killed." "Never give a moose a muffin." "Moose, you fool! Moose!" That sort of thing. Apparently you can be car camping, minding your own business, eating a warm blueberry muffin, and a wild moose will suddenly charge out of the woods, slide across your hood "Starsky and Hutch" style, and smash through your windshield. I've seen photos of this on the Internet and they look pretty real.

I managed to avoid any encounters during this trip but I did come back with some interesting moose facts. Did you know that every moose is named Bullwinkle at birth, but that some change their name to Bulltinkle or Bullsprinkle upon reaching full moosehood? Also, for those of you who can't imagine eating moose meat, I've heard many people say that it tastes remarkably like rhino.

Guys are not inherently any braver or tougher than women are. Battle of the Network Stars proved that decades ago. But we have to do something to appear dynamic and exciting, and shoe shopping doesn't work for us. So we drag race and sky dive and swim in uncomfortably cold water without making a face. If we seem a little boring lately, you can perk us up by promising to watch if we do something insane. Just don't let us build a big rocket in the back yard because that always turns into a disaster.

Historical Society Tall Ships/Sail Boston

Cohasset has an especially strong connection to one of the tall ships visiting Boston. Cohasset resident Henry Dormitzer, yachtsmen, former Cohasset selectmen and Boston businessman was responsible for bringing the Tall ships to Boston in 1974.

It is only natural that the Cohasset Historical Society is taking its exciting July event to the water. Cohasset's long held tradition of fishing and boat building blends in with the majestic Tall Ships that will be in Boston Harbor July 8-13th. Cohasset has had ties with the Tall Ships for more than 3 decades. Join us July 12th and come aboard our chartered yacht to see the visiting fleet. Call the Society at 781-383-1434 or email cohassethistory@yahoo.com for information.

This Sail Boston 2009 fleet has been assembling in Boston since early June, coming from Charleston, South Carolina. From here, the fleet will cruise in company north to Halifax, Canada and from there they will race back across the North Atlantic to Belfast, Northern Ireland. During their stay in Boston, some of the tall ships will be near our chartered cruising yacht the Majestic Princess' berth at Rowes Wharf and may be available for boarding.

Cohasset has an especially strong connection to one of the tall ships visiting Boston. Cohasset resident Henry Dormitzer, yachtsmen, former Cohasset selectmen and Boston businessman was responsible for bringing the Tall ships to Boston in 1974. He then led a group of volunteers working at a Boston pier in preparation for a tall ships event in 1980 at which time he started a sail training program for youngsters in the area. The program needed a boat for the children and thus began the creation of the Spirit of Massachusetts. Dormitzer was responsible for having her built, fitted out and sailed in an earlier version of the tall ships event in 1984.

The Spirit of Massachusetts cost $756,000, took just over a year to build and was appraised at $1.5 million. Over 40,000 man-hours went into her construction, and the various woods needed were brought in from all over the United States and as far away as Central America.

Built for service as a sail-training vessel for young people, she also served as a good-will ambassador for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts from 1984 until 1987. From Boston she went to Maine to be uses for summer cruise parties. Ocean Classroom Foundation began chartering Spirit for their educational programs in 1997 and subsequently purchased her in 2000. They use her in their teaching programs. She joins the fleet for this year's Sail Boston 2009 event.

Ocean Classroom Foundation is committed to sending students and their teachers to sea, on voyages in which the traditions, values and adventure of maritime life provide a unique context for education. They strive to create programs in which students grow stronger and more confident socially, intellectually, ethically and physically to take their places among the generations of exceptional men and women who have been transformed by seafaring life.

LIBRARY CORNER

'Lake House' movie matinee July 3

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road. For more information, call 781-383-1348. To view the complete summer calendar log onto the Web site at cohassetlibrary.org and click on Calendar.

Movie Matinee – Enjoy a free movie at the library at 11 a.m., on Friday, July 3. "The Lake House" starring Sandra Bullock and Keanu Reeves will be shown. Free admission and light refreshments courtesy of Friends of the Library.

Email Newsletter – Patrons can sign up for the free e-newsletter and receive up-to-date notices of fun, educational, and free library programs. Go to the Web site at cohassetlibrary.org, and click on Join our Email list. It's quick and easy. The library will never sell or distribute its list of email subscribers.

Discover Your Local Library – Paul Pratt Memorial Library has more to offer than just books. Take home an award-winning film on DVD, visit a topnotch museum with a library pass, study for the SAT with an online test preparation site, attend a free movie, browse the artwork by local artists, explore the World Wide Web on the public Internet stations, research family roots using genealogy databases, learn to knit at the knitting group, join the Library Book Group and download audiobooks to a portable device. These are a few of the things people can do at the library, and it's all free.

Artist's Reception – Meet artist Sarah Roche at her art reception in the library from 6 to 9 p.m., on Friday, July 17. The reception is free. Roche's exhibition is presented by South Shore Art Center of Cohasset from July 1 through Aug. 31. Gallery hours are Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Wednesdays and Fridays, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Saturdays, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

FOR CHILDREN

Summer reading adventure begins!

Boston Bruins Join Starship Adventure @ Your Library – The 2009 Massachusetts summer reading adventure, Starship Adventure @ Your Library, is sponsored by the Friends of Cohasset Library, the MRLS, and the MBLC. Register online or in person. Registration will continue throughout the early summer. Click "yes, I would like to participate in the Bruins Read program," on the registration page of the online summer reading program. The Bruins will be offering random weekly drawings for prizes. Also, join others in the meeting room for free Monday evening movies and Tuesday evening family performances. Click on calendar for a complete list of events and activities. Families that read together provide the strongest model for future readers. Summer reading lists will be posted on the Web site as soon as teachers and librarians have competed them.

Story and Craft – Online registration will begin June 26. Story and Craft is for Cohasset residents ages 3 through 6, and is a four-week commitment. It will take place in the Story Room from 10:30 to 11:15 a.m. or 1 to 1:45 p.m., on Thursdays, July 9, 16, 23 and 30. Choose either the morning or afternoon session. Each week a new theme will be explored through literature and crafts.

Monday is Family Movie Night – Join others in the Meeting Room at 6 p.m., on Monday, June 29, to see the movie "Tale of Despereaux," rated G. This animated movie features voices by Matthew Broderick, Robbie Coltrane and Kevin Kline. From Universal Pictures, it is directed by Sam Fell and Rob Stevenhagan, and is 93 minutes long. Despereaux the mouse is born tiny, wheezy and with comically oversized ears and is very different from his family. His love for a princess leads him on adventures that involve him with an unhappy rat who schemes to leave the darkness of his dungeon and a bumbling servant girl with cauliflower ears in this animated film. All communities welcome. Children must be accompanied by an adult. Movie site license sponsored by the Friends of the Library and the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee. Admission is free.

Tuesday Family Performance – A Starship Adventure @ Your Library program with the Toe Jam Puppet Band will take place in the Meeting Room at 6 p.m., on June 30. Be prepared to laugh out loud and participate in this adventure. Sponsored by Friends of the Cohasset Library. For more information about the band visit the Web site at toejampuppetband.com. Free tickets will be available for this show beginning at 10 a.m., on Monday, June 22.

Stay tuned for changes in local Cable-TV

PAT MARTIN

After surviving the recent switch to digital TV, viewers will once again soon be faced with change in Cohasset. On June 30, 2009, after many years, Cohasset's local access Channel 10 will go black.

This means no more airing of local access shows such as Our Town, no more community calendar, event notices or local sporting events, only live broadcasts of meetings such as Selectmen or School Committee that originate from the locations where we have always had live feed cameras.

Cable TV, as well as local access, has gone through many transitions over the years. In 1999, when the previous cable contract was negotiated for Cohasset, the results were a brand new Norwell access studio, staffed by Comcast employees and shared by five towns in use. Ten years later in 2009, when negotiations for a new 10-year contract began, Comcast made it known that it was getting out of the local access programming business and that it would no longer be amenable to providing a studio or staffing. Towns would be responsible for their own local access production and provision.

Cohasset's Cable Advisory Committee has worked to negotiate a new contract with Comcast that has redirected the money that previously went to Comcast for local access programming to Cohasset to purchase the equipment necessary to provide our own local access broadcasting capacity. As this money will be received in quarterly calendar allotments, it is likely that it will take several months before Cohasset will once again be up and running and capable of providing local access TV.

With every change, however, comes opportunity. In Cohasset, it is anticipated that this new contract will provide new benefits and offerings to what we have seen previously on Channel 10 and in local access. The business plan currently being developed for the Board of Selectmen includes plans to upgrade the present Town Hall equipment to allow playback and on demand features so residents can watch BOS and other meetings when it is convenient for them. It also includes new equipment and content development trainings designed to encourage residents to create their own shows or provide video on local events or areas of interest.

So stayed tuned, and know that we are working to bring this truly "local" access channel and its many exciting possibilities to you in the very near future.

Pat Martin is Chairman of the Cohasset Cable Advisory Committee.

Buddy Poppies celebrate, help veterans

TO THE EDITOR:

Cohasset VFW Post 9146 would like to thank everyone who assisted our local efforts with their very generous donations and their support of all veterans by displaying a "Buddy Poppy."

For more than 75 years, the Veterans of Foreign Wars' "Buddy Poppy" Program has raised millions of dollars in support of veteran's welfare and the well being of their dependants. From its inception, the "Buddy Poppy" Program has helped the VFW live up to its motto, "to honor the dead by helping the living."

The "Buddy Poppy" – a small red flower symbolic of the bloodshed in World War I by millions of Allied soldiers in defense of freedom – was originally sold to provide relief for the people of war-devastated France. Later, its sale directly benefited thousands of disabled and down-and-out American veterans.

These Cohasset businesses were especially helpful and supportive this year: Shaw's, Stop & Shop, Goodwin Graphics, Curtis Liquors, Cohasset Pizza, Leo's Exxon, 3A Pizza and Grill, Tedeschi's, French Memories, Atlantic Bagel, Village Deli, Village Greenery and Dragonfly Embroidery.

We would also like to thank and recognize the following volunteers who gave so generously of their time: the "80 Club" – Louie Longo, Gordon Flint, Ralph Hill, Marie and Ralph Perroncello, Grace Tuckerman, George Haley, Willie Cicchesse, Tony Muzzi, Betty Brooks, Tom Healy and Emilio Conte. Also helping were Polly Litchfield, Paul St John, Bill Higgins, Kevin McArdle, Brad Goodwin, Kathy Bailey, Joe McElroy, Gareth and Joslin Thomas, Jean McAuliffe, Kevyn Ashton, Ron Goodwin and Lisa Santaniello.

Longtime volunteers Bud Ahern, Cliff Jones, Ira and Peg Stoughton and Whitey Dunn were unable to help this year.

Anyone interested in knowing more about the Veterans of Foreign Wars or to help next year are encouraged to contact Cohasset VFW Post 9146.

Thank you again to everyone for their support and appreciation of all our veterans.

HEALTH NOTES

Growth, development, and aging

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The three words above adequately name the phases of progression through our life cycle. They describe the focus of our interests as we progress to a time, which for many is a time of contemplation and reflection. Here it may be said that it's better if we can make phase three as short as possible.

We all, as we age, lose abilities we had earlier in life. Just try playing some of the games we learned as youngsters. Cheer up, loss of capabilities is something over which your mind has some control. If you like doing something you used to do when you were younger, you can still do it –perhaps not as well. You can make the decision not only to continue to do things you learned earlier, but relearn them. You can play ball with your kids and hopefully your grandchildren. Pick up a coin in a parking lot; it'll make you feel a tiny bit better.

As one gets older, the statement 'I used to be able to' becomes a part of our conversations. And with the constant pressure of new activities, there is never time to do all the things one wants to do. Duties, obligations and a myriad of other considerations interfere. And each year the number of demands on our time increases until, at some point, they start to diminish.

What we do with our free time is important. First, take the time to plan your activities to include exercise of those skills you consider important or desirable. Second, it's critical to practice those skills we wish to retain, and if possible, build upon them. 'Use it or lose it' applies big time when we're at leisure or have nothing to do. So, keep busy; if not on something useful; on something that's fun and develops muscles, your brain or some other desirable part of your anatomy. So much for the plan, now for the activities-the easy part:

As you would imagine the web is filled with those who know all about personal improvement and literally thousands of places you can find ways to improve yourself. Let me save you some time and give you some examples from the many self-improvement ideas you can obtain from blogs and 'authorities' on the Internet.

Accept personal responsibility for your own growth; no one can do it for you. What you do today will determine your readiness for tomorrow. Take time every day to do something for yourself.

Stay current. Will Rogers said "Even if you are on the right track, if you just sit there you will get run over."

Eliminate time wasters. Read at least 10 pages every day or a minimum of one book a month. Find four or five people with whom you can discuss ideas. Share your interests with others.

Work for balance in your life: family, financial, professional, social, spiritual, recreational. Always keep your goals in mind as you start a new activity. Run gadgets with the hand you don't use for writing.

Don't be afraid of failing; everyone does sometime. We all have the same 24 hours in a day. Learn from those people who get more done than you do. Learn from the errors you see others make as well as from their successes.

Think positive. Trade jobs with someone. Challenge yourself to learn something new every day.

Remain flexible and constantly adaptable. Be open to others and sincerely interested in them. You can learn from everyone you meet. Mentally rehearse a new skill. Your subconscious does not know the difference between actual practice and mental rehearsal. Work on overcoming personal, nonproductive habits; for example: overeating, smoking, gossip.

Recycle stuff. Particularly little things, which do real damage to people and the environment. Like batteries, all of which contain toxic metals, which can cause cancer.

Finally do these activities with someone else of the same disposition and with whom you feel comfortable.

There, don't you feel better and smarter already?

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

A magical Relay For Life

took care of all our needs.

And finally my gratitude to the teams that raised thousands of dollars from team member sponsors. Without their incredible spirit we could not have had such a successful Relay. They are: All Ryled Up, Bay State Athletic Club, Beach Bums, Bosom Buddies, Christian Outfitters, Coffey Grinders, Cohasset Rotary, Dream Team, G-Force 14, Glastonbury Abbey, Haley's Hope, Hingham Harbormen, Hingham Harmony, Hope, Hull Kidz with Hope, Kurt, Dad, and Grandpa's Team, Mardiflies, Mighty Energizers, Notrahs Forget No One, OT, Phe-gnomenal, Pilgrim Difference, Pop Pops Pride, Re-Lei- For Life, Rockland Trust, Sals Pals, Sea of Hope, Silverbells, Springtime for Shelly, Starbucks, Sweet Relief Family and Friends, Team Believers, Walgreens, Walk This Way, and the Warriors.

It was truly an amazing event that brought our four communities together to remember those lives lost to cancer, to celebrate the lives of cancer survivors and to provide hope that a cure will soon be found.

Again, I thank the many people who were involved and brought a spirit to the Relay that will remain with all those who attended for a long time.

Harry St.Onge is Chairperson of the Cohasset Relay For Life.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' and senators' votes on two roll calls from the week of June 15-19.

$27.4 BILLION FISCAL 2010 STATE BUDGET (H 4129)

House 110-46, Senate 31-8, approved and sent to Gov. Deval Patrick an estimated $27.4 billion fiscal 2010 state budget that reduces Chapter 70 Education Aid by $79 million (two percent) and unrestricted local aid by $377 million (28.8 percent) below the fiscal 2009 amounts. Patrick has 10 days in which he can veto items prior to signing the budget into law.

The budget is based on tax hikes and new taxes that could reach an estimated $1 billion annually including a hike in the state sales tax and meals tax from five percent to 6.25 percent; a new 6.25 percent sales tax on alcoholic beverages including liquor, wine and beer purchased at package stores; giving local communities the option, by a vote of the town meeting or city council, to impose up to a two percent new local meals tax and to raise the current four percent (4.5 percent in Boston) local hotel/motel tax by up to two percent; an increase in fees on nursing home providers by $75 million, from $145 million to $220 million; a hike of $75 million in Registry of Motor Vehicles fees; allowing cities and towns to impose local property taxes on currently tax-exempt above ground poles, wires and switching equipment owned by telecommunications companies. Under current law, their poles and wires are exempt from local property taxes while electric companies and wireless companies are required to pay property taxes on poles and wires. The tax exemption was established in 1915 to offer an incentive to the phone company to bring telephone service to rural areas. Another tax hike in the package applies the state's 6.25 percent sales tax to subscribers of direct broadcast satellite service like DirectTV. The tax is currently applied to cable TV subscribers but not to dish services. Other provisions include requiring some state workers to pay more of their health insurance premium; an estimated $2 billion of cuts in hundreds of other budget items and programs; the use of $199 million from the state's Rainy Day Fund and the use of $1.5 billion in federal stimulus money.

Supporters said that the budget is on-time, fiscally responsible and balanced while funding essential programs to the best of the state's ability during this economic downturn and the loss of billions of dollars in state revenue. They argued that members of both parties were treated fairly and had an opportunity to have input into the process. They defended the tax hikes as necessary to prevent disasters in human service programs.

Some opponents said that this fiscally irresponsible budget lacks sufficient local aid and does not include many proposals that were offered to implement close to $1 billion in savings through major reforms in state government. They argued that that the budget unnecessarily includes nine new taxes and hikes and will cost already overburdened taxpayers close to $1 billion annually. Others said that that this version of the budget has only been available to members for a few hours and is being rushed through the Legislature. They noted that none of the tax hikes had a public hearing. (A "Yes" vote is for the budget. A "No" vote is against the budget).

CHANGES IN TRANSPORTATION SYSTEM (S 2087)

House 130-25, Senate 27-11, approved and sent to Gov. Deval Patrick a complicated 175-page bill making changes in the state's transportation system. The measure creates a new transportation super agency, the Massachusetts Department of Transportation (MassDOT), run by a five-member board chaired by the governor. All Mass Turnpike Authority roads, the Tobin Bridge, the three Boston tunnels and the Massachusetts Bay Transit Authority (MBTA) system would be folded into the new MassDOT. The measure also ends the T's policy that allows employees of any age to retire with a full pension after 23 years and replaces it with the same state practice that requires a full pensioner to be at least 55 years old and have put in 25 years of service. Supporters said that this long overdue reform measure would cut waste, end duplication, streamline the state's entire transportation system and save billions of dollars. Some opponents said that the bill does not go far enough to reform outrageous salary, pension and health care benefits and questioned the claims of billions of dollars in savings from the consolidation. They argued that the consolidation merely creates a massive single agency that would still be loaded with waste, inefficiencies and patronage. Others said that the bill is anti-labor and includes provisions that would hurt hardworking union employees. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill. A "No" vote is against the bill).

Road closings for triathlon

The following temporary road closures are part of the overall traffic safety plan for the 2009 Cohasset Triathlon at Sandy Beach on Sunday morning, June 28. These closures are necessary to provide safety for race participants and spectators as well providing an orderly flow of vehicle traffic around the race route. Although residents impacted by these closures will be allowed access to and from their properties when necessary, everyone is encouraged to plan ahead and avoid using vehicles in the race area. Check the times and locations of closures to see how they may impact travel plans the morning of June 28th.

During road closures, the best route to take to go to Scituate would be Route 3A. Access 3A by way of Route 228, Hull Street, Forest Avenue/Lower King Street, where a police officer will be present to assist at 3A, Sohier Street and Pond Street. This is best because Border Street will close temporarily outbound toward Scituate and both North and South Main streets will only be open for one-way traffic from the Scituate line to the Hingham line during race time.

Those attending church services during race time should allow a little extra time. If traveling to St. Stephen's Church or Second Congregational Church from the north side of town, access to the common will be from Depot Court. Access to Depot Court is Ripley Road by way of Jerusalem Road/North Main Street or 3A/Sohier Street. Ripley Road can also be accessed from Pleasant Street. Those traveling from the south side of town will be able to use North and South Main streets. Those traveling to St. Anthony Church can take Summer Street from the harbor, Spring Street from Pond Street/Cushing Road or South Main Street from the Scituate line.

Residents can contact Cohasset Police Department at trafficquestions@cohassetpolice.com for any assistance with travel plans.

No parking zones:

Cohasset Village – South Main Street, between Brook Street and Elm Street, even numbered side of the road, from 7 to 10 a.m.

Cohasset Common – North Main Street, between Depot Court and Highland Avenue, even numbered side of the road, from 7 to 10 a.m.

Road Closures:

Onge receives Volunteer of the Year

Harry St. Onge, of Cohasset, was recently honored with the American Cancer Society 2008 Volunteer of the Year Award. The Volunteer of the Year Award is presented to an individual who has exemplified outstanding leadership and service to the American Cancer Society and its mission throughout the year, and who by example has demonstrated an extraordinary commitment to the fight against cancer. Patrick Connors, Society community executive for development presented the award at the American Cancer Society Relay For Life of Cohasset.

Harry, a two-time cancer survivor, has volunteered for the American Cancer Society for more than 10 years. He has served as a Relay For Life of Cohasset team captain for 10 years and as the event chair for almost five years. He and his team, Glastonbury Abbey, are consistently in the top five for both individual and team fundraising. Additionally, Harry is an active advocate, serving as an Ambassador for the American Cancer Society Cancer Action Network (ACS CAN).

Family campfire at Wompatuck

Step into the woods at Wompatuck State Park from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m., on Saturday, June 27, for a free family campfire with storyteller Andrea Lovett. Those attending should bring a chair or blanket, dress for the weather and meet at the campfire ring at site #R75 in the camping area. After the program, visitors are welcome to stay and roast marshmallows. Marshmallows will be provided, but bring a marshmallow roasting stick. In the event of rain, the program will take place at the Visitor Center.

Wompatuck State Park is on Union Street, off Free Street, in Hingham. For more information, call Bill at 781-749-7160. The event is sponsored by the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation. Reasonable accommodations available upon advance request.

In the thick of things

By Mark Ducharme
CORRESPONDENT

The season for the Cohasset American Legion Baseball team will definitely not be dull.

Post 118 last year made a strong late season run to grab the fifth and final playoff spot in Zone 6 East. They lost in two tough games in their best of three series to Walpole, which played in the state final in the Zone 6 playoffs.

It was Cohasset's first trip to the playoffs in 10 years according to head coach Greg Taylor.

Cohasset did not graduate many players, six, so Post 118 feels that they will be back in the playoff hunt. One of those players was shortstop Tom Chase, who went to Notre Dame and started for the Irish towards the end of the year.

Legion Baseball

"We will be all right," said Taylor. "We will probably be in the middle of the fight for one of the playoff spots. With the talent on this team this year we are hoping that we will make the playoffs. We thought that we were better than a fifth-seed last year."

Post 118 got off to a good start this year. They won three of their first five games. However, they ran into a tough doubleheader with Zone 6 East's first-place team, Milton as they were swept in the twinbill by the scores of 9-2 in the first game and 6-5 in eight innings in the second game They had defeated Quincy, West Roxbury and Stoughton, but lost to both Morrissette and Jamaica Plain prior to their doubleheader loss to Milton.

"We had a lot of chances in the Morrissette game," said Taylor. "We left the bases loaded and we left second and third in another inning. We left nine on overall and that is a lot in a seven-inning game. Zone 6 East is a very tough zone from top to bottom. Milton has five pitchers that they can run out there, Weymouth and Braintree are tough. You have to bring you A-game or you will lose."

Post 118, which plays at both Scituate and Cohasset can bring some power to combat a tough Zone 6 East.

Taylor feels his team will be a deep team offensively this year.

"We have a strong hitting team," said Taylor. "We have everyone from 1-9 that can hurt you."

Brendan Doonan, who had a big junior year at Cohasset is having a strong start to his Legion season. He recorded two of the team's first three wins and Doonan plays outfield when he is not on mound.

Rob McCunney and John Kearney both were on the Boston College High team that won the Div. 1 State title and are key performers for Post 118.

Pat Doonan, Brendan's brother is in his third year on the team as a second baseman and first baseman/catcher Mike Signorelli is in his fourth year in the program.

"Pat (Doonan) and Mike (Signorelli) are both having a lot of fun," Taylor said.

Cohasset, which plays Weymouth (Wednesday), Jamaica Plain (Thursday), Holbrook (Friday) and West Roxbury on Monday has power with outfielder Derrick Schwantner. In the opening game of the season with Quincy, Schwantner belted two long home runs out of Adams Field.

Schwantner also pitched six strong innings in the second game of the Milton doubleheader, but did not receive a decision.

Signorelli had three hits in that game, a double, single and a home run for Coahasset.

Jeff Cavanaro has a win against West Roxbury and plays outfield when he is not on the mound and Jordan Berry, who played at Milton Academy during the school season is a big powerful rightfielder for Post 118.

Along with Taylor, the rest of the coaching staff is Ralph Berry, a long-time coach who returns after a five-year break, Bob Barrows, the team's batting-practice pitcher extraordinaire and team founder Scott Arnold.

Puddle Olympics

Or things to do when the rain won't stop

POPPIN' OFF

WILLIAM WASSERSUG

All I want to do is go watch a baseball game.

It doesn't sound all that difficult.

Pick a game from the Legion schedule, show up, snap a few photos and enjoy some good old fashioned baseball.

OK, so maybe it is that difficult.

As I look out the window, it is still raining.

You know as well as I do that it is still raining.

The Red Sox know it is still raining.

They're probably not thrilled with it considering it may have cost them a game this week when Jon Lester was on the hill and the Sox trailed 2-1 against Florida in the sixth and the game was called.

Scituate Little League knows it too.

Their Senior League championships were rained out and the Brewers and Cubs were declared co-champions after the teams split the first two games of a best-of-three set.

The Major Leagues are also up for grabs.

The best-of-three series has been cut toa one-game takes all for the Mets and Royals. That game was scheduled for last night, but if it rained, they'll try tonight.

Myself, I'm still not sure what to do in the rain.

There's the option of swinging myself around a lamppost and breaking into song.

My wife would enjoy that too much, so no go.

Swimming?

Kids would take up that offer.

No I have the perfect thought.

We all have to find just one big puddle and make the best of it.

We can run boat races with kids carving boats from kits, like the Pinewood Derby in boy scouts.

Track athletes can take a shot at the long jump, but instead of sand, if you miss, well you get wet.

Send a big bowl into the puddle and get the golf clubs out. It would work wonders for the short game.

Better yet, lets hope the sun comes out and we can watch some baseball.

Received a letter from a mom in Cohasset who's son plays lacrosse in Australia.

The letter was a nice one in response to winning a lacrosse award in town, but one particular line really caught my attention and made me realize what sports is, or should be about.

The player, Jake Previte dreamed of playing Division 1 college lacrosse, but because of injuries during his high school career, he never had that chance.

Instead, he went to St. Michaels in Vermont and played lacrosse there.

Here is a piece of the letter.

"When I decided to attend Saint Michael's up in Vermont, I did so with a somewhat reluctant attitude. I liked the school and the people on the team, but the skill level made me feel that I would not be able to sharpen my game to reach the peak level of performance I knew I was capable of. Not to mention, I was not happy about playing lacrosse amidst the below freezing weather the great state of Vermont has to offer.

"However, it was here that I came to understand and realize the most important lesson that lacrosse has taught me in life. Playing lacrosse is not about winning championships, setting or breaking records, or being the best player on the field. Lacrosse is about coming together as a team, as friends, and as a family

Jake Previte.

Lacrosse first came into my life when my older brother, Paul, brought home a pair of lacrosse sticks when I was a sixth grader.

At the time, I was still an aspiring little leaguer and gave little care for this new sport. However, after a couple of sessions spent with Paul throwing and catching a lacrosse ball, I began to realize a passion and desire to continue the game.

After that, my mitt and bat were put in the closet and I never looked back. I was lucky enough to have Chuck Jaffe for my first coach. He opened my eyes to the game of lacrosse and inspired me to be the best I could be.

I began to practice everyday, every night, after school, before homework, at school, anytime I could be playing...I did.

I dreamt of being a Division 1 lacrosse star and helping the sport become a national spectacle. Big dreams for just a 13 year old. As I got into high school, my intensity and drive to succeed in lacrosse only increased. I knew that this was the big show...If I did not perform here, then how could college coaches ever notice me. Along with constant practicing, I began to sign up for summer showcases and camps to demonstrate my skill in front of Colleges and Universities.

To my dismay, I suffered ankle injuries in both my sophomore and junior seasons that limited my action during the whole summer. Right before my eyes I witnessed my dream circle the drain and disappear. I did receive some letters from colleges, but none from the caliber of schools I had once wished to play for.

When I decided to attend Saint Michael's up in Vermont, I did so with a somewhat reluctant attitude. I liked the school and the people on the team, but the skill level made me feel that I would not be able to sharpen my game to reach the peak level of performance I knew I was capable of. Not to mention, I was not happy about playing lacrosse amidst

A link to the past on Cape Cod

Vacationers have plenty of options to play

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

OK, the kids are out of school and the family is preparing for a week's vacation down Cape Cod.

However, you've got to get your golf fix so you're bringing your clubs.

Where should you play?

If you are looking for something completely different, take a trip to the outer Cape. Head toward Provincetown, there is a sign on the right off Route 6 in North Truro, alerting you about Highland Links Golf Links.

It is only nine holes, but it is something special.

When you take that right you take a step back into the past. You are transported to another era and another world. Author Alistair Cooke described this course as the most perfect example of the typical British or Scottish links in the United States.

Opened in 1892, you will playing the oldest golf course on the Cape – although some at Cummaquid Golf Club might argue that point – and it hasn't changed much since it was first opened more than a century ago.

Yes, the greens are no longer made of sand – or concrete in some cases. In 1908 they made the switch to grass greens, but that's all that has changed. The fairways, if you want to call them that, are the same ones Bobby Jones and Francis Ouimet played when they vacationed together here in the 1920s.

One day we played, it rained, it was cold, but in a matter of a couple of holes, the sun came out and we broiled. The wind is a constant and it can blow hard, which makes this course even more challenging. Every hole is a favorite for one reason or another. The sixth plays along the cliffs overlooking the Atlantic. Oftentimes you see whales basking in summer waters or far out cargo ships and tankers on their appointed rounds.

The ninth is a wonderful par-3 adjacent to the old and haunted Highland House Hotel, which now serves as a museum. Sports Illustrated, in a 1974 article about the best short par-3s in the world, called it one of the best.

It you want to call yourself a true golfer, you have to make at least one loop here. And once you make one loop, you will want to play another. Yes, it might be crowded, but during the wait between holes, absorb the surroundings because the atmosphere is unlike anything you will play in America.

Highland Links is a portal to the past, when golf was played with hickory shafts and the conditions were anything but pristine.

If you can escape for another day on your vacation, head over to Martha's Vineyard and play Farm Neck. After Highland Links, it's my favorite venue on the Cape and Islands. Just make sure you plan ahead. Getting a tee time here is as difficult as side-hill putts. There is something special about playing on the Vineyard. Maybe because it's off the mainland, but the greens are greener and the blues are the bluest.

But these aren't the only two courses worthy of playing in the region.

Captain's is a wonderful place. Thirty-six holes and there is not a bad one in the bunch. Old Barnstable Fairgrounds is a favorite. Want to play a Donald Ross course? Visit Bass River. A high-handicapper can be comfortable here and a skilled player can be challenged. That's what makes a great golf design.

If you like par-3s, Blue Rock may be for you. But be warned. This isn't a chip-and-putt layout. You have to bring your A-game. Cape Cod Country Club is a good layout with plenty of challenging holes. Town-owned facilities like Cranberry Valley Golf Course in Harwich and Dennis Highlands and Dennis Pines are magnificent municipal tracks. Falmouth Country Club might be the most improved course on the Cape, since it opened its new nine, giving it 27 holes.

This is only a sampling. However, the message is, if you are heading to the Cape for vacation, bring your clubs.

Amateurs get their shot

Tee to Green

One of the region's top amateurs, a mainstay at the State Open, which takes place this week at Belmont Country Club, will not be on hand for the first time in many years.

Reigning State Amateur champion John Hadges of Easton, a veteran player at Thorny Lea GC in Brockton, will be playing in the highly prestigious Northeast Amateur Invitational at Wannamoisett CC in Rhode Island.

Jim Renner of Plainville, who grew up playing on the fairways at Foxboro CC, will defend his title.

But several other local golfers teed it up this week, including Chris Tarallo, Matt Parziale and Greg Chalas of Thorny Lea, Tim Brennan, Doug Clapp and Herbie Aikens, all from Plymouth, Mike Calef of Brockton, Ben Spitz of Rockland, and David Pierce of East Bridgewater. One of the oldest players in the field will be Mike Arter of Lakeville, a 53-year-old attorney. He might be happy to learn that this is the first year the State Open will allow golfers to use golf carts.

Another player scheduled to tee it up is Michael Welch. It has been a busy two weeks for Welch. Last week he reached a lifetime goal by qualifying for the US Open.

Unfortunately, he did not make the cut.

The North Quincy native fashioned a two-round total of 9-over-par at Bethpage State Park's Black Course and missed by five strokes.

It was difficult to get any rhythm. Welch's first round began on Thursday and finished on Friday because of rain delays. He started OK. He was 1-over after 10 holes, but on five of his final eight holes of the round he picked up bogeys.

Of course, more rain is expected this week at the State Open in Belmont.

Winner, winner

Congratulations to the team of Carol Basler of Cohasset, Mary Lamrock of Scituate, Kathy Rezendes of Hatherly and Pauline Wilcox of White Cliffs, who fashioned a 39 to win the Scituate CC Invitational June 18. Some 59 women from six area clubs competed in the tournament. Natalie Foley of Wollaston, Millie Pender of White Cliffs, Lisa Potts and Cathy Rooney, both of Scituate, finished second with a 42. Louise Hannington of Milton-Hoosic, Nan Kelley of Scituate and Susan McEnaney of White Cliffs were third with a 43 and the team of Faith Foley of Wollaston, Susan Mathieson of Milton-Hoosic, Doris Privitera of Scituate and Mary Sullivan of Cohasset finished fourth.

Golfers take to the front nine at Olde Scotland Links in Bridgewater last Wednesday afternoon. It is a wide open course where the wind is always a factor.

Affordable and friendly

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

Two courses opened in the summer of 1997. Olde Scotland Links in Bridgewater was overshadowed by highly publicized Widow's Walk Scituate, which received national acclaim for its innovated design, land reclamation, and experimental approaches to green construction.

OLDE SCOTLAND LINKS

Olde Scotland Links was simply a golf course and never pretended to be much more.

This course has all that is needed. It requires strategy off the tee and on your approach, and guarded optimism on the greens. More importantly and what makes it so popular is its playability.

This is the sort of course that will not make a beginner give up the game and it won't bore a highly skilled golfer. That is, if they play from the correct tees and there are five sets of tees on this track. It plays anywhere from just under 5,000 yards from the front to almost 6,800 yards from the tips.

Olde Scotland is much different from the traditional New England municipal tract.

Stand on the first tee and look out at the fairway; take a panoramic sweep to the right, and you will see 11 of Olde Scotland's fairways. It is virtually treeless. Tall fescue frames every hole. It is so hypnotic. The topography of this old dairy farm makes the course resemble a golf course from the South. It seems more like Myrtle Beach than Bridgewater.

It was expertly designed by Brian Silva. Much of the land – some 64 acres of the 200-acre site – is protected wetland.

Yet only four holes require a compulsory carry over the hazards, and two of these required carries are located directly in front of tees, making it an easier carry for the beginner.

Many of the fairways at Olde Scotland Links are in valleys nestled between rolling mounds that kick slightly errant tee shots back into play. This feature was popularized nearly a century ago when Charles Blair Macdonald and Seth Raynor were fashioning golf courses. "These traits have been added to further enhance the player's chance for success," said Silva.

A prime example is the par-3 13th hole. Playing 238 yards from the tips to 189 from the white tees, it is rated the fifth-hardest hole at Olde Scotland. However, if a tee shot is hit up the right side of the hole, your ball will be given a helpful kick back into play and the punch bowl nature of the green will further this effect on the hole, whose length appears initially defeating.

The par-5s are fun.

The par-5 sixth is a killer, some 545 yards from the back tees. And your work is just beginning when you reach the green.

Another nifty par-5 is the ninth, 475 yards from the back tees. Long hitters will try to carry the wetland that fronts the green. Average golfers will have to pick the right club when they lay up.

The 18th is a go-for-broke par-5. Long hitters will go for birdie by trying to clear a hazard with their second shot. But the green is where your match will be decided. It can be unkind.

FAST FACTS

Address: 695 Pine St., Bridgewater, MA 02324

Data: Par 72 from blue markers, 6,306 yards, 124 slope, 70.3 rating.

Tee times: 508-279-3344, or online at www.oldescotlandlinks.com

Fees: $40 walking, $56 riding on weekdays; $49 walking, $65 riding on weekends.

Favorite hole: The par-4 seventh hole. It is short, only 378 from the tips to 279 from the front tees. But even short hitters can hit it through the fairway or into trouble. Best approach is front a distance you will have a full swing and the green can be dangerous. It's well protected and is easy to three-putt.

Ted Williams League To Run Summer Season

The Ted Williams league is looking for players 9 years old and older to run its first summer baseball season. Unlike other leagues the TWL plays by ability and not by age. Players will have to go through a brief evaluation to determine what division of play they belong. The TWL has been running in the Hanson/Pembroke area since 1997. For more information on the league please e-mail at tedwilliamsleague@yahoo.com or call (781) 293-2700.

New England Soccer Academy set for August

Registrations are now being accepted for the annual New England Soccer Academy day camp, which will be held this year during the first two weeks of August at South Shore Regional VoTech High School in Hanover. The camp is ideally set up for pre-season conditioning for teams and individuals.

The first session runs from August 3-7 from 10:00 am-2:00 pm for boys and girls ages 7-12. Session II will be held on August 10-14 for boys and girls ages 13-18.

The New England Soccer Academy is known for its "soccer-nastics" method of game conditioning and skill development, directed by internationally renowned soccer player and coach Isaac Adeyemi. Coach Adeyemi was a member of the 1990 Nigerian national World Cup team, and has coached women's collegiate soccer. He was the boys varsity soccer coach at Archbishop Williams High School, and is currently a soccer coaching consultant at Thayer Academy.

Joining the camp for his third season is Assistant Director Alan McCall, who has 17 years of soccer coaching experience at all youth and high school levels. Coach McCall was most recently the boys varsity soccer coach at South Shore Christian Academy, and was recently appointed as boys middle school soccer coach at Milton Academy.

Cost of the camp is $150 per session ($140 if registered before June 30.

For registration information, contact coach Adeyemi at 617-980-3268, iadeyemi@msn.com., or coach McCall at 781-925-9613, alanmccall461@hotmail.com.

Things to do when the rain won't stop to do what we love the most in life. It does not matter if you win or lose, rather it matters that you get to play the game. When I step onto a field and strap on the helmet, for that 60 minutes everything in life that bothers me disappears."

FROM POPPIN, PAGE 17

That is such a perfect attitude.

An attitude to emulate, especially for those athletes, like myself, who aren't going to get big scholarships or huge money to play pro sports.

It's all about the enjoyment and love of the game.

To tell the truth, that effect goes further, because when you see the pros, you can tell who is enjoying the game, and who is there for the money.

This means you Yankees.

On that line, did anyone notice that almost exactly after David Ortiz spoke about his father talking to him and telling him to loosen up and play like a Little Leaguer, to just enjoy the game he loved, that he started to hit again.

Now that's some good advice.

You can see the full letter on Page

Congratulations to the Cohasset players who were named South Shore League tennis All-Stars.

A note from Down Under

FROM LACROSSE, PAGE 17

the below freezing weather the great state of Vermont has to offer.

However, it was here that I came to understand and realize the most important lesson that lacrosse has taught me in life. Playing lacrosse is not about winning championships, setting or breaking records, or being the best player on the field. Lacrosse is about coming together as a team, as friends, and as a family to do what we love the most in life. It does not matter if you win or lose, rather it matters that you get to play the game. When I step onto a field and strap on the helmet, for that 60 minutes everything in life that bothers me disappears.

Lacrosse is a game that has allowed me to become a better person and mature into being a man. Like the game, in life there will be times when you lose and win.

However, it is what you do afterward that reflects your true character. Will you bounce back with an undeniable will and take a commanding win? Or will you curl up and fold under pressure? I believe Rocky Balboa explained it best when he said, "Nobody is gonna hit as hard as life. But it ain't about how hard you hit, it's about how hard you can get hit and keep moving forward; how much you can take and keep moving forward. That's how winning is done."

I like this quote because it describes what is needed to have the heart of a champion, and the will to succeed and that is what lacrosse has done for me. I have learned that it is not about what level you play at, how good you are, or what accolades you have won. Rather, it is about playing the game you love with a passion to never quit, and the will to stay the course no matter what is put in front of you.

In closing I would like to thank a few people who have been vital in helping lacrosse become a cornerstone in my life. Thank you to my mother, Chuck Jaffe, Coach Curran, my brother Paul, Joe Fitzgerald, Austin Lyne, my father, the Buick family and to all my friends and past teammates. Things would not have worked out for me the way they did without your tireless efforts and support. I thank you all. And thank you to Cohasset Lacrosse. You have helped me to live a life full of lacrosse and success that I never dreamed of. I wish I could be there to read you this myself, and thank all of you in person. Take care and I wish all the young players in the room will remember to cherish the game and every moment you get to play it. This world can be filled with hardship; to get the opportunity to play lacrosse is a gift that should be taken advantage of and not overlooked.

Thank you,

Cheers from Australia!

Jake Previte

Note: Jake Previte played his high school lacrosse at Cohasset High School for current coach Stew Curran, and was also a teammate of Curran's in a summer league. By the time he graduated in 2005, he had scored a school record 257 points and was nicknamed the Lax-Daddy by teammates. After graduating he played at St. Michael's College in Vermont and has most recently taken his game to Australia.

Vote for Cohasset Soccer Club board of directors

Voting for the Cohasset Soccer Club's new Board of Directors will take place from June 15 through June 26, 2009.

Each family with a child registered in the soccer program for the 2008/2009 season will be eligible to vote. Voting will be performed online only, with the ability to review statements of interest and actually vote for the new Board members on the Club's website cohassetsoccer.com – by clicking through the "ELECTIONS" and "VOTE HERE" links located in the left hand menu bar. Each family will be able to select up to 13 candidates — the number of available Director slots. Voting will close at 5 PM on June 26th, with votes then tabulated and validated by the election committee.

Elected directors will be announced no later than June 28, 2009 and results will be posted on the club website. The first new meeting of this Board of Directors is tentatively scheduled for June 30, 2009.

Background

The Cohasset Soccer Club is the not-for-profit organization that organizes and runs the community's in-town soccer programs for pre-K to 4th grade players and the travel soccer programs for players in 5th grade and above. Fall, winter and spring programs are offered, with the goal of providing all players the opportunity to learn the game of soccer, enhance their soccer skills and have fun. The Club currently has approximately 700 children playing in the program with approximately 100 adult volunteers supporting and managing the programs.

The Club is currently seeking to establish a new Board of Directors to ensure continued program success and to set the future direction of the organization. Over the past few years the Club leadership has dwindled such that Club direction and management are now handled by just a few individuals who strongly believe that new leadership is needed to ensure future success. Wallace St. John, in particular, has shouldered the majority of this burden — but he will be stepping down as the President of the organization after this spring season is completed. As a result, a new Board of Directors needs to be elected and all interested parties need to be encouraged to become active members of the organization.

In order to facilitate setting up this new Club leadership, a completely new slate of Directors will be elected this June, with Club leadership and direction then determined by this new Board. The Board of Directors will be composed of 13 persons, with the only requirement being that the Board members be willing and able to assist and support the Cohasset Soccer Club as it moves into the future. The initial term for new Directors will be one year.

People interested in being considered for a board position were asked to submit a brief statement of interest describing why they would like to be part of the Board and what qualifications they may be able to bring to the Board. Statements were submitted online and were accepted through June 12, 2009. In order to ensure that interested parties were made aware of the positions, a club wide email was sent to all families registered for the 2008/2009 season and an article was published in the Cohasset Mariner.

Mark your calendar!

It is only natural that the Cohasset Historical Society is taking its exciting July event to the water. Cohasset's long held tradition of fishing and boat building blends in with the majestic Tall Ships that will be in Boston Harbor July 8-13th. Cohasset has had ties with the Tall Ships for more than 3 decades. Join us July 12th and come aboard our chartered yacht to see the visiting fleet. Call the Society at 781-383-1434 or email cohassethistory@yahoo.com for information.

Cohasset has an especially strong connection to one of the tall ships visiting Boston. Cohasset resident Henry Dormitzer, yachtsmen, former Cohasset selectmen and Boston businessman was responsible for bringing the Tall ships to Boston in 1974.

First-hand experience for fourth-graders

Learn where their drinking water comes from and where it goes

Some of the 128 fourth graders at the Lily Pond water treatment plant.

In an effort to connect children to their watershed and gain an appreciation of the complexities of delivering and disposing drinkable water, the Greenscapes.org program at the North and South Rivers Watershed Association (NSRWA) in Norwell, organized a field trip for the entire fourth grade at the Deer Hill School to Cohasset's Lily Pond water treatment plant and the wastewater treatment plant on Elm Street.

Greenscapes Manager, Debbie Cook, said, "We wanted the kids to realize that the water coming from their faucets doesn't just magically appear, that it is connected to an entire system, and that bringing it to each house is a very complicated process, requiring a great deal of money, energy and chemical treatment."

Before the fourth grade went on the field trip they learned about their local water supply, and the major causes and impacts of reduced water quality and quantity in local water bodies, like storm water pollution through a classroom presentation from Sara Grady, ecologist and South Shore Regional Coordinator for the Massachusetts Bays Program. Two days later, the 128 fifth graders boarded buses to visit the Lily Pond water treatment plant and the wastewater treatment plant.

Bruce Meehan, chief plant operator for American Water that operates the water treatment plant, led one of the groups through the water treatment plant. He showed them the lab where the water is tested several times a day and the operations center, where computers can manage the entire water treatment plant, pumps and reservoir. The kids saw huge tanks of water where solids are settled out and chemicals are added, and a vast array of pipes, which move water into the distribution system. They also saw the new intake structure where the water enters the plant through trash racks that keep out debris, and giant sludge pits where the organic matter taken from the water is dried to be shipped away by truck.

One stop on the tour was to see the rain garden, installed right at the edge of the water treatment parking lot. Samantha Woods, executive director of NSRWA, told the kids that rain gardens are being created all over the South Shore to capture storm water (which often carries road pollutants and lawn chemicals) before it can enter storm drains. She said, "Rain gardens are designed to capture and hold the storm water, allowing it to percolate slowly through the soil, which is a very effective way to clean the water before it goes into our streams and ponds."

The kids' last stop was to the wastewater treatment plant, located in James Meadow, across from the police station. Richard Nye, Project Manager for Veolia Water that manages the wastewater treatment plant, explained to the kids that there wasn't much to see at Cohasset's wastewater treatment plant, because most of the plant's operations take place in big underground tanks. He said that Cohasset's very sophisticated bio-mechanical plant works by employing thousands upon thousands of small filament filters to clean the wastewater, and billions of "bugs," – bacteria which digest the organic material. The clean wastewater is discharged into Cohasset Harbor, near Atlantica, and at very low tide, bubbles sometimes can be seen coming from the three outfall pipes. He told the kids that the plant currently processes about 200,000 gallons of wastewater per day, but has the capacity to process up to 450,000 gallons per day.

One of the fourth grade teachers of the field trip said at the end of the field trip, "I never really thought about where my water came from. This day really opened up my eyes."

Cohasset is one of 11 South Shore towns that are members of the Greenscapes program. The Greenscapes program advocates water conservation and protection through changing the way people care for their landscaping. For more information, visit www.greenscapes.org.

LINCOLN | MERCURY
lincolnmercury.com

PEOPLE ASK ME: "WHY LINCOLN MERCURY? WHY NOW?"

The truth is, there's never been a more exciting time to be a Lincoln-Mercury Dealer. Even with all the challenges we're facing. Why, you might ask?

Well, for starters, this is one of the best lineups we've ever had. Lincoln is combining luxury and technology to create a driving experience like never before. It started with last year's breakthrough Lincoln MKS luxury sedan and is now moving into different shapes and sizes, like the new 2010 Lincoln MKZ, which is loaded for liftoff with more standard luxury than most of its midsize competitors.

And Mercury is making news as well. With its EPA-estimated 34 mpg highway, the 2010 Mercury Milan is the most fuel-efficient midsize sedan in America.[1] Its all-new hybrid counterpart is even more impressive, getting an EPA-estimated 41 mpg city.[1] In fact, you can drive more than 700 miles on a tank of gas in city driving.[1] And the Mercury Mariner Hybrid gets an EPA-estimated 34 mpg in the city.[1] Green is good, and with Mercury, it's even better.

We've got cars, crossovers and SUVs that can give you real-time weather, traffic, sports scores, movie listings, even local gas prices.[2] And nobody else has SYNC® technology. With simple voice commands, you can play music from most MP3 players, make and receive phone calls from a Bluetooth®-enabled phone and even send and receive text messages — all without your hands ever leaving the wheel.[3]

IT'S ALL PART OF THE PLAN

Ford and Lincoln Mercury have a plan, and we're sticking to it. And the market share that Ford Motor Company is gaining clearly shows that our plan is working. Our commitment to quality is reflected in the fact that neither Honda nor Toyota can beat Mercury quality.[4] That we've earned more IIHS Top Safety Picks and NHRTSA five-star crash test ratings[5] than any other car company shows how committed we are to safety. And because we're operating independently of federal assistance, we're free to aggressively pursue our plan to engineer more fuel-efficient, safer and technologically advanced vehicles for America's roads. The things we're doing are making a difference — come see for yourself.

Sincerely,

Quinlan Sullivan, Sullivan Brothers Lincoln-Mercury

National Grid has begun gas main work

National Grid's contractor will perform the work between 7:30 a.m. and 4 p.m., Monday through Friday, making every effort to minimize disruptions to homes and businesses along the route.

National Grid has begun work on its natural gas infrastructure between numbers 112 through 118 Beach St. and number 241 Jerusalem Road through the intersection of Atlantic Avenue/ Construction is scheduled to continue through July 10, and July 31, 2009 respectively.

Approximately 3,000 feet of gas main will be replaced as part of National Grid's infrastructure upgrade. This project will improve both reliability and safety as part of the company's overall plan for investing more than $200 million in main replacements across its service area through March 2010.

National Grid's contractor will perform the work between 7:30 a.m. and 4 p.m., Monday through Friday, making every effort to minimize disruptions to homes and businesses along the route. The company will employ traffic management plans and police details as appropriate in coordination with town officials and public safety representatives.

Customers can expect brief service interruptions upon completion of the work, as homes and businesses are connected to the new gas main. Owners will be notified prior to any necessary digging on private property.

Residents with questions or concerns about this project may contact National Grid Community Relations Coordinator Peter Nagle at 781-907-2211.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JUNE 22, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A change of season reinvigorates the Lamb, helping to overcome the effects of a recent slower-paced period. This is a good time to restate your feelings for that certain someone.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You might not like using your authority to correct a workplace situation, but that's what being placed in charge is all about. Besides, you have people ready to lend support if need be.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your creativity continues to run high and helps guide you to make some fine choices in the work you're doing. Keep the weekend free for those special people in your life.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Don't be surprised if you experience a sudden spurt of energy strong enough to pull you out of that recent period of indecision and put you back in charge of your own goals.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) This is a good time for Leos and Leonas to set new goals regarding health, educational choices and possible career moves. The plans you make now could be a blueprint for your future.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You might have much to offer a potential employer, but it can all be overwhelmed by too many details. Let the facts about you speak for themselves without any embellishments.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) This is a good week to balance your responsibilities to your work-a-day world with your obligations to the people in your private life. Expect news that could lead to a change in plans.

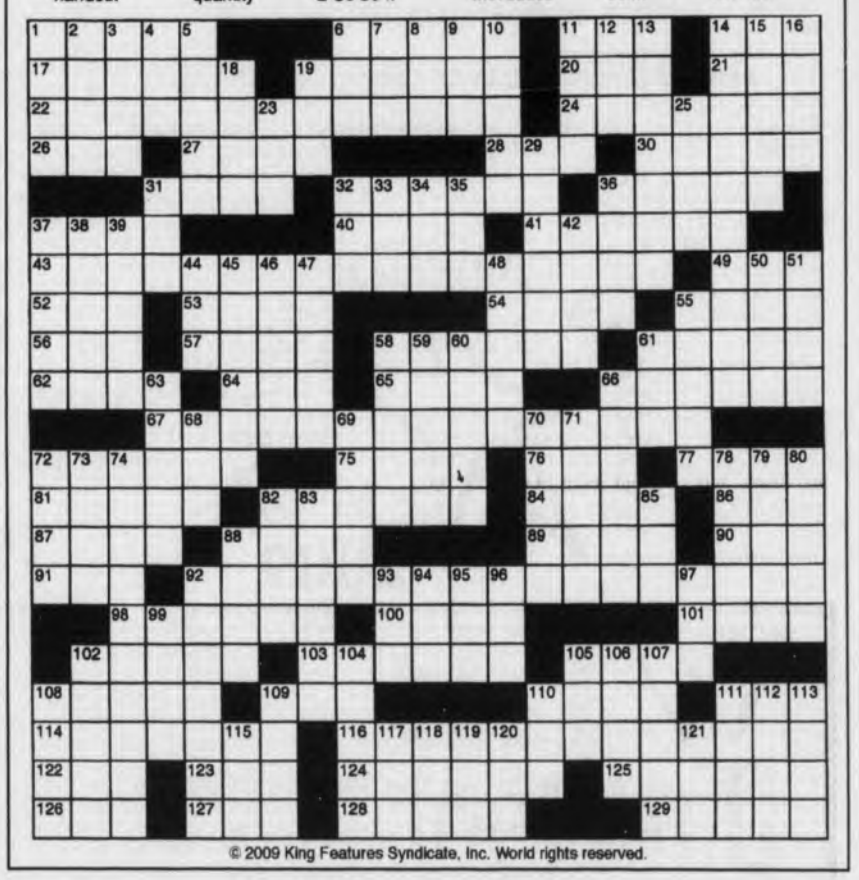
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A changing attitude on the part of a once determined adversary could cause changes down the line. Be prepared to take advantage of an unexpected new opportunity.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You'd be a truly wise Sagittarius to be skeptical about an offer that doesn't answer all your questions. Even a colleague's testimonial doesn't replace facts that aren't there.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) It's a good idea to avoid spending on unnecessary purchases this week in order to keep a money reserve against a possible upcoming (but, fortunately, temporary) shortfall.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) More information is what you should demand regarding that workplace situation that recently came to light. Don't be surprised at who might turn up as one of your supporters.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You might still be in a "treading water" mode, but by midweek, a shift in your aspect favors taking a more active role in pushing for the changes you feel are necessary. Good luck.



(c) 2009 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You exude a warm, caring attitude that comforts everyone who comes into your life.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Local artists earn international acclaim

By Jennifer H. McInerney
Correspondent

In the eyes of the International Association of Pastel Societies, four of the most talented pastel artists in the world hail from right here on the South Shore. Among them are instructors Liz Haywood-Sullivan and Donna Rosetti-Bailey, both of Marshfield, who teach classes as part of the North River Arts Society's education program. The other two are their local students, Kurt Weiser of Scituate and Barbara Chaisson of Pembroke.

Their pastel creations were recently selected for inclusion in the International Association of Pastel Artists 13th Juried Exhibition, which was held at the Ventana Fine Art Gallery in Santa Fe, N.M, June 4-7, 2009. The work of another pupil, Maureen Spinale, a Hyde Park resident, was also featured in this prestigious biennial exhibit.

Doug Dawson, the juror of selection, viewed nearly 400 images of pastel paintings from artists around the world and selected only 62 pieces for display in the Ventana gallery, one of the Southwest's premier exhibition spaces.

"What a fantastic surprise that all five of us had our work accepted," enthuses Rosetti-Bailey, who taught in the Rockland Public Schools' art department for 23 years. "This is huge because it was open to all of the best pastel artists from around the world."

At the exhibit's opening, Haywood-Sullivan's work, "High Noon Corrales," received an honorable mention.

For the three protégés, the IAPS exhibit marked their first foray into the international art scene. More than 50 pastel societies from the U.S. and abroad regularly participate in the association's events.

"It's an honor to have my piece hanging beside works of the best pastel artists in the world, and we had a great showing for the South Shore arts community and the North River Arts Society," notes Weiser, who has been painting with pastels for only two years.

"This is the first international pastel show that my work has been selected for," says Chaisson, who received her formal training at the Massachusetts College of Art, and has taken classes with Rosetti-Bailey at the South Shore Art Center, in Cohasset. "Donna is a truly gifted art teacher and I feel fortunate to have had the opportunity to study with her so close to home."

When working with pastels, these local artists are often inspired by their South Shore surroundings. Rossetti-Bailey's winning submission, for example, is "World's End Trees," a beautiful scene from the Hingham park of the same name.

"The piece that I submitted was of a pond beside the Fuller Museum, in Brockton. It was a beautiful wintry, sunlit day, and the shadows in the snow and the light on the pond were what I was attracted to," explains Spinale, who traveled to New Mexico to see the exhibit. "As I worked, I remembered Liz saying, 'Snow is not white,' and she's right; in this particular painting, the shadows were a vibrant blue. I loved painting it."

Pastel paintings are created with pure powdered pigment sticks that produce a powerfully colorful prismatic effect when applied to paper, canvas, sanded board, or other material.

"I came to pastel because of the rich color choices and also because it is so forgiving," observes Rosetti-Bailey. "Mistakes are easy to correct, the colors are gorgeous, the clean-up is quick, and there is no 'drying time' like there is with oils."

CNC SUPER TEAM

Girls Track

NAME: Amanda Claflin
SCHOOL: Pembroke
GRADE: Senior
EVENT: Long Jump
STATS: What a way to end a high school career. Claflin helped Pembroke win the Division 4 state meet, and on a personal level, she consistently jumped more than 17 feet in the long jump. She made up one-quarter of the 4x100 team that placed ninth at New England's, and she finished her high school career making the Patriot League All-Star team (indoor and outdoor track combined) seven times.

NAME: Molly O'Dea
SCHOOL: Hingham
GRADE: Junior
EVENT: 100
STATS: Has a 12.34 in the All-State Meet finals to earn a trip to the New England Meet. Her 12.34 was the second best finish at the meet. Earlier in the day she had posted the fastest time of the day in the preliminaries. O'Dea was also on the 4x100 relay team that made it to New Englands.

NAME: Becky Stoyle
SCHOOL: Pembroke
GRADE: Sophomore
EVENT: Long Jump
STATS: One of four Pembroke girls to compete at the New England Championships. Stoyle set a personal record this season in the long jump with a mark of 18 feet, 2 inches. She also excelled in the 200, where she posted a personal record of 26.20 seconds.

NAME: Julie McCauley
SCHOOL: Marshfield
GRADE: Junior
EVENT: Long Jump
STATS: McCauley, a star soccer player and indoor track athlete, made a name for herself yet again for the Marshfield High outdoor track team. This spring, McCauley excelled in the 100 meters and the long jump. In her strongest event, the long jump, McCauley placed sixth at the All-State Meet with a leap of 17 feet, 9 3/4 inches.

NAME: Berkeley Hall
SCHOOL: Pembroke
GRADE: Junior
EVENT: 110 Hurdles, Triple Jump
STATS: This season, Hall competed in nine events for the Titans. Her two strongest – the 110-meter hurdles and triple jump – is where she shined. She finished fifth at the New England Track and Field Championships in the triple jump, and earlier this year set a personal record in the event with a jump of 37 feet, 4 inches. In the 110-hurdles, Hall also set a personal best this year, running it in 15.23 seconds.

NAME: Amanda Claflin, Berkeley Hall, Teresa Fatemi, Becky Stoyle
SCHOOL: Pembroke
EVENT: 4x100
STATS: This foursome could not be contained this season and wound up placing ninth at the New England Championships. Together, their contributions helped the Lady Titans win the Division 4 state meet. They posted a season-best time of 49.78 seconds.

NAME: Ali Weller
SCHOOL: Norwell
GRADE: Freshman
EVENT: Two-mile
STATS: In her first year competing at the high school level, Weller did not disappoint. The team's most consistent distance runner, Weller made it all the way to the All-State Meet. One week prior, Weller finished fourth at the Division 4 state meet with a time of 11 minutes, 41.44 seconds.

NAME: Jess Bell
SCHOOL: Weymouth
GRADE: Senior
EVENT: 400 Meter Hurdles
STATS: Bell completed a strong senior campaign in which she scored more than 100 points, won a divisional title, and qualified for the state meet in an incredible seven individual events.

NAME: Carolyn Connolly
SCHOOL: Weymouth
GRADE: Senior
EVENT: 800
STATS: Although Connolly finished ninth in the 800 at the Div. 1 Championships, she did not compete in the All-State Meet because she wanted to save herself for the relay. No matter, Connolly has been one of Weymouth's top runners in her four years with the Wildcats.

NAME: Kendall Ivil
SCHOOL: Weymouth
GRADE: Junior
EVENT: Was the top area finisher in the All-States in the discus with a heave of 94 feet, 2 inches. She improved her seed by eight places. Kendall's season got red-hot at the right time, as she got through a midseason slump by taking second place at the Division 1 meet, and followed it up with a great second toss at All States. Kendall finished sixth in the region and has her sights set on a championship here next spring.

HONORABLE MENTION

Julia Nee, Soph., Duxbury
Cammie Brown, Soph., Marshfield
Meg Landry, Soph, Marshfield
Jocelyn Hubbard, Fr., Marshfield
Heather Connick, Soph., Pembroke
Kathryn Nathan, Sr., Pembroke
Crystal Burdge, Sr., Pembroke

NAME: Tori Lohr
SCHOOL: Cohasset
GRADE: Junior
EVENT: Shot put
STATS: Tori was the South Shore League champ in the shot put. Her 34' 10.25 throw at the Div. 4 meet was her season high and qualified her for the All-State Meet where she finished 16th with a 34' 1.5 throw.

NAME: Shauna McNiff
SCHOOL: Hingham
EVENT: Mile
STATS: McNiff's 5:06.47 at the All-State Meet was good enough for a 10th-place finish, but closer to home it set a new Hingham High School record.

NAME: Mollie Lane
SCHOOL: Hanover
GRADE: Junior
EVENT: High Jump
STATS: Lane finished the All-State Meet with a 5-2 jump for 13th place. Earlier on, she had a 5-4 jump that was her season best.

NAME: Jill Corcoran
SCHOOL: Weymouth
GRADE: Sophomore
EVENT: 2 Mile
STATS: At the All-State Championship, Corcoran broke the 11-minute barrier for the first time, running a 10:57.70, which was a Weymouth High School record, and a time that is good enough to win All States on most occasions.

NAME: Jill Corcoran, Carolyn Connolly, Bridget Jakiltsch and Sam Bennett.
SCHOOL: Weymouth
EVENT: 4x 400 Relay
STATS: Their time of 9:25.84 was the best of the region at the All-State Meet in Fitchburg. They didn't go to the New England Championship meet because it conflicted with high school graduation.

COHASSET TRIATHLON

Tri draws big field

Over 800 athletes compete in the third annual event

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

For the third year running, the Cohasset Triathlon put on a show for the town of Cohasset.

The biggest stage Cohasset has probably ever seen was at Sandy Beach. Over 800 athletes descended on the town to complete the 15-mile, three-sport course. Hundreds of residents and visitors lined the racecourse with cheers and enthusiasm.

And to top it off, the Triathlon raised over $140,000 for its charitable partner, the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF).

In its three years of existence, Race Director and Cohasset resident Bill Burnett was proud to report the Cohasset Triathlon event has raised nearly $500,000 for the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF).

A total of 735 individual competitors and 40 relay teams completed the race. There were 127 Cohasset residents who finished the race (see sports for complete Cohasset results). About 25 percent of the race field was first time triathletes.

"It's neat for me to have that kind of following and have people experience a triathlon for the first time at Cohasset," Burnett said.

Wind bylaw stands as is

Voters indefinitely postpone article

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

When all was said and done at Special Town Meeting last week, the wind energy bylaw stood as it was approved at the 2008 Town Meeting and will remain so for the foreseeable future.

Last Thursday (June 25) – on the first sunny evening all week – a crowd of 317 voters turned out to vote on a citizen's petition proposed "moratorium" on the wind energy bylaw and an article amending the previously approved article on the high school's turf field.

Yet, the decision and discussion as it related to the wind bylaw wasn't exactly what had been advertised. Because of the Planning Board's lack of a recommendation following its public hearing Wednesday night (June 24), Town Moderator Daniel Evans told the assembly it would not be able to act upon the wind energy bylaw article as it was set forth in the warrant and in a handout of suggested motions.

According to state statutes governing zoning bylaw amendment procedures, the Planning Board is required to hold a public hearing and make a report to town meeting. Since the Planning Board felt unprepared to make a recommendation, it continued the hearing until a date in July.

Jeff Patterson, 24 Sanctuary Pond Road, a proponent of the citizen's petition, addresses the Special Town Meeting, about the proposed moratorium on the wind turbine bylaw.

As a result, Special Town Meeting was asked to consider a motion to adjourn to Sept. 21 at which time the substance of the citizen's petition article could be vetted.

Although the proposed citizen's petition article was not on the floor for discussion, its merits came into play as voters grappled with the choice of whether to reschedule the discussion to a later

Greenbush is wrapping up

Punch list down to a few items

The spreadsheet listing dozens of outstanding items has dwindled to just a handful.

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Greenbush commuter rail has been up and running for over a year and a half, but still construction work in Cohasset is just now nearing completion.

The spreadsheet listing dozens of outstanding items has dwindled to just a handful.

Cohasset's Greenbush Project Office has been keeping close tabs on the finish work being done around town.

"They have done a lot of the big ones," Mark Brennan, one of two engineers in the Greenbush office, said this week. The six or eight items remaining on the punch list are half administrative — providing the town with the as built drawings – and half minor construction items.

In recent months the larger items have been completed. The entrance to Woodside Cemetery was permanently reconfigured, misplaced guardrails on 3A near King Street and Rocky Lane were moved and the Pond St. crosswalk and drainage were corrected.

"We're pretty close," Brennan said. He expects the remaining items to be completed by the end of the year. "I give the Cashman (Balfour Beatty, the MBTA's contractor) guys credit, they've been proactive in notifying us when work is going on. I think they are anxious to be done, too."

Brennan noted the contractor even completed an item not on town's punch list. Small items like correcting cracks in the rail bed's fencing near the village and switching handicap signs in the parking lot were on the list.

They spotted a survey and construction crew out and about this past week indicating the as built drawings are in the works.

"All these things are signaling the end of the project," Brennan said.

All things considered, Brennan said the project should be a positive amenity for the town. "Everyone I've talked to who are avid riders have positive reviews…I think it is a positive thing for the town."

Brennan and Tom Gruber, or the Greenbush Guys as they are commonly called, have ceased taking their informal count of cars at the Cohasset Station. Since the MBTA raised the daily cost to park from $2 to $4 the number of commuters being dropped off at the station skyrocketed making the car count obsolete when it comes to estimating the number of riders. Before the parking cost increase they had observed a steady up tick of commuters in Greenbush's first year.

Both Cohasset residents, Brennan and Gruber came on as town employees in early 2005 as the $512 million project was in the midst of construction.

With the Greenbush project wrapping up, what are the Greenbush guys to do?

Although the 'Greenbush guys' moniker may have to be retired, Brennan said they are not lacking for work.

"We're involved in bits and pieces all over town," Brennan said.

They continue to work with the contractor and engineers completing the Little Harbor water and sewer project. They are managing several grant-funded projects and coordinating several paving jobs involving the Little Harbor sewer expansion project and water department work throughout town. Three Cohasset boaters taken into protective custody

"We did not feel comfortable letting them leave on their own."
— Chief James Hussey

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police took two 19-year-olds and a 20-year-old into protective custody last Saturday after a call from a concerned citizen about a group of "kids" playing loud music on the town dock that floats in the harbor. When police arrived the Cohasset group had left on a boat headed toward the harbor. Police located them at a dock near Atlantica and determined they were under the influence of alcohol.

"We did not feel comfortable letting them leave on their own," Chief James Hussey said.

The three men were taken into protective custody and later released to their parents.

MV stop

Police pulled over a Braintree man for speeding on Summer Street last Thursday (June 25) at about 7:30 a.m. The man, who was driving a green Honda, was traveling about 40 mph in a 25 mph zone, police said.

The man presented police with a Brazilian passport but did not have a license in his possession. Further investigation revealed his license had been suspended. He was arrested and charged with operating after license suspension and speeding.

Threats

A Pembroke man was arrested for stalking, vandalism and threats, after a Cohasset woman reported that he had followed her in his pickup truck and had been passing by her house. Police said the Pembroke man was trying to collect $3,000 allegedly owed to him by the woman's son. She contacted police after the man allegedly followed her in his red pickup and threatened her. The wheels to her son's van that was parked at her house had been flattened.

Police said the man drove by while they were talking to the woman; they were able to pull him over. Based on the number of times he had been by the house, his alleged threats and the vandalism, he was placed under arrest.

He claimed that she was the first one to use threats and that he had simply gone by to locate her son. He told police he responded to threats made to him.

The woman is being summonsed to court for making threats.

"We will let the court decide whose version is the most credible and what took place," Chief Hussey said.

Damage

Police do not think that a car parked overnight on Rust Way was vandalized but may have been involved in an accident. A walk-in at the police station reported that his son's car was vandalized. He had left the car parked on Rust Way while he was attending a graduation party. There were also marks above the rear tire.

There was damage to the front bumper and fender and a tire was flat. There were no other reports of vandalism, police said.

Police said it appeared the car was hit or had struck something. The incident was reported on Tuesday (June 23).

Solicitors

Solicitors for Clean Water Action, a non-profit, were in town last week seeking donations. Non-profits are allowed to solicit door-to-door and do not need to register with the police.

Exceptions to the bylaw are town, state or federal officers or employees on official business; minors under 18, unless in connection with a commercial activity; candidates for public office or campaign workers; those promoting political causes; and those soliciting for charitable organizations, unless those solicitors are paid.

MV crashes

• A Scituate woman was issued a citation for following too closely and for not wearing a seatbelt following a motor vehicle accident last Wednesday (June 24) at about 10:50 a.m. Police said the woman, who was driving a 1998 Ford "rear-ended" a 2001 Lexus waiting to make a left from King Street into a driveway. The Lexus was driven by a N. Easton resident. Both cars were towed and the N. Easton resident was transported to the hospital.

• A Cohasset woman was cited for failing to yield to oncoming traffic after witnesses said she turned the 1998 Jeep she was driving into the path of a 2008 Nissan, operated by a Brockton man. The accident occurred at Beechwood and King streets. The woman, who was headed east, was trying to make a left from Beechwood onto King Street; she slowed and used the turn signal, as if she were going to stop but all of a sudden pulled into the path of the westbound Nissan, police said. The Jeep was towed; there were no apparent injuries and a sign on the traffic island at the intersection was damaged.

Car break-in

An Atlantic Avenue resident reported that sometime overnight June 23-24, a GPS unit and iPod were stolen from her car that had been left unlocked. Police hope the victim will provide serial numbers for the missing items. The larceny is being investigated.

Intoxicated

Police responded to a 9-1-1 call last Friday transferred from the State Police with a Cohasset woman on the line who was highly intoxicated. She did not need to be transported, police said.

Blue lights

Blue lights used on a motorcycle or car need a special license, police said. Police warned a motorcyclist helping out with the recent MS Walk to "cease and desist" using the blue lights. A license is required because the public generally associates blue lights with police.

Cruisers are equipped with blue lights, but Chief Hussey said the station has portable blue lights that can be attached to a car that can also be used for police business.

Lock damaged

Police investigated a report of damage to a lock to a home on Grace Drive last week. Police checked around and could find no evidence of a break-in other than the lock, which had a missing screw. Nothing appeared to be missing. Police are not sure if it was an attempted break-in or normal wear and tear to the lock, Chief Hussey said.

Wind bylaw stands as is

date or indefinitely postpone it, meaning no action would be taken.

About 45 minutes worth of discussion followed, more or less an even split for and against. The divide was clearly evident when after nearly each speaker there was a round of applause to indicate support for the speaker's position.

Town Moderator Evans reminded the assembly of the procedures and motion on the floor at several points during the discussion.

In the end, a majority of citizens voted against having another Town Meeting in September opting instead (in a separate vote) to indefinitely postpone consideration of the article.

Many speakers defended the wind bylaw as it was written and argued that the bylaw worked during the first application process for the Cohasset Heights two-turbine proposal.

Kathryn Earle of Ash Street defended the bylaw's "ambiguity."

"(We) need to allow a certain amount of uncomfortable ambiguity in order to bring about big changes in our town," Earle said. "It is not a good idea to amend the bylaw today and it still won't be a good idea to amend it (in September)."

Jeff Patterson of 24 Sanctuary Pond Road, one of the proponents of the citizen's petition, said if consideration of the article was not allowed to take place in September, a large percentage of citizens who had worked and acted in good faith were being denied the opportunity to have a substantive discussion and decision on the proposed moratorium.

"We're not against wind power, but we want wind power to be done responsibly," said Conrad Langenhagen of Sanctuary Pond, another one of the proponents.

Some speakers said the issue was nothing more than NIMBY and an attempt to rescind the bylaw. Proponents said their intent was to have a time period without the threat of further wind turbine project applications so the town could undertake a deliberative and collaborative approach to amending the wind energy bylaw. Some felt there just wasn't a need for a second special town meeting on the issue, especially one close to the regularly held November Town Meeting.

Several speakers targeted the need for alternative energy on a local and national level.

"I encourage you to vote down this amendment and start getting some green energy going in this town," said Richard Perkins of King Street.

Others pointed to specific items not included in the bylaw, in particular a guaranteed financial benefit to the town.

"Basically we have a one shot deal to get a benefit from a developer, right now there no requirement for a financial benefit to the town," said Mark Babka of Forest Avenue.

Officials weigh in

Selectmen chairman Paul Carlson conveyed his board's stance on the issue (selectmen did not come to a recommendation until shortly before Town Meeting).

"We do believe the bylaw should be reviewed, and there is time to do that in the fall or spring Town Meeting," said Carlson, adding the existing bylaw was carefully vetted and worked during the first application process. Carlson said there was some concern on how pending state legislation on wind turbines would have on the town, especially if the town did not have a wind energy bylaw. He also said there was a cost associated with having another special town meeting

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer was the only selectmen to feel differently, "it is the right of Town Meeting to make a decision on the wind turbine bylaw…(if you vote to indefinitely postpone the article) there will be no chance to debate the current bylaw."

Advisory Committee chair Sam Wakeman said his committee felt there could be changes to the bylaw, but the bylaw was not so seriously flawed that it needed a moratorium.

Moderator Evans asked if there was anyone from the Planning Board that wished to speak, but no one stepped forward.

Selectmen vice chair Karen Quigley said there was an existing process in place for citizens who feel a zoning bylaw needs revision beginning with a conversation with the Planning Board.

"If there is a vote to indefinitely postpone that is not saying the town doesn't have a chance to revise the bylaw," said Quigley.

The Alternative Energy Committee, represented by its chairman Andrew Willard, said it was willing to work with any citizens who brought to them suggestions for bylaw improvements regardless of how Town Meeting voted.

The decision

After about 45 minutes of discussion a citizen called for a vote on the motion. A simple majority was required for approval.

Following a voice vote Moderator Evans determined the motion was defeated.

Quickly following the announcement, a hand count was requested with 113 in favor and 134 against; the motion failed.

Then Selectman Fred Koed proposed an indefinite postponement of the article. With no discussion, the motion passed with a majority vote.

With the defeat of the continuance and the indefinite postponement, Town Meeting won't be able to consider the wind bylaw moratorium or specific changes to the bylaw until (at least) November's Special Town Meeting.

Although 317 registered voters checked in with the Town Meeting tellers, it's unclear why only 247 voters took part in the hand count. According to the Town Clerk's office, some voters were observed leaving the meeting following the turf field vote and some voters may have chosen not to cast their vote on the wind bylaw issue.

Earlier that day, e-mails from several sources were sent to many in the community indicating the wind bylaw would not be voted on or discussed. Confusion resulted and proponents said after the meeting many supporters of the proposed moratorium did not come out to town meeting because they thought the issue would not come to a vote.

Turf field moves forward

The amendment to the turf field article previously approved by town meeting sailed through with no discussion from the floor.

For more than a year, the Cohasset Sports Partnership has been raising money to build a turf field and track to replace the current natural grass Alumni Field. In a relatively short time, they raised over $475,000 in private donations.

The purpose of the article was to amend the amount of private funding and type of private funds needed to move the project forward. In the original article approved at the 2008 Special Town Meeting, voters authorized a $500,000 bond to construct the field dependant on $550,000 in private funds being raised. At the time the estimated cost of the synthetic turf field and track construction was $1,050,000.

When the project went out to bid the bids came in lower than anticipated due to the economy.

The project is expected to cost $950,000 and includes a $50,000 contingency.

At Thursday's Town Meeting (June 25) voters authorized the use of town monies up to $500,000.

At Town Meeting the Board of Selectmen and Advisory Committee supported the article in addition to praising the effort as an excellent example of a public-private partnership.

Construction on the turf field was expected to begin the morning after town meeting. Two bulldozers were already situated on the field in anticipation of an approval vote. The turf field is expected to be complete in time for the fall sports season.

Special Town Meeting timeline

- April 27: Two citizens came before Selectmen on Monday to request a Special Town Meeting to entertain the complete withdrawal of the wind energy conversion facility bylaw. The proposal also suggested placing a moratorium on all future wind turbine project applications until the bylaw could be rewritten.
- April 29: The Planning Board has its first session to deliberate the first wind turbine project at Cohasset Heights. No decision is made.
- May 6: The Planning Board denies the Cohasset Heights two-wind turbine project off Route 3A when all four voting members failed to reach a consensus. The vote was 3-1 in favor of the project; four voting members had to agree in order for approval.
- May 11: A citizen's petition signed by about 400 resident calls a Special Town Meeting to discuss placing a "temporary moratorium" on the wind energy bylaw. Town Meeting is scheduled for Monday, June 22.
- May 20: The Planning Board schedules its public hearing on the citizen's petition article, which proposes a change to the zoning bylaws, after the date of the scheduled Town Meeting. According to state statutes governing zoning bylaw, a public hearing and a Planning Board recommendation is required in order for Town Meeting to vote on the article.
- May 28: The Board of Selectmen change the Special Town Meeting date to Thursday, June 25 to accommodate the Planning Board's public hearing on Wed. June 24. In addition, the Selectmen add an article on the turf field project to the town meeting warrant.
- June 22: The Board of Selectmen defers its recommendation on the wind bylaw article to town meeting. They recommend approval of the turf field article.
- June 24: The Planning Board holds its public hearing on the proposed change to the wind energy conversion facility zoning bylaw. After gathering public comment, a majority of the planning board votes to continue the public hearing to a July date. No recommendation is made and because of that town meeting is not legally allowed to take action on the article.
- June 25: Special Town Meeting is held. Because the Planning Board did not make a recommendation, town meeting could not take action on the article as printed in the warrant. Instead citizen proponents put forth a motion to adjourn the meeting until Sept. 21. After about an hour of discussion Town Meeting voted down this motion thereby not continuing town meeting to September. In a separate motion, a majority supported the indefinite postponement of the article. The turf field article passes easily.

Planning Board wants consistency

Differing copies of James Lane plans cause ripples

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A lack of consistency in the site plans for the 8 James Lane 17-condominium development frustrated some of the Planning Board members last week. As the application entered its fourth public hearing night the Planning Board requested a more complete and consistent set of plans to show the progress made so far in the process.

The meeting started off with a discussion on the possibility and need for a widening of a portion of James Lane. James Lane is an L-shaped road off Pleasant Street. The proposed project is located is at the corner where James Lane makes a right turn to run parallel to Pleasant Street. The portion of the lane immediately off Pleasant Street is roughly 14-feet wide.

The developers put forth a plan to widen the portion of James Lane from its intersection with Pleasant Street at their expense to accommodate the increased traffic from the development. The Board of Selectmen would need to approve any changes to public ways.

Planning Board member Stuart Ivimey asked why a too-small setback that had been brought to the attention of the applicant at the last meeting was not showing on the plan. The project's civil engineer Bob Hannigan said Ivimey was looking at the older architectural plan, not the updated engineering plan.

"I don't want to hear any more that this is an old plan," said Ivimey with a pound of his fist on the table. He then moved that the board reject the proposal on the grounds old plans have been submitted over and over.

Chairman Al Moore wasn't prepared to go that far yet, but did share in Ivimey's frustration. Moore asked the developer to explain why they weren't getting complete sets of plans.

Weighing in on the issue, the town's engineer John Modzelewski said he felt the developer was trying to get a sense of the board.

"I think they are trying to be as fluid in the design as they get feedback from the board and audience," said Modzelewski, adding he also found it difficult to keep track of the numerous sets of plans coming to him on different days from different sources.

Paul Cleary of South Coastal Development Group, the project developer, said they were waiting for some direction from the board in regards to the commercial/residential mix of the project. Additionally, Cleary said, a checklist of required submissions does not exist for village projects and the Design Review Board suggested multiple changes to the project the week before. The new requests made it difficult to supply a completely new set of plans in a short turnaround, he said.

Member Clark Brewer said he didn't have a problem with the process and there were good things to take away from each of the submitted plans. Yet, he said a complete set of plans would be required if the planning board were to vote on the project.

Member Jean Healey-Dippold said under the special permit process the board has to make findings based on the evidence presented and the credibility of that evidence. If the planning board keeps getting the same plans, or different version, it calls into question the credibility of the applicant, Healey-Dippold said.

Moore reminded the applicants that the board needed to start coming to a point where it could vote on the project. If the applicants need more time to put forth a complete presentation, he suggested they ask for a postponement of the hearing.

"When we do make changes, you need to get rid of the old stuff," said Moore.

A short presentation on the traffic impacts with the developers' traffic consultant was presented.

"I think they are trying to be as fluid in the design as they get feedback from the board and audience."
— John Modzelewski, town engineer

Bill Carlson of Carlson Construction Associates out of Dedham said he typically does not do a traffic study for a project this small, instead he wrote up a short memo following a site visit.

First off, Carlson said the width of the road needed addressing, "14-feet wide is not acceptable for two-way traffic."

He suggested the road be widened to 20-feet. In most cases the addition of a development like this would not add a significant amount of traffic, he said. However, because James Lane is a small street with seven houses and the project would be adding approximately 100 car trips daily to the area it was a significant jump. He tempered this data by calling attention to other potential uses (medical, commercial, retail), which would quadruple the amount of car trips than the residential project proposed.

Zoning setbacks

Resident Alix White of 25 James Lane armed with a notepad and easel asked questions about zoning setbacks on several different levels.

One of her primary concerns, shared by other neighbors, was the safety of the Ellms Meadow well fields, a public drinking water supply.

"The well field defines our neighborhood more than the Red Lion Inn," said White. In past meetings, the project's architects have said they tried to take some of the architectural elements of the inn and include them in the proposed building.

White said she was unclear about the Department of Environmental Protection's required setbacks from the well fields. In some cases the setbacks called for a 400-foot no build zone. A Water Department memo written by Plymouth-based Norfolk Ram indicated there was no issue as far as the well field with the project. However, White said the memo was written without having access to the plans.

White also said there could be additional setback requirements from the James Brook, which runs through a box culvert on the adjacent 2 Pleasant St. property, and from the MBTA commuter rail right of way.

The developer said neither of those issues affected the current building configuration.

The Planning Board directed its engineer, Modzelewski to look into the issues.

Modzelewski said one of his primary concerns at this point was the project's drainage calculations.

The public hearing on 8 James Lane was continued to Wednesday, July 29.

8 James Lane project in brief

Stoughton-based South Coastal Development Group has put forth for an application for a special permit under the relatively new village zoning regulations passed at the November 2008 Town Meeting. The property is somewhat of an orphan for the district as it is located on the other side of the MBTA tracks and does not currently have retail or commercial space.

The 26,000 square foot building will have three floors, an elevator and an underground parking garage in the basement.

The property at 8 James Lane is located behind the seasonal hot dog and ice cream stand that has operated most recently under the name Boys of Summer. The property abuts the MBTA commuter rail tracks and fronts on James Lane.

Building Permits

The following building permits were issued recently at Town Hall:

All adult family and friends of the sailing club are invited to a lobster and chicken feast and a silent auction to benefit the club. The party will be held from 6 till 11p.m., rain or shine. Dinner will be served between 6:30 and 8:30p.m. BYOB.

Tickets are $50 per person payable to the Cohasset Sailing Club and are available by calling Joyce Driscoll at 383-0122 or Claudia McKeon at 383-6125.

Donations for auction items are welcome, please contact Jim Porter at 383-2029.

See you on the 11th!

Building permit inspections to be conducted

Cohasset Assessors' Office staff will conduct building permit inspections for assessment purposes over the next few months as they prepare for certification by the Department of Revenue for fiscal 2010. The staff will be physically inspecting and/or measuring the properties in town that have recent building permits. Digital cameras will be used to produce exterior photos of the buildings for the database.

The Assessors' staff will be able to produce proper identification. If the homeowner or a person older than 18 years of age is not at home on the first call, a notice will be left asking the homeowner to call for an appointment. Property owners are asked to respond to any notices at their earliest convenience to avoid estimated assessments.

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

NEWS TIPS

Hello Cohasset. How are you doing with this interesting weather that we keep having? I hope everyone is well and trying to make the best of it all. I think this weekend will be a bit nicer but we will take whatever nice we can get I guess. Happy 4th of July to everyone! Make sure to stay safe, enjoy family friends, a few drinks and most of all, HAVE FUN! Happy Birthday USA!

July is going to be a big month for many so before it gets to far into action, I just wanted to send a few notes out to all of our readers about the Around-Town column. I love to write and share all of the news, events and celebrations that are sent in each week and it is so much fun to share photos as well. What I would love to let everyone know again this time at the beginning is that in order for any of these pieces to be shared for a particular week, PLEASE make sure to send in your items no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm so that I have time to write and edit all that needs to happen for the column that week.

Also, if you have any photos that you would like to appear with your article, please make sure to send the photo and info to me at aroundtowncohasset@yahoo.com and, the photo only with subject info to Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com. I always feel so bad when I get extra or last minute info and because the column has already been written and submitted, I cannot guarantee that it will appear for that week. The last thing I would like to ask (I know, now I am getting pushy) is to please remember to send all other articles and pieces for the paper to the appropriate person who is in charge. This information may be found in the paper or, you may email Mary Ford. Thank you to all and I look forward to a fantastic weekend and so many great things to come.

TRIATHLON

Congratulations are in order to all of the amazing athletes, families and friends who took part in the Triathalon last week here in Cohasset. Whether you finished first, 100th or last of the bunch, every single person is a true champion in my book. Everyone has a different story and reason on why they participate however, at the end of the day the ultimate cause was to raise money and awareness for Diabetes. Spectacular job to all who participated as well as the volunteers from children, teens, adults and community workers, you should all be so proud of the job that took place.

50TH REUNION

Graduates of the Cohasset High School Class of 1959 will be arriving next week from all parts of the U.S. to celebrate their 50th reunion. They will gather at the upstairs function room of the American Legion at 98 Summer St. on Friday evening at 6 p.m. for an evening of celebrating and renewing old acquaintances.

Saturday will begin with a trip down memory lane on a trolley ride around Cohasset to see what's new, and remember the old. The day will end with a barbecue at the Lightkeeper's House on Government Island on Cohasset Harbor. The culminating event will be a brunch at Raffael's at the Clarion Hotel in Hull on Sunday morning. Cohasset High School graduates of the classes of 1957, 1958 and 1960 are most welcome to drop by the celebration at the American Legion on Friday evening from 6 to 10 p.m.

HONORS

Congratulations go out to Christopher Elliot Wilcox graduating Magna Cum Laude with High Distinction in Mathematics, History and Science from Brooks School in North Andover. Chris played Varsity Soccer and rowed Varsity Crew for Brooks, earning the "Ox Kingsbury" cup for his enthusiasm and dedication to the sport and school. He earned Highest Honors all semesters at Brooks and was accepted into the Honors Program in Economics at the University of St. Andrews in Scotland, UK.

Additionally, Cohasset sisters Elizabeth and Caroline Saltonstall each received Honors this past semester at the Brooks School. Caroline graduated alongside Christopher, while Elizabeth will enter her junior year at Brooks this fall.

Nice work to the three of you on these great accomplishments.

BY A MILE

At the Bay State Games regional competition on June 25, Michael Durkin, 11, of Cohasset, qualified for the Finals in the mile event in the Junior Boys (10-14) division with a time of 5:46. The Bay State Games is organized by the Massachusetts Amateur Sports Foundation, and the Finals will be held on July 11 at MIT. Congratulations, Michael, and good luck!

DOUBLE FEATURE

Coming up in a very few weeks, the Cohasset Dramatic Club, in cooperation with the Cohasset Recreation Department is pleased to present a double feature of musical theater entertainment this summer, with both "Annie, Jr" and "The Wedding Singer". Combined both casts include 74 young people from Cohasset and around the South Shore, with 60 in the cast of "Annie Jr.", ages 8 - 13 and 14 in "The Wedding Singer", ages 15 - 19. Both casts boast terrific talent from mostly right here in Cohasset. They have been rehearsing since before school let out in May and are just about ready for their upcoming performances. There's no question that both shows offer a musical comedy offering for audiences of all ages! Tickets are on sale now!

Show performance dates are July 17, 18 and 19 with "Annie, Jr." being presented at 10 a.m. on Friday the 17th, and at 3 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday the 18th and 19th. The Wedding Singer takes the stage on the same three dates with all performances in the evening on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, at 7:30 p.m. All performances take place at the air-conditioned Cohasset High School Auditorium.n Tickets are $12 each and are available at Paperscapes in downtown Cohasset, Buttonwood Books and Toys, by reservation on the CDC ticket line at 617-697-2115 or at the door. All seats are general admission. Please contact Lisa Pratt (617-852-0091) with any questions, or leave a message on our ticket line and we'll get back to you. See you at the show!!

AT CAMP

Tucker DeSisto, a Cohasset resident and student at CMHS, is attending Camp Pasquaney, the oldest boy's camp in North America. This seven-week camp concentrates in three areas: competence, character, and community. With their days full of hikes, sailing, crewing, baseball, tennis, swimming and theatre, boys learn from the example of their counselors and fellow campers in an atmosphere of challenge and fun. These counselors and campers encourage each boy to develop his best self. Timeless values like honesty, integrity, humor, initiative, thoughtfulness, respect, positive attitude, and "doing for others" are stressed at all times. Campers hail from all over the US and several foreign countries. Over the years, notable alumni have included leaders in all fields including several U.S. Senators and recently, the actor Edward Norton.

Tucker's brother Kyle is a graduate and his sister Paige is a graduate of Pasquaney's sister camp, Camp Onaway where she will be participating in a three week outdoor leadership experience this summer.

EXETER

Great Job to Cohasset student, Sam Game who received honors recognition this past spring, 2009 from Philips Exeter Academy. David Game and Sally Sisson are so proud of their son, Sam and look forward to a wonderful and exciting year ahead.

DEAN'S LIST

Great job to Virginia Spofford on being named to the dean's list Wake Forest University in the spring of 2009. Your family and friends are so proud of you, Virginia!

LAUNCH PARTY

Hey Cohasset, coming up next weekend on July 11th is the annual Cohasset Sailing Club Summer Launch Party. All adult family and friends of the sailing club are invited to a lobster and chicken feast and a silent auction to benefit the club. The party will be held from 6pm till 11pm rain or shine. Dinner will be served between 6:30 and 8:30 pm BYOB. Tickets are $50 pp payable to the Cohasset Sailing Club and are available by calling Joyce Driscoll 781- 383-0122 or Claudia McKeon 781- 383-6125.

Donations for auction items are welcome– please contact Jim Porter 781-383-2029. Save The Date!

CLASS OF '84

This is a message from the CHS Class of 1984! "Our 25th Reunion is getting closer and we still have some missing classmates. Please read the list if you have contact information for anyone, please let them know to contact Jacqui Collari at collarifamily@earthlink.net. Jacqui has worked so hard to get ready for our fun weekend so if you know how to get in touch with any of the following classmates, do Jacqui a favor and get in touch with them yourselves and have them contact Jacqui if they are interested. It will be a fun-filled weekend, starting on July 31, hope to see all of our classmates there!" Here is the list: Tony Bernius, Brian Bonnar, Ron Brown, Joe Burke, DJ Campbell, Jon Daniels, Todd DiGregorio, David Drake, Mark Fasciano, Glenn Jancsics, Richard Jones, Tom Jones, Willy Manns, Rich McCarthy, John O'Connell, Tim O'Connor, Dave Ormiston, Steven Perry, and Chucky or Jimmy Humphreys.

That is all the news for this week. Please make sure to get everything in by Tuesdays at 5 pm.

Openings for Children's Hospital Tennis Benefit

A few team openings remain for the weekend Cohasset Tennis Benefit, scheduled for July 17 through 20.

The tournament begins with an evening reception at the Lightkeeper's residence on Friday, July 17, followed by tennis matches on private courts throughout Cohasset on July 18 and 19. Cost is $250 per team. Mixed-doubles teams play within three categories; pros, intermediate and social.

Proceeds benefit the Children's Hospital "Extraordinary Needs Fund," which covers hotel, transportation and other expenses for families visiting a sick or injured child.

The event this year is dedicated to Paul Carroll, a beloved friend, tireless tennis enthusiast and a steadfast champion behind the tournament since it's inception more than a half century ago.

For more information about the tournament or to register, visit www.cohassettennisbenefit.org

All year long library helps students love reading

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Homework, quizzes and tests are on hiatus for the summer months, but the staff at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library hope reading will not take a break.

All year long, children's librarian Sharon Moody works with students of all ages to ensure they are getting all they can and need from the library. From meeting monthly with teenagers to helping parents and kids find the right book to putting on family-friendly programming, the library can be an invaluable resource for young adults, grade school students and parents.

Each summer the library — and libraries across the state — put on a themed and goal-oriented summer reading program. At the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, elementary students finishing kindergarten through fifth grade are encouraged to sign up at the library or online, then keep track of the titles and number of minutes they read each day.

Any book read — story time for a younger sibling, chapter books, books on CD — counts toward daily reading time.

"The ultimate goal is to have the students make reading a daily habit," Moody said. "I tell the kids they can count anything but something on TV or computer time."

By having students set a goal for daily reading time, Moody said it levels the playing field for students who read at different speeds.

"It gives kids the freedom and flexibility to challenge themselves at their own level," Moody said. "We want everybody to be a winner and be a lifelong reader by setting aside time everyday to read."

Together with the Osgood and Deer Hill librarians, Moody developed a lengthy suggested reading list to go with the summer reading program theme. This year's summer program follows the theme Starship Adventure at your Library and has a first time ever partnership with the Boston Bruins. The reading lists include picture books for the youngest kids, fiction chapter books, biographies and other non-fiction books.

> "The ultimate goal is to have the students make reading a daily habit."
> — Sharon Moody, children's librarian

"We want to meet as many needs as we can," said Moody, adding oftentimes residents come into the library needing direction on books. If she isn't there to guide them, the binder is there to help them. There are also binders with each grade's summer reading list.

"I want kids and parents to feel empowered at the library," Moody said. She welcomes both parents and students to e-mail her with questions, comments, requests and ideas. She laughingly recounted a recent voicemail she received from a kindergartener politely requesting her put a book on hold for him.

"The best part of this job is the interaction with the families and watching them develop from babies to students," said Moody, who was formerly a kindergarten teacher for Cohasset Schools. She has been the children's librarian for about nine years.

Each year the library's summer reading program averages about 350 students a year. So far this summer 200 students have signed up in person at the library and another 50 have joined online.

"It's never too late to sign up," Moody said, who encourages participation as much as possible. Students who turn in their summer reading logs and have met or exceeded their goal will be awarded a tote bag with the summer reading program's logo.

As part of the summer reading program, the library is putting on a series of special events and activities. Monday evenings is family movie night and Tuesday evenings bring performers to the community room.

On Thursday mornings there are story and craft sessions. On Friday mornings there are drop-in story times. A full calendar of summer programs is available at the library's website (www.cohassetlibrary.org).

Moody works hard to ensure there is something to bring kids and students of all ages to the library during the school year and the summer months. Each age group calls for something a little different.

The Homework Center, a program implemented this past school year, has taken off in leaps and bounds. National Honor Society students from Cohasset High help younger kids with their homework for two hours on Tuesday nights.

The library is still struggling to reach the middle school-age students. Moody said each year she and her fellow colleagues devise a program to bring middle schoolers to the library, but each one has failed to catch on or fizzled after initial interest.

"We're not going to give up, we just haven't found the right program yet," Moody said.

Teen Advisory Board

Once a month Moody meets with a group of high school aged students to get a feel for what the students need and want out of the library. The Teen Advisory Board, or TAB for short, meets on the first Monday of every month during the school year.

The 12-student group, which Moody describes more than anything as a social group, discusses upcoming school projects, book recommendations, books being made into movies, and what's going on at school. They eat dinner and talk.

"All the kids have different genres they like to read, so we come away with a wide variety of suggestions," Moody said. Oftentimes the students will give her a heads up on upcoming sequels or the release date of a new paperback by a favorite author.

"It's a great collaboration…it's a fun, fun group," Moody said. The students involved in the group really run the show, Moody only considers herself a facilitator, ensuring each kid get equal time to share what's on their mind. This year, the group was upset there was little done to recycle at the library. As a community service project a TAB student placed a recycling boxes in the community room. Next year, the group hopes to facilitate a recycling plan for all town facilities.

For more information on all the programs and a complete calendar of activities offered by the Cohasset Paul Pratt Memorial Library, visit www.cohassetlibrary.org or call (781) 383-1348.

The Spirit of Massachusetts cost $756,000, took just over a year to build and was appraised at $1.5 million.

Cohasset's connection to Tall Ships

The Sail Boston 2009 fleet has been assembling in Boston since early in June coming from Charleston, South Carolina. From here, the fleet will cruise in company north to Halifax, Canada and from there they will race back across the North Atlantic to Belfast, Northern Ireland. During their stay in Boston, some of the tall ships will be near the Majestic Princess' berth and may be available for boarding.

Cohasset has a strong connection to one of the tall ships visiting Boston, since a Cohasset resident was responsible for having her built fitted out and sailed in an earlier version of the tall ships event in 1984.

Henry Dormitzer, a yachtsmen, former Cohasset Selectman and Boston businessman was responsible for bringing the Tall Ships to Boston in 1974. He then led a group of volunteers to begin working at a Boston pier in preparation for a tall ships event in 1980, at which time he started a sail-training program for youngsters in the area. The program needed a boat for the kids and thus began the creation of the Spirit of Massachusetts.

The Spirit cost $756,000, took just over a year to build and was appraised at $1.5 million. Over 40,000 man-hours went into her construction, and the various woods needed were brought in from all over the United States and as far away as Central America. From tasks in Boston, she was used for summer cruise parties in Maine, finally berthed in Booth Bay harbor from where she joined the fleet for this year's Sail Boston 2009 event.

Built by her original owners for service as a sail-training vessel for young people, she also served as a good-will ambassador for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts from 1984 until 1987. Ocean Classroom Foundation began chartering Spirit for their own educational programs in 1997, and subsequently purchased her in 2000 and use her in their teaching programs.

Ocean Classroom Foundation is committed to sending students and their teachers to sea, on voyages in which the traditions, values and adventure of maritime life provide a unique context for education. They strive to create programs in which students grow stronger and more confident socially, intellectually, ethically and physically to take their places among the generations of exceptional men and women who have been transformed by seafaring life.

Join the Cohasset Historical Society on July 12th and come aboard a chartered yacht to see the visiting fleet. Call the Society at 781-383-1434 or email cohassethistory@yahoo.com for information.

Over 800 athletes compete in the third Cohasset Tri

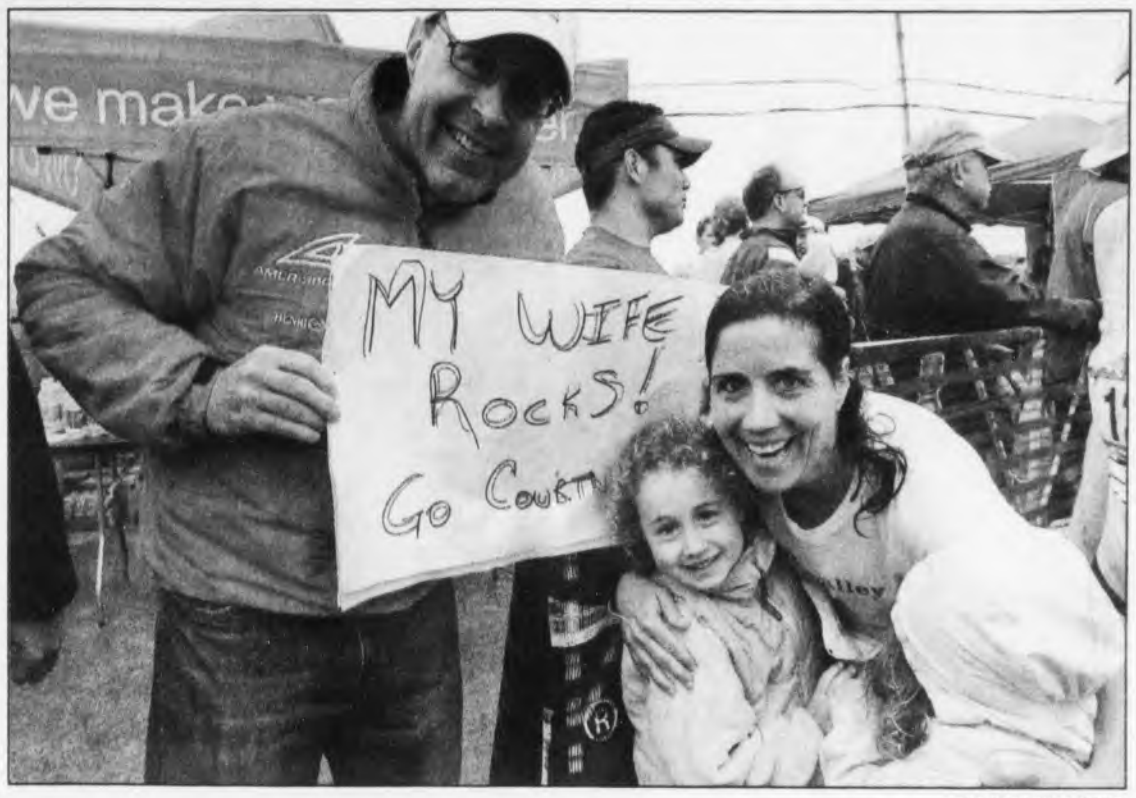
The weather, like most of June, was not ideal for the race — clouds, rough seas, and fog met competitors at Sandy Beach Sunday morning.

In the days leading up to the race the swim portion was in question. The weekly water quality testing done by the Board of Health came back with a too high bacterial count forcing the beach to be closed for swimming late last week. Burnett feared he would have to make the triathlon a duathlon, with run, bike, run legs.

A water sample taken on Friday evening came back Saturday clearing the beach once again safe for swimming.

"It just added a lot of stress and anxiety," said Burnett.

Despite the good news on the water quality the ocean was far from calm. The wind was blowing onshore; there was pretty good surf and about two-foot seas. As a result Burnett and Harbormaster Lorri Gibbons agreed to shorten the swim course.



"For me, that was a difficult decision, but we wanted everyone to be safe," Burnett said.

Because of the last minute changes, the race started a little bit later than scheduled. The starts for each wave, the ten separate groups of competitors, were expected to plunge into the water at five-minute intervals, but that time was extended to ensure the safety of each group.

"Other than that the race went off without a hitch," Burnett said.

Two athletes were transported to the hospital: an elite male competitor who lost his breath during the swim and a female triathlete flipped over the bike's handlebars on the cycle course. Both are expected to be OK, Burnett said.

"The e-mails I've been getting are really great. From the organization to the volunteers to the community, the athletes were impressed at how well the race went. For that I have my team – the police, the fire, the Harbormaster, my race coordinators, the volunteers and the community – to thank," Burnett said.

Cohasset resident Ed Flynn has a sign ready to welcome his wife Courtney at the end of the third annual Cohasset Triathlon Sunday morning. Also pictured are their children, Piper, 6, and Logan, 4.

...the Triathlon raised over $140,000 for its charitable partner, the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF).

The bike and run course, the majority of which is in the heart of the Little Harbor Water and Sewer project, was patched up as much as possible on Friday before the race. The steel plates were removed and patches were put in place to make the course as safe as possible for the athletes.

"I commend the contractor for making the course the best it could be, but I'm really looking forward to having everything paved next year," Burnett said.

Next year's Fourth Annual Cohasset Triathlon has a tentative date — Sunday, June 27, 2010.

"I'm already praying for some blue skies and calm waters. I know it will be like that next year – we're due for it!"

The smallest bell in the Cohasset Carillon weighs only 29 pounds, the largest five and a half tons, which is more than 11,000 pounds.

Cohasset Carillon at St. Stephen's Church

The 85th annual Summer Recital Series began Sunday June 28, at 6 p.m., and will continue each Sunday until Aug. 16.

On June 21, the bells rang for the South Shore Arts Festival on Cohasset Common. Mary Kennedy, assistant carillonneur, celebrated America with a selection of patriotic and popular songs, songs from the movies and Broadway, and songs from our richly diverse ethnic heritage.

The 85th annual Summer Recital Series began Sunday June 28, at 6 p.m., and will continue each Sunday until Aug. 16.

The Cohasset Carillon (speaking in superlatives) can proudly claim the oldest continuing annual recital series in North America. It is also the largest carillon by number of bells (57) in New England. The smallest bell weighs only 29 pounds, the largest five and a half tons, more than 11,000 pounds. It was the second carillon to arrive in the United States, the first was installed in Gloucester in 1923.

Given as a gift to St. Stephen's Church by Mrs. Hugh Bancroft in memory of her mother, Jessie M. Barron, the first set of 23 bells was installed in the Gothic tower of the church in 1924. The event was significant enough for The New York Times to run a full-page photo of the church tower and carillon. A year later, President Calvin Coolidge was on Cohasset Common, listening to popular songs, including "Annie Laurie." Historians tell us, however, that the real purpose of his visit was not to listen to music but to inspect Clarence Barron's prize bull, worth some $25,000.

During the 1930s, crowds of up to 2,500 thronged Cohasset Common on Sunday afternoons. Extra trains were scheduled to bring vacationers from Boston and Maine. For residents of Cohasset today our carillon represents a unique heritage and continues to be a special treasure. "For bells are the voice of the church/They have tones that touch and search/The hearts of young and old." (Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.)

Among the guest recitalists this summer season are carillonneurs from the United States, Canada and Europe. Sally Slade Warner, carillonneur at St. Stephen's Church will play on Sunday Aug. 16. All are invited to bring lawn chairs or a blanket along with a picnic supper to enjoy on the Common while listening to the music of the bells. After each recital, a brief tour of the tower will be offered for those interested in seeing the instrument in the playing cabinet and the bells in the tower above.

Would you like to commemorate a special romantic or family event with the music of the bells? Please email Sally Slade Warner at salicus@verizon.net or Mary Kennedy at marymisha@aol.com.

Library Corner

Meet artist Sarah Roche on July 17

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road. For more information, call 781-383-1348.

Artist's Reception – Meet artist Sarah Roche at her art reception in the library from 6 to 9 p.m., on Friday, July 17. The reception is free. Roche's exhibition is presented by South Shore Art Center of Cohasset from July 1 through Aug. 31. Gallery hours are Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Wednesdays and Fridays, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Saturdays, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Independent Film Night – The library will show the independent film "Lake Tahoe" at 6 p.m., on Thursday, July 16. Free admission and free refreshments courtesy of the Friends of the Library.

Library Book Group – The library book group will discuss Kathleen Kent's book "The Heretic's Daughter" at 10 a.m., on Wednesday, July 29. All are welcome.

Looking for a Good Book to Read? – Visit the library's Web site at cohassetlibrary.org, to find summer reading suggestions. Click the Good Books tab to sign up for a free e-newsletter service. It's an easy way to be sure patrons don't miss out on the types of books they'd really like to read. People can subscribe to as many e-newsletters as they like and receive e-mail newsletters with brief descriptions of each title as well as links to the library's catalog to easily reserve titles of interest.

FOR CHILDREN

Summer reading adventure begins!

Boston Bruins Join Starship Adventure @ Your Library – The 2009 Massachusetts summer reading adventure, Starship Adventure @ Your Library, is sponsored by the Friends of Cohasset Library, the MRLS, and the MBLC. Register online or in person. Registration will continue throughout the early summer. Click "yes, I would like to participate in the Bruins Read program," on the registration page of the online summer reading program. The Bruins will be offering random weekly drawings for prizes. Also, join others in the meeting room for free Monday evening movies and Tuesday evening family performances. Click on calendar for a complete list of events and activities. Families that read together provide the strongest model for future readers.

Story and Craft – Space is still available in the 1 to 1:45 p.m. Story and Craft session. To register online go to the Web site at cohassetlibrary.org and click on Calendar. Next scroll to July 9 and click on register.

Monday is Family Movie Night – Join others in the Meeting Room at 6 p.m., on Monday, July 6, to see the movie "Bedtime Stories" rated PG. Adam Sandler, Keri Russell and Guy Pearce star in this movie from Walt Disney Studios. Directed by Adam Shankman, it is 99 minutes long. Skeeter Bronson, a hotel handyman, finds his life changed forever when the magical bedtime stories he tells his niece and nephew start to mysteriously come true. He attempts to take advantage of the miracle by incorporating his own aspirations into the tales but it's the kid's unexpected contributions that turn Skeeter's life upside down. Children must be accompanied by an adult. Movie site license sponsored by Friends of the Library and Cohasset Democratic Town Committee. Admission is free.

Tuesday Family Performance – Join others in the Meeting Room at 6 p.m., on July 7, for a presentation by The Dream Tale Puppets. The Dream Tale Puppets will perform "Rumpelstilskin." Free tickets are available. Seating is limited, so get tickets early. Sponsored by Friends of the Cohasset Library. All ages and communities welcome!

Drop In Story Time – Drop in Story Times will take place at 11 a.m., on Fridays, July 3, 10, 17, 24, 31 and Aug. 7, in the Story Room. All ages and communities welcome.

To view the complete summer calendar log onto the Web site at cohassetlibrary.org and click on Calendar.

Lions host fireworks on Sunday

There will be music, food, face painting and activities for kids.

Hingham Lions will host the South Shore's largest fireworks display – the annual Fourth of July Celebration at Hingham Harbor Bandstand from 6 to 10 p.m., on Sunday, July 5. Everyone is welcome.

There will be music, food, face painting and activities for kids. People who make food or novelty purchases are asked to consider buying only from vendors that have a Lion's Club Official Vendor designation, which ensures that a portion of the proceeds help fund the fireworks.

In addition, the Lions will collect all types and prescriptions of eyeglasses for recycling distribution.

thanks to our generous donors!

In addition to those donors listed on the CEF Donor List, the Cohasset Education Foundation would like to express its sincere appreciation and gratitude to those businesses and teachers that helped make this year's Spelling Bee and Tent Event possible with financial contributions and auction donations. A special thanks to all of the volunteers who make these events possible—we couldn't do it without you.

OPINION

Declaration of Independence, July 4, 1776

When in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident: That all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; that, to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed; that whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new government, laying its foundation on such principles, and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shown that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same object, evinces a design to reduce them under absolute despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such government, and to provide new guards for their future security. Such has been the patient sufferance of these colonies; and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former systems of government. The history of the present King of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute tyranny over these states. To prove this, let facts be submitted to a candid world.

He has refused his assent to laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the public good.

He has forbidden his governors to pass laws of immediate and pressing importance, unless suspended in their operation till his assent should be obtained; and, when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them.

He has refused to pass other laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of representation in the legislature, a right inestimable to them, and formidable to tyrants only.

He has called together legislative bodies at places unusual uncomfortable, and distant from the depository of their public records, for the sole purpose of fatiguing them into compliance with his measures.

He has dissolved representative houses repeatedly, for opposing, with manly firmness, his invasions on the rights of the people.

He has refused for a long time, after such dissolutions, to cause others to be elected; whereby the legislative powers, incapable of annihilation, have returned to the people at large for their exercise; the state remaining, in the mean time, exposed to all the dangers of invasions from without and convulsions within.

He has endeavored to prevent the population of these states; for that purpose obstructing the laws for naturalization of foreigners; refusing to pass others to encourage their migration hither, and raising the conditions of new appropriations of lands.

He has obstructed the administration of justice, by refusing his assent to laws for establishing judiciary powers.

He has made judges dependent on his will alone, for the tenure of their offices, and the amount and payment of their salaries.

He has erected a multitude of new offices, and sent hither swarms of officers to harass our people and eat out their substance.

He has kept among us, in times of peace, standing armies, without the consent of our legislatures.

He has affected to render the military independent of, and superior to, the civil power.

He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our Constitution and unacknowledged by our laws, giving his assent to their acts of pretended legislation:

For quartering large bodies of armed troops among us;

For protecting them, by a mock trial, from punishment for any murders which they should commit on the inhabitants of these states;

For cutting off our trade with all parts of the world;

For imposing taxes on us without our consent;

For depriving us, in many cases, of the benefits of trial by jury;

For transporting us beyond seas, to be tried for pretended offenses;

For abolishing the free system of English laws in a neighboring province, establishing therein an arbitrary government, and enlarging its boundaries, so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule into these colonies;

For taking away our charters, abolishing our most valuable laws, and altering fundamentally the forms of our governments;

For suspending our own legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever.

He has abdicated government here, by declaring us out of his protection and waging war against us.

He has plundered our seas, ravaged our coasts, burned our towns, and destroyed the lives of our people.

He is at this time transporting large armies of foreign mercenaries to complete the works of death, desolation, and tyranny already begun with circumstances of cruelty and perfidy scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages, and totally unworthy the head of a civilized nation.

He has constrained our fellow-citizens, taken captive on the high seas, to bear arms against their country, to become the executioners of their friends and brethren, or to fall themselves by their hands.

He has excited domestic insurrection among us, and has endeavored to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers the merciless Indian savages, whose known rule of warfare is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes, and conditions.

In every stage of these oppressions we have petitioned for redress in the most humble terms; our repeated petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A prince, whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a tyrant, is unfit to be the ruler of a free people.

Nor have we been wanting in our attentions to our British brethren. We have warned them, from time to time, of attempts by their legislature to extend an unwarrantable jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the circumstances of our emigration and settlement here. We have appealed to their native justice and magnanimity; and we have conjured them, by the ties of our common kindred, to disavow these usurpations which would inevitably interrupt our connections and correspondence. They too, have been deaf to the voice of justice and of consanguinity. We must, therefore, acquiesce in the necessity which denounces our separation, and hold them as we hold the rest of mankind, enemies in war, in peace friends.

We, therefore, the representatives of the United States of America, in General Congress assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the name and by the authority of the good people of these colonies solemnly publish and declare, That these United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, FREE AND INDEPENDENT STATES; that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British crown and that all political connection between them and the state of Great Britain is, and ought to be, totally dissolved; and that, as free and independent states, they have full power to levy war, conclude peace, contract alliances, establish commerce, and do all other acts and things which independent states may of right do. And for the support of this declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Special town meeting – voters denied

TO THE EDITOR:

The voters of Cohasset were denied their democratic right to vote last Thursday.

In May, a group of more than 400 Cohasset citizens signed petitions requiring the town to conduct a Special Town Meeting in order to vote on a "time-out" on the development of wind turbines in Cohasset.

The citizens sought to place a moratorium on the Wind Turbine Bylaw, which many feel is flawed and needs refinement (as evidenced by more than 1,000 Cohasset voters who signed an earlier petition on the issue). As it stands, the current bylaw potentially places the safety of citizens at risk while offering no financial benefit to the town or its people.

As advised by town officials, a time limit was put on the proposed moratorium. However, the night before, the Planning Board held a meeting, and claimed they were too "confused" by the stated time limit to provide a recommendation. The board continued its hearing until a later date — knowing that this inaction would by statute not allow the vote to go ahead the following night.

Instead, the only procedural option was to "adjourn" the vote to a later date. However, since word had been spread that the vote was off the agenda that night, many concerned citizens opted not to attend.

Those who were in attendance narrowly (134 to 113) voted against even allowing the moratorium vote to be taken at a later date – in effect, squashing the voice of the citizens to be heard on this issue.

If the vote on revisiting the bylaw had truly been taken and lost fair and square, that would have been one thing. But the way the events of that night unfolded seems like a dramatic failure of our local government to act fairly and appropriately on behalf of all of its citizens.

Whatever your stance on the development of turbines in Cohasset, it is troubling that three members of the Planning Board can deny several hundred citizens' their right to be heard.

Thank you Cohasset - another fantastic effort!

TO THE EDITOR:

Dean Phillips, who placed third in the Pro/Elite field on Sunday, said it best after the race, "Cohasset is the best triathlon in the state. The preparation, the setting, the community help, and all the volunteers make this race the standard every other race is shooting for."

Our quick success on the national circuit would not be possible if it weren't for the tremendous work of my Race Coordinators who share the same passion as I do to deliver a great race for the athletes and spectators. They include Sigrid Burnett, Bill Burnett Sr., Suzy Doherty, Anthony Everett, Des Havlicek, Matthew Herndon, Mike Hughes, Karen Lyons, Joe Mahoney, Catherine O'Callaghan, Cal O'Callaghan, Donald St. Sauveur, Kate Simmons, Deb Thomas, and Steve Upson.

I am very lucky to have the highly talented Cohasset safety/medical team on my side. People like Chief Silvia, Chief Hussey, Lt. Quigley, Lt. Dockray, Harbormaster Gibbons and their staff are first class.

I owe a very special thanks to the Sandy Beach Association, the Department of Public Works, and the Little Harbor crews who used valuable resources and time to ensure the beach and roads were in safe condition for the triathlon.

The triathlon is a fantastic example of one town pulling together to showcase the best it has to offer. I have no doubt that year over year the triathlon will continue to bring commerce to our town and build our reputation as a "must see" stop for visitors on the south shore.

We all should feel proud of the incredible event we delivered on Sunday.

Thank you from the bottom of my heart.

Reclaiming roads in Common area

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Little Harbor Project Paving Finally, the gods prevailed and we were able to get some of the small private roads that had been dirt for far too long paved late last week. There are two areas we are currently planning for the next paving projects. These are the Common and North Main Street to Jerusalem Road as well as Nichols Road including the side roads off of Nichols.

Nichols and its side roads already have their base paving, so all that is needed it the final topcoat of asphalt. This should be a relatively easy paving job, except for the short-term inconvenience to the area residents. But, we will notify the residents when we get close to doing the paving.

The Common and North Main Street area is another matter altogether. These roads are in such bad shape that we cannot merely pave over them. These roads will need to be reclaimed. Reclaiming is a time consuming process whereby the road surface is ground up completely, including several inches of the area below the paving and totally homogenized. An amount of these "grindings" is removed roughly equivalent to the amount of paving to be added. This way, the final road will be essentially the same height when the final paving is completed. If some of the ground up material were not removed the road would end up being higher and would be higher than the curbing in places. Also, if the excess material is not removed, road storm drainage patterns would be changed for the worse.

After the road is ground and excess material is removed, the roads will be graded and rolled to make a flat hard surface very suitable for repaving. Only after the rolling is completed can the base coat of paving be laid down. This week, working with the organization doing the reclaiming, it was estimated that the reclaiming, grading and rolling might take about eight days. The hope is to do the reclamation in a little more than a week and the paving, estimated to take two days, in the following week. As we've said before this type of work is not stealth work. It is just in-your-face work that cannot be avoided. For the most part, through traffic will probably be detoured to Ripley Road. Provisions will be made for Town Hall and other on the Common accesses during the paving operation.

The schedule for paving the Common area and N. Main St. depends entirely on the reclaim contractor's schedule. We would like to do the reclamation starting the week of July 27th, based on preliminary plans.

Little Harbor Project Sewer Testing – Testing of the new sewer lines is nearly completed. We have a drawing of the Little Harbor Project area where dotted lines show where testing needs to be completed as of early this week. (Editor's note: unfortunately, the drawing would not reproduce well enough for the paper). By mid week, we learned that the North Main Street segment has successfully completed testing. It is expected that several of these locations might complete their testing by the end of this week.

North Main St. Testing Site.

Reclaiming is a time consuming process whereby the road surface is ground up completely, including several inches of the area below the paving and totally homogenized.

In the photo you can see a typical sewer test set-up on North Main Street. In the test, the new sewer line is pressurized with water and must hold that pressure for a time period specified by the engineers. If the pressure does not hold for the specified time the contractor then locates the leak and fixes it. However, location the leak is sometimes not as easy as it sounds. Sometimes the tester can tell where the leak is by using a sensitive listening device to hear where the water leak is. Other more difficult leaks can sometimes be found by charging the sewer line with helium gas and using a helium detector to isolate the leak location. Occasionally, there is a lot of digging involved to accurately locate the leak.

You may have noticed small dirt areas several feet square in the roadways during the past several weeks. These were areas where the sewer pipes were excavated to examine them for a suspected leak. Fortunately, most of these older dirt areas were patched with asphalt for the Cohasset Triathlon.

An Oversight – We're sorry, but in last week's column we inadvertently omitted the fact that the Cohasset Economic Development Committee contributed to the beautiful landscaping job on the Town Parking Lot island. In the spirit of full disclosure, the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce initiated the project in collaboration with the Cohasset Economic Development Committee. Several chamber members volunteered their time over two different days. Karen Kirkendall, Sean Cunning and Sean's daughter, Molly, Matt Cunningham, Lisa Hewitt-Dick, David Bigley, and Darilynn Evans worked alongside Benjie Watson of Windward Landscaping to prepare and plant the island. Benjie finished the plantings, mulched the garden, and cleaned up the debris right in time for the beginning of the Arts Festival. Thanks to everyone!

Rehab in a nursing home

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

The girl on the telephone assured me that for the purposes of her survey it wasn't necessary for me to give her my name but she needed some other bits of information to properly classify me on her chart.

"How old are you?" she asked.

"I don't know," I said, "but I'm surrounded by old people so I must be pretty old myself."

She didn't think I was taking her survey with the seriousness that was its due.

"I'm not," I said.

She thanked me politely and hung up.

When was the last time you received a phone call from a telemarketer while lying flat on your back in bed in a nursing and rehabilitation home?

That's where I spent the last month or so after a new set of spark plugs were inserted to keep my carburetor running on time and a few other items were taken care of as long as the engine cover was off.

If any of you guys are thinking about stashing away your old folks in a nursing and rehabilitation home, be aware that there is an art to living in one and the sooner you learn the ropes, the better.

The second day of my stay, a friend came by to visit. She was an old hand at the nursing home game, having visited her mother weekly there for some three and a half years.

"Do you need anything?" she asked.

"Well, I asked for a glass of ginger ale about an hour ago," I said.

"Let me see," she said, and she went out.

She was back in about five minutes with a large glass of ice, a quart bottle of ginger ale, a jar of peanut butter, a cup of ice cream, and an assortment of crackers and Lorna Doones.

"Anything else?"

"I asked for a telephone when I came in yesterday."

"Let me see."

She was back in about 10 minutes.

"They're getting it," she said and, before her visit was over, a maintenance man was installing my telephone. Nobody had told him I wanted a phone.

"They think you have dementia," explained my friend. "They think you'll ask for something and then forget about it. They think everybody here has dementia. You have to keep after them."

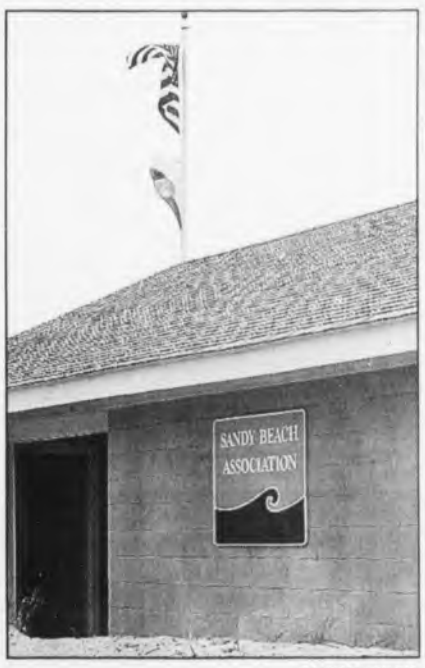
There it is: the key to living in a nursing and rehabilitation home. While you may be there for the rehabilitation part, the staff if there for the nursing. The sooner you can work out a compromise, the sooner life in a nursing and rehabilitation home becomes . . . well . . . livable.

And, oh, yes, the telephone . . .

The first call I received on my eagerly awaited instrument was from the telemarketer, which must tell you something about priorities in America in the 21st century.

Only I can't figure out what.

Special thanks to all those who help



SANDY BEACH HAPPENINGS

PATRICIA MURPHY

This week, the Sandy Beach Association wishes to thank the many people who help us prepare the beach for our summer enjoyment. Ross Rosano does a fabulous job of cleaning the beach. This year was exceptional, the sand was plentiful and we looked forward to a glorious summer.

Didn't quite play out that way. The Nor'easter that arrived last week created a beach covered in seaweed. With the Triathalon scheduled for the weekend, continued rains and difficult winds, Ross still managed to make the beach as user friendly as possible. This second cleaning means two bills! Please try to remember that when you write that check to SBA this year (and send it to Box 285). Thanks to Jack Livingstone, who joked that our message was always "Drop everything and get down to Sandy Beach." Jack has been terrific. Carl Sestito and the highway department also go above and beyond for us constantly.

Our fire department responded to our need for a ladder to get the lanyard repaired on our flagpole in time for Old Glory to wave along with the Sandy Beach flag for opening day. A hook and ladder truck arrived and had things under control in no time. Moments later they were on their way to an emergency call. The police department is also always ready to assist and have been called upon often throughout the years. We are very lucky to have these brave men and women in our town.

A very special thanks goes out to Graham Waste this year. They have donated the large containers with their logo, which are to be used for RECYCLING ONLY. They are large enough to hold pizza boxes and we do hope all will be very careful to put ONLY RECYCLABLES in them. Graham Waste will also provide pick-up as long as there is no trash mixed in. Please help us on that. And do be sure to visit the bathhouse.

Last year's renovations: the electric hand dryers and new stainless sinks, fresh paint, a new roof and new electrical service have been completed with a newly finished floor. CC Nightscape created the look of a large tiled floor and added his own artistic touch of the Sandy Beach logo at each entrance. Our thanks again to all who support us each year. Nancy and Wallace St. John of Eagle Flag, who even deliver, David Hassan for his signage, the water department which always comes to our aid with our plumber, Vinnie Cogliano, Paul Davis, who keeps our bath house working and Bill Cavanaro, who has painted our trash barrels as a donation for many years. Of course without you, our beach goers and donors, none of this could happen. We hope that the sun will be out soon and that we will all be able to grab our books, chairs, towels and sunscreen and head for the beach.

Patricia Murphy is a Trustee of the Sandy Beach Association.

Sharing memories about Linda Elworthy

SENIOR SCENE

LOUISE MULLEN

The beautiful memorial Mass and celebration of the life of Linda Elworthy was extremely well attended by those whose lives she had touched. When the Mass was over the congregants gathered in St. Anthony's parish hall where they partook of refreshments and exchanged memories of Linda. She would have been pleased.

At one of our luncheon meetings, Tom Wigmore of the police department introduced Noelle Merchant, a representative from the state 911 department. She spoke about enhanced 911 calls, explaining how the system works and when, why and how to use it. When a caller is connected, the person may then punch #1 for police, #2 for fire, and #3 for the ambulance. This is particularly useful for people who cannot speak for some reason. The equipment distribution program provides free phones for the visually and hearing impaired.

When the Mass was over the congregants gathered in St. Anthony's parish hall where they partook of refreshments and exchanged memories of Linda. She would have been pleased.

The Cohasset Police Association treated our seniors to a plentiful barbecue in recognition of Father's Day. We enjoyed cheeseburgers, hot dogs and all the fixins'. After lunch Chief Hussey introduced several members of his department, telling what their specialties are.

On another day, lunch was provided by Matthew Cunningham, and Securitas Financial group of Hingham. Matt is a Cohasset resident and financial advisor from the group. In his talk, he gave some good advice about protecting our assets. Matt offers his services to Cohasset seniors, free of charge. Just call the Center to set up an appointment.

The Life Care Center in Scituate invited seniors in surrounding towns to their facility to enjoy lunch. We filled our two vans for the drive down. We were treated to quite a feast served family style. During lunch we were entertained by a young man and woman who sang a variety of songs, changing costumes to fit each tune. Some songs were nostalgic and others made us laugh.

On the last day of the Coffee Café a full breakfast was served in celebration. The Lightkeepers Cottage was just about filled to capacity. Thanks and applause were given to all those who make this weekly event possible. The Café is closing for the summer season. Watch for the re-opening in September when you may again enjoy the excellent coffee and tasty pastry while chatting with friends old and new.

We are so fortunate to have a Council of Elder Affairs that plans events where we can get together to learn something new, reminisce about the old, and to enjoy lots of healthy laughter.

Louise Smullen's column runs monthly in the Cohasset Mariner. To contact the Senior Center, call 781-383-9112.

Launch party, auction July 11

SAILING CLUB

ELIZABETH MURRY

On Saturday July 11, the Cohasset Sailing Club (CSC) is hosting its annual Summer Launch Party. All adult family members and friends of the CSC are cordially invited to attend — you don't need to be an active member and past members are especially welcome, as are future ones. Perhaps you have recently moved to town, and have toddlers that sooner than you think will be ready to take sailing lessons? The festivities, which take place at the Clubhouse on one of the most beautiful harbors in New England, begin at 6 p.m. and will carry on to 11 p.m. The dinner spread, which is centered around a lobster and BBQ chicken feast, will be served between 6:30 and 8:30 p.m. A special treat this year: the cool sound of the Cohasset Jazz Combo featuring three CSC Instructors, Ian Porter, August Oddleifson, and Conor Ofsthun, plus special guest, Head Instructor, John DeWaal, during pre-dinner.

As some of you may already know, the launch party is the CSC's main social and fundraising event, and features a silent auction to benefit the club. Donations for auction items are actively sought: in past years these have ranged from handmade jewelry, gift certificates, tickets to Celtics, Patriots, and Red Sox games, golf outings, gourmet dinners, child sitting services, yard care and lawn mowing services, luscious desserts, sunset cruises, sailing lessons, boat services, paintings, vacation home loans—you name it. No gift is too big or too small, as all proceeds go to benefit what we humbly yet truthfully consider one of the town's best institutions, one that makes sailing accessible and affordable for all.

Jim Porter, our just-retired commodore, Jim Porter and hence the newest commodore emeritus, is the chief auctioneer. Remember that scene in "Gone with the Wind" (the film is celebrating its 70th anniversary this year), where Doc Meade is running the charity ball, Rhett bids something like a $1,000 in gold (you finance types can figure out the 2009 equivalent of the 1860s price) to dance with the widowed Scarlett, and all of Atlanta is agog? The point is to be creative, as this is our Glorious Cause. Contact Jim (Doc) Porter at 383-2029 or at jporter@bluefishagency.net.

Tickets are $50 per person payable to the Cohasset Sailing Club, and are available by calling Joyce Driscoll at 383-0122 or Claudia McKeon at 383-6125. Tickets are selling briskly, but there is still room — yet please don't put this off until the last minute, and make life difficult for Joyce and Claudia.

So bring your checkbook as well as your beverage of choice, and come meet new friends and old on the CSC's new and verdant front yard, which is just a harbinger of good things to come. The CSC will be celebrating its 50th anniversary next year — stayed tuned for that shindig and regard this one as the dress rehearsal.

National Grid has begun gas main work

National Grid has begun work on its natural gas infrastructure between numbers 112 through 118 Beach St. and number 241 Jerusalem Road through the intersection of Atlantic Avenue/ Construction is scheduled to continue through July 10, and July 31, respectively.

Approximately 3,000 feet of gas main will be replaced as part of National Grid's infrastructure upgrade. This project will improve both reliability and safety as part of the company's overall plan for investing more than $200 million in main replacements across its service area through March 2010.

National Grid's contractor will perform the work between 7:30 a.m. and 4 p.m., Monday through Friday, making every effort to minimize disruptions to homes and businesses along the route. The company will employ traffic management plans and police details as appropriate in coordination with town officials and public safety representatives.

Customers can expect brief service interruptions upon completion of the work, as homes and businesses are connected to the new gas main. Owners will be notified prior to any necessary digging on private property.

Residents with questions or concerns about this project may contact National Grid Community Relations Coordinator Peter Nagle at 781-907-2211.

Board members talk about CSCR

By Isabel Robinson
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Center now serves as a safe location for students to do valuable research while experiences the joys of summertime and being outside.

Every summer dozens of students head down to Cohasset's Center for Student Coastal Research to conduct experiments, gather data, and enjoy themselves in the process. They spend time with friends while getting to know more about the beautiful Cohasset environment. Working with CSCR has become a routine for many young people in the area; the Center now serves as a safe location for students to do valuable research while experiences the joys of summertime and being outside. And there to support these students every step of the way is a group of adults that give up their time to assist in the research, hunt down new lab equipment, acquire necessary funding, and keep CSCR running smoothly. These people are the board members of CSCR.

• Why did you join CSCR?

Becoming a board member at CSCR allows me to give back to the community through an organization whose efforts are aligned with something important to me: understanding and protection our coastal habitat. – Gregg Hoffman

• Do any of the projects or events that you've been a part of at CSCR stand out as particularly significant to you?

Junior Marsh Monitors! It was important to me to bring the theory of classroom math and science lessons to the outside world and to help make the connections for younger students (ages 11-13) between the protocols and theories and the practice of science in "real" life. – Mac Haran

• As an adult, what have you learned through working with the students?

I learned that CSCR students are ready to take on many so-called adult responsibilities; e.g. taking and reporting reliable data and diligently managing the financial end. – Mike Dick

• How has CSCR impacted you personally?

CSCR provides me with a completely new direction to grow into and a new circle of people to interact with. CSCR allows me to be a part of an innovative student-faculty-community program that yields direct benefit to the Town. My role on the Board allows me to work and collaborate with Townspeople whom I might never have known so well. – Mike Dick

• How has CSCR impacted the Town of Cohasset?

As CSCR matures as an organization with the demonstrated ability to produce scientifically valid data, the town of Cohasset can increasingly take advantage of its resources and capacities. The town, the engineers with whom the town enters into monitoring and assessment contracts, and the town's agents, such as Veolia Water (that runs the waste water treatment plant) are increasingly able to engage CSCR students as project partners. As CSCR students become more proficient at meeting the town's needs, CSCR grows as a significant resource to the town of Cohasset, at little or no cost, which has an incredible impact on the town. – Jack Buckley

• In your opinion, is the Town of Cohasset aware enough of environmental issues? What is CSCR doing to increase awareness of these issues?

I think the town officials are aware, but I don't think average citizens know enough. The State of the Harbor report currently in progress should help increase awareness. – Ann Thomae

• Is anything at CSCR being offered for kids who want to be involved but are not as scientifically inclined?

Yes, CSCR Staff offers many outlets for students who want to be involved with the management side of the program, such as doing data base work, mapping, writing, finances, etc. – A. Thomae

• Why should adults become involved with CSCR?

CSCR is a fantastic opportunity for adults who are driven to get involved. It is a great place to interact with and teach students, and the Center itself is very unique, being in such an ideal coastal location. The research done is not only fascinating but important. It reminds us of how beautiful yet fragile our environment is. – Carsten Haber

• Why should students become involved with CSCR?

If you have an interest and appreciation of the beautiful coastline we're so lucky to live close to, if you like to learn and use what you learn while doing meaningful work that counts, if you're interested in being part of real research CSCR is for you. This is a great place for kids who are active learners and would like to be responsible for their own learning. Also it's a great place to see practical uses for science. That's a piece that's important to me; helping to give kids this kind of opportunity. –Jackie Fitts

HEALTH NOTES

Staying informed about change

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

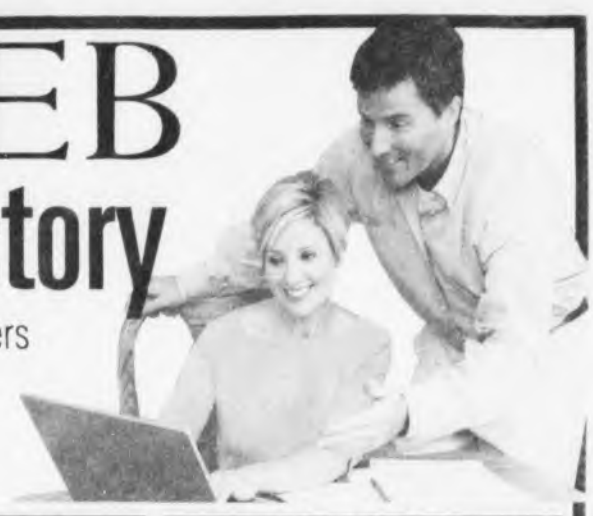
The increasingly dizzying pace of change is having far reaching implications on everyone old and young; events that would have been impossible only a few years ago. One only needs to pick up the paper, which may soon no longer be of paper, but on a video screen or a hand-held device. Even the Internet is showing its age. And the language we speak and read is increasingly becoming a series of abbreviations and catch phrases. Premiums meaning extra cost for luxury items are now being supplemented by fremiums, and other new verbal constructs. Change, originally brought by individuals to small groups, using available tools are now mainly effected using blogs (shortened from Web logs) and other electronic means, sometimes to thousands of recipients.

Only last March did we address change in this column. Then, the emphasis was on the Town Public Works program to fix sewers, water and stormwater/drainage with some mention of a needed change involving the acceptance of nuclear energy for electric power. Today, we're again discussing change because developments in the medical field may have an effect on how we use the information we receive from medical professionals.

Modern communication methods: cell phones, podcasts, etc. use practices that place many who need definitions to remain static for a period of time at considerable disadvantage. Nowhere is modern language change more apparent than in the health field.

An example is the change in meaning of the definition of diagnosed conditions such as Alzheimer's, long considered a form of dementia, but labeled by current usage in the popular press as an incurable disease. Now that medications are available to mediate Alzheimer's, many, using the new popular description as incurable, fail to get treatment and give up, thus becoming self-fulfilling prophecies.

Another example is the labeling of products. The old definitions and standards by the Food and Drug Administration were used to define illnesses for populations of consumers having entirely different characteristics from those now using the labeled products. For example: ibuprofen, a popular nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory is now considered less safe than formerly presumed, so now, the doctor's advice "take two ibuprofen and call me in the morning" now may no longer be correct.



And now, plastic bottles of drinking water. Such bottles have labels, but miss warnings about plastic additives. From data published by the Federal Center for Disease Control: "According to Kashtock and Breder (1980), ethylene glycol can migrate into food simulants from polyethylene terephthalate (PET) bottles used in the packaging of carbonated beverages. The compound was detected at a concentration of about 0.1 parts per million - after 6 months of storage at 32 °C." The authors stated that the source of ethylene glycol is the small amount of un-reacted chemical in the polyethylene terephthalate polymer. The majority of the world's PET production is for synthetic fibers with bottle production accounting for around 30 percent of global demand. In textile applications, PET is generally referred to as simply "polyester" while "PET" is used most often to refer to packaging drinking bottle applications."

Taken internally, a cup of ethylene glycol at 50 percent dilution from a car radiator can kill an individual in a few hours. No studies are yet complete on the amount of ethylene glycol entering the environment from plastic water bottles, nor yet have studies begun to measure the effect. Can you imagine how much PET now resides in landfills worldwide?

Countless other examples of change are all around us. From the standpoint of the maintenance of good health, it's no longer only necessary to monitor one's health during the presence of possible threats like Lyme disease from wood ticks or vaccination for measles, but we also need to give consideration to breaking news about our environment. Obviously one can become unstable from consistent worry, so the watchword as always is to keep informed and make reasonable decisions based on the information you receive.

Thanks for 'prayerful thoughts'

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the Cohasset Elder Affairs, I would like to thank everyone for the outpouring of prayerful thoughts and condolences that we received at Linda Elworthy's passing. The support and kindness to our senior community has been overwhelming. The office staff and volunteers at the Center will continue to run the programs until a new director is appointed. Linda has set our course, and we will keep the integrity of the department with dedicated energy. She really did make a difference.

Liquor at golf club

To the Board of Selectmen:
Editor's note: Mr. Lincoln provided the Mariner with a copy of his letter for publication.

I have just read about your decision to allow alcoholic beverages on the golf course at the Cohasset Golf Club.

I am shocked and amazed that you would even consider such action let alone vote positively. This action flies in the face of the long tradition of one of the finest games ever played.

I am even more shocked and amazed that the Cohasset Golf Club would even think about putting a request like this before your Board.

The consequences and ramifications of this decision I do not want to even consider.

Conservation of energy illusions

TO THE EDITOR:

Underlying all the pro and con verbiage about the wind turbine bylaw is an assumption that is false. The false assumption is that wind and other renewable energy sources will fulfill our energy needs, sufficiently reduce our dependence on foreign oil, and generally solve our energy problems.

Certainly we should strive to get all the energy from wind and solar that is feasible, after consideration of economics, availability of sites and transmission facilities, environmental impact etc

But renewables will provide only a portion, perhaps ultimately as much as 20 percent, of the nation's energy requirements for heating and lighting our homes and businesses and factories, for manufacturing and industrial processing, and for transportation (which will become increasingly electrified, perhaps rapidly so). Government mandates for efficiency, percent of energy supplied from favored sources etc., have no magic power to achieve some unreasonable target; many factors will trump wishful thinking and political posturing.

In the end, the nation must face up to the need for hard choices, such as more nuclear energy, more offshore drilling, perhaps more Alaskan oil. We will not eliminate our dependence on foreign oil, but we can perhaps avoid much increase in dependence by being realistic about the potential of wind and solar, and being realistically welcoming of more nuclear energy. It is unrealistic to expect coal to be abandoned; all we can do is try to burn it with less horrific environmental impact. (That's called "clean" coal).

The Asiatic nations are exhibiting admirable pragmatism in their energy planning. Our economic, social and political health depend on similar pragmatism, and depends on conservation of wishful thinking about the potential of renewables and about the potential of improvements in energy efficiency.

Support for Arts Festival appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of South Shore Art Center, we'd like to thank the entire community of Cohasset for its support of the 54th annual Arts Festival. We could not pull off such an undertaking without truly extraordinary support from the Town and its residents: a special thank you to Bob Egan, Jennifer Oram, Bill Griffin, Carl Sestito, Sgt. Quigley and Chief Hussey, and everyone at the Town Hall, DPW and Police and Fire Departments who help to make our jobs easier.

Shining thanks to our Platinum Sponsors: Lemon Lime Aveda Lifestyle Salon and Yachting Dog Company; Gold Sponsors: The Rogers Law Firm and Boston Private Bank & Trust Company; Silver Sponsors: Abbott Homes/ The Cook Estate, Dean & Hamilton Realtors, and Image Resolutions; and Bronze Sponsors: Roomscapes Luxury Design Center and South Shore Music Circus.

An additional thank you to Atlantic Bagel, L.P. Carpenter Interiors, Inc., Cohasset Collision Center, Heidi Condon/HC Design, Conway Insurance Agency, Flemings of Cohasset Village, Hingham Mutual Fire Insurance Company, Goodwin Graphics, Graham Waste Services, Hingham Institution for Savings, Pilgrim Bank, Party by Design, Plymouth County Convention & Visitors Bureau, and Linda & Glenn Pratt.

Thank you to the Art Center friends who hosted and attended dinners as part of Saturday's "Festival on the Town" and to Kara Bianchi and Andrea Hillier for their careful oversight of the many details that made the evening a great success.

Finally, a monumental thank you to Diane Shipp and her family, the hundreds of volunteers, and an amazing youth crew who kept things running smoothly throughout the weekend. The pride everyone shares in this special event is remarkable and allows us to enjoy every minute of Festival weekend. Save the dates for 2010—June 19-20th.

Farm issues in focus

Holly Hill begins third summer of film series

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Watching television and movies is usually an inside activity. But, leave it to the people at Holly Hill Farm to bring a typically inside activity outdoors.

On several evenings this summer Holly Hill Farm will once again turn its tomato barn into a verifiable movie screen. The "Films on the Farm" series, which began last week, is in its third year.

Farm Manager Ben Wolbach spent some time in the off-season researching this year's films. All the films concern different aspects and issues facing food and agriculture in this 21st century. From beekeepers to healthful school lunches to fair trade coffee, the films chosen this year run the gamut of local, national and international concerns

"I chose films that had a good message, were well-made and entertaining as well," said Wolbach. The next film night is Wednesday, July 15 and will feature three shorter length films.

Holly Hill Farm at 236 Jerusalem Road is an organic farm, but home to two separate yet interrelated entities. It is a for-profit business dedicated to growing high quality organic vegetables. The farm is located in the heart of Cohasset on about four acres. The non-profit side, the Friends of the Holly Hill Farm, is devoted to protecting open space and running educational programs using the resources of Holly Hill Farm.

"The film series is really a nice way to put what we do at the farm and in educational programs into a broader context of agriculture in the US and the world," Wolback said.

The films' subject and themes highlight and reinforce what Holly Hill is trying to accomplish — getting away from pesticides, giving people good, healthy food and being a positive part of the community.

Sometimes, Wolbach said, the viewing of a well-made film can be more impactful than anything else.

The Films on the Farm series has a loyal following and many show up at dusk to socialize and get prime seating. The audience draws locally and from the South Shore. Wolbach said there is a couple from Quincy who often come a little early, purchase vegetables and walk around grounds.

"Some people really make an evening out of it," he said. If good weather prevails, the audience is visited by the Nona's Ice Cream truck.

The Holly Hill Farm staff hopes the weather will begin to cooperate for the sake of their crops and the film series. Due to rain the first feature film was show inside the tomato barn. The event goes on rain or shine.

Multiple short flicks will be shown at the upcoming "Short Films Night" on Wed., July 15. "Homegrown Revolution" is set in the midst of urban Pasadena, California, where for more than 20 years a family harvests three tons of organic food annually from their one-tenth of an acre garden.

"Each spring we have the widely popular plant sale so I know a lot of people are growing vegetables in their backyard...this film is pretty inspirational if you're looking to take your garden to the next level," said Wolbach.

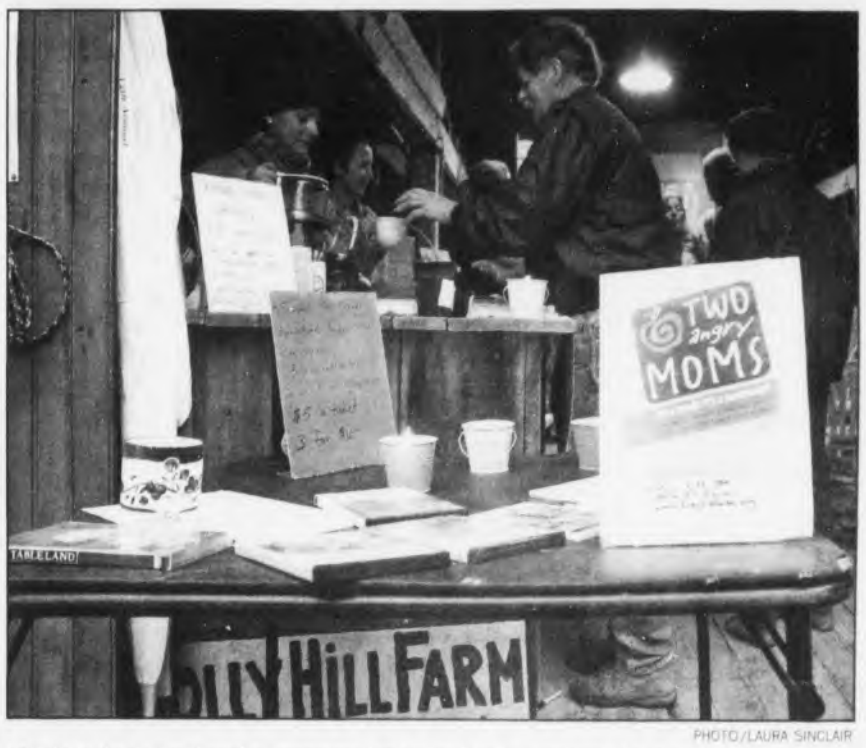
"La Raccolta" follows a New York City chef to Italy where a small olive oil company still does things the old-fashioned way — harvesting the olives by hand. "Pollen Nation" follows the journey of a third-generation beekeeper and the challenges facing that industry.

On Wednesday, Aug. 5, the film "Black Gold" explores the international problem of the price of coffee. The documentary traces one Ethiopian man's fight for a fair price for his coffee crop.

While this film doesn't deal with eating locally or organically, Wolbach said as many, if not most, are coffee drinkers, it is something to be cognizant of.

The series finale, which may include a potluck "locavore" celebration with dishes made with locally grown ingredients, features a documentary chronicling the filmmaker's journey as he visits small farms, wineries, and artisan producers across North America.

Attendees are invited to come early with a picnic dinner and bring lawn chairs or a blanket to optimize comfort. Long sleeves, pants and insect repellant may make the viewing more comfortable, advised Wolbach.



Holly Hill Farm's farmstand is currently open Saturdays and Sundays from 11a.m. to 6p.m. They will be open Wednesdays from 11a.m. to 6p.m. beginning in late July once they start having more crop available. Holly Hill also is a regular vendor at the Thursday Farmer's Market on Cohasset Common, 2:30 to 6:30p.m.

Thanks to the rain and cool temperatures hot tea and coffee were served to the guests attending Films On The Farm night at Holly Hill Farm on June 24.

Holly Hill Farm Education Directors, Janice McPhillips of Hingham and John Belber of Scituate, chat outside the barn before the showing of the film "Two Angry Moms" during Films on the Farm night.

Holly Hill Farm Manager, Hannah Hobbs Wolbach, pours some hot tea for a guest attending the showing of "Two Angry Moms." Due to the rain on June 24 the film was shown inside the barn rather than on the outside wall of the tomato barn.

Holly Hill Farm Manager, Ben Wolbach, speaks about upcoming films to members of the audience attending the Films On The Farm night.

Legion storms through makeup schedule

Rain changing look of the season

By Mark Ducharme
CORRESPONDENT

No one can blame Scituate/Cohasset American Legion Baseball coach Greg Taylor and his staff for being glued to the Weather Channel these days.

Heading into last weekend, Post 118 was knee deep in makeup games as they prepared for the final weeks of the 22-game regular season that concludes July 12.

"We had played seven games and had eight rained out before last Friday," said Taylor. "As far as the pitching staff goes, it is going to be difficult to say the least with the eight rained out games."

Taylor knows that his team will not have many off days left during the regular season.

It will not make an easy situation for Post 118 as well as the rest of the teams in Zone 6 East.

"With that many rain outs," said Taylor "We have been forced to schedule games basically every night of the week with some doubleheaders. With that type of schedule and players being extremely busy in the summer time, we are going to have to send guys to the mound that may not have pitched since Little League. At this point the coaching staff is going to have to be very creative and pray for no more rain."

Two young fans share a hug with KO during Sunday's Rox game at Campanelli Stadium in Brockton.

Fun day at the ballpark

POPPIN' OFF

WILLIAM WASSERSUG

Don't let the big ad at the top of the page, or the bigger one at the bottom fool you, this column is totally and completely unrelated and independent of any advertising you might see here.

This column is about fun, and a day at the ballpark that was just that ... fun.

Sunday, I took my wife, daughter and a friend of hers to the Brockton Rox and it was everything you could ask for when it comes to a very reasonably priced day out for the family.

Now to explain one thing. Katy, my little one is not a real sports fan.

She loves going to games with me, but doesn't watch much when she goes.

She's a socializer and she likes to make friends and play while the game goes on.

With her friend along, she was able to explore the stadium, including a children's zone with a big slide, a batting game and a pitching game.

The kids area is just downstairs on the first base side, and one thing has changed since the last time I went to a game.

There's now a net overhead, protecting from foul balls that at one time used to rain down on the area.

Good idea.

But there were more things to enjoy, like a personal touch.

After the game, fans were invited to come down and run the bases, or meet the team and get autographs.

Almost the entire team was

College golfer learns patience is par for the course

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

Sarah Whitney is a busy young woman.

The junior-to-be at William & Mary College and a standout golfer has a full calendar before returning to classes in Williamsburg, Va., in September.

Whitney is working two jobs this summer. She works in the pro shop at South Shore Country Club in her native Hingham and is interning at the New England PGA helping to run its tournaments around the region.

She is also playing in several high-caliber tournaments. Plus, she is also organizing the South Shore Junior Girls Open for youngsters. It will be held this summer at the Hingham course.

Before heading off for summer vacation, Whitney wrapped up her sophomore year in college with an exclamation point.

At the Colonial Athletic Association Championships at Pine Mountain, Ga., Whitney finished fifth. She credits patience for her success.

"Patience," said Whitney, 'since graduating from high school, it's the biggest lesson I've learned. Before, when I made a bogey, I'd get upset and think I'd have to birdie on the next hole. If I didn't, I'd put even more pressure on myself to birdie the next hole. That never worked."

During the past season and during the CAA Championships, patience made a huge difference in her scoring.

"It seemed we played a lot of the times in bad weather this year. I think we wore rain suits more than we didn't wear rain suits. It seems like we had the umbrellas out all the time. When you play in weather like that, you have to have patience," said Whitney. "You have to understand that you can control only the things you can control."

That patience paid off. "I shot my career round, a 71," said Whitney. "And I didn't get off to a good start. I was a couple of shots over par early in the round. I think I made a couple of bad chips on the same hole. But I didn't let it upset or excite me. I just kept playing. I didn't let anything get to me. I just played the next shot and focused on nothing else and the next thing I knew, I shot my career round."

It was a good spring for Whitney. She had two top-10 finishes and four top-20 finishes. Whitney led the Tribe at the Kiawah Island Classic, tying her then career-best score with a 74 in the final round. Whitney climbed 14 spots up the leader board to finish in a tie for 25th at the highly competitive tournament. Whitney finished in a tie for sixth at the Spider Invitational and also placed in a tie for ninth at the Yale Intercollegiate. She was named to the conference All-Star team.

STAFF PHOTO / MARK GARDNER

Some day Sarah Whitney would like to be the commissioner of the LPGA. She has the patience for the job.

When she returned to Massachusetts for summer vacation, she qualified for the US Women's Public Links Championship, which was held June 22-27 at Red Tail GC in Ayer. Whitney finished third at the sectional qualifier held at the Cyprian Keyes Golf Club in West Boylston. Not only did she qualify for the tournament, she advanced to the match-play phase of the championship.

This is the second straight summer that Whitney, a Hingham native, has qualified for the major amateur tournament. Last July, Whitney qualified for and played in the U.S Women's Amateur.

She's not really thinking about the LPGA Tour. Whitney might give the Future's tour a shot, a minor-league circuit for aspiring professional players. "But I think I have to get a lot better. You can't shoot 75s. You have to do a lot better. I'll wait and see what happens. If I'm shooting better numbers by the time I graduate in two years, I might give it a try. But if I'm not shooting low numbers, I'm not going to try. But I'd like a career in golf."

Yes, she would like to be a part of the LPGA, but not necessarily as a player. "My ambition – and it's a big one – is to someday become the commissioner of the LPGA."

Whitney wants a career in golf. "I'd like to be a tournament director someday."

She knows how to organize an event. She operates the South Shore Junior Girls Invitational. Last year the inaugural tournament was a success.

This year she is hoping to expand the event. "It's scheduled for Aug. 13 at South Shore. It's for girls 6 to 18. The younger girls will play holes that are about 75 yards," said Whitney, who received a $1,000 grant for the tournament. "We're sending out applications to all the public courses in Massachusetts. We'll also have applications at the pro shop here at South Shore Country Club. We'll have some good prizes for long drives and closest to the pins. It's going to be fun."

Braintree Open takes flight

Dennis McCleary and Paul Dechambeau were Flight A winners shooting a 68 gross and a 62 net, the best scores in both categories in the flight. Dave Cevolani and Anthony Bissanti (70 gross, 63 net) were second, Nick Dunn and Chris Psaros (72-68) were third, followed by Joe Duggan and Todd Ruggere (73-65), Tom McKinnon and JB Hynes (73-66), Walter Cartwright Jr. and Scott Cartwright (73/67), Kevin Carrozza and Rich McGovern (74-70) and Ray Dicicco and Peter Cochrane (75-69).

Joe Buonopane and Eddie Murphy won Flight B with a 77-58 gross and net score. They were followed by Bob Desreuisseau and Mac Chase (81-67), Bob Bagnall and Jim Bagnall (81-67), Tobey Johnson and Paul Scarnici (80-67), Joe Olivere and Jackson Foster (82-68), Al Camara and Larry Talieri (84-68), Bob Fleming Sr. and Bob Fleming Jr. (86-68), Joe Cullen and Bobby Aspell (87-69) and John Apone and Tom Apone (91-69).

Names and faces

Jim Forsgard retained his title as club champion at South Shore Country Club last weekend with a 54-hole score of 14-over 230. Retired Hingham High coach Dennis Clinton was a distant second. A round of applause for Teresa Velucci of Scituate, who aced the 11th hole at Widow's Walk Golf Course. She used a 7-iron on the 140-yard par-3. Susan Cook took first place in the Hatherly Golf Club Ladies 18-holer even holes tournament. She fashioned a 32, three strokes better than Nancy Baker and Denise DiCenso. Laura McAuliffe was fourth with a 38 . . .

Tournament time

Looking to support Braintree High School Athletics. The school's Athletic Association is holding its annual golf tournament July 13 at Braintree Municipal GC. Registration begins at 7 with an 8 o'clock shotgun start. It's $125 per golfer and it's a Florida scramble. Funds from the tournament will help maintain the highest quality programs for students-athletes at BHS. For more notes online at Clubhouse Extra.

This 17th hole offers a 360 degree panoramic view of the region.

'Walk' this way

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

It has been a little more than a decade since Widow's Walk Golf Course opened in Scituate, which makes it a good time to look back at this unique track.

WIDOW'S WALK

Its highly publicized opening was a good news/bad news situation for the course.

It was good because it was a "gotta play" on just about every hacker's want list that summer. The bad news was the course was not ready when it opened. It needed another season of turf growth before allowing golfers and carts to tread over its new fairways.

No matter, the concept of this golf course was brilliant.

It was a reclamation project. The site was an abandoned sand and gravel pit and much of what was mined there was used to build the runways at Logan Airport. It was also America's first environmentally friendly course.

Widow Walk's land reclamation and environmentally friendly aspects earned it plaudits. Golf Digest named it "Best New Golf Course" in 1998 despite the fact that its editors overlooked the fact it was unplayable.

All of this notoriety meant hordes of golfers converged on Widow's Walk that first season.

And after foursome after foursome beat up the weak turf that really could have used another season of growth before it opened, the sketchy conditions deteriorated, causing complaints from first-time golfers.

Furthermore, there were other problems. For instance, after the course opened, there was a landslide on the hill that separates the first hole from the town dump

But that was then. Now things are so much better.

The course matured. Problem areas were resolved. And five years ago, Golf Digest gave Widow's Walk a four-star ranking in its "Course to Play," a travel guide for golfers.

You can actually play 18 holes without losing a dozen balls. That's not a joke. We played in the course's Opening Day Tournament; one poor fellow in our foursome lost 18 golf balls.

The key to enjoying Widow's Walk is playing the correct tees on this course that plays 4,562 yards from the front tees to just over 6,400 yards at the tips.

Unless you can shoot in the 70s, stay away from the back tees. It you can break 100, try the white tees. If you can't break 100, head to the silver tees.

Novices who are learning the game play the front tees.

You don't have to remember this information. It is on a sign you can't miss on the property on your way to the first tee.

The 17th hole, Widow Walk's signature hole, is an interesting par-3 with a 360-degree panoramic view from its back tee.

There are many great holes here, but they all have one thing in common. It is target golf. You just can't get up to the tee and bang away. Plus there are several forced carries over wetlands.

Here's a hint to the best way of playing the Scituate course. Go to the Web site (widowswalkgolf.com) and make a copy of long-time director of golf Bob Sanderson's hole-by-hole description how to play the course. It will save you a few strokes and maybe a few golf balls.

If you haven't been back since its first or second year, you are missing a treat.

Legion storms through makeup schedule

They were involved with two games they were able to get in during the week.

Cohasset broke out to a 4-0 lead against Holbrook, but saw it disappear to a 4-4 deadlock before they were able to respond with three runs in the sixth inning for a 7-4 win.

Derek Shwantner sparked the four run first inning with a home run, his fourth of the season.

Jordan Berry had three hits including a key single to help the three-run sixth inning for Post 118. Jeff Cavanaro, Kevin Barbary and John Giuggio also strung hits together in Cohasset's half of the sixth.

Brendan Doonan pitched a complete game for his third win in as many tries this season.

"Brendan did not have his fastball early in the game," said Taylor. "He had to rely on his curveball and off speed stuff to get himself into the late innings."

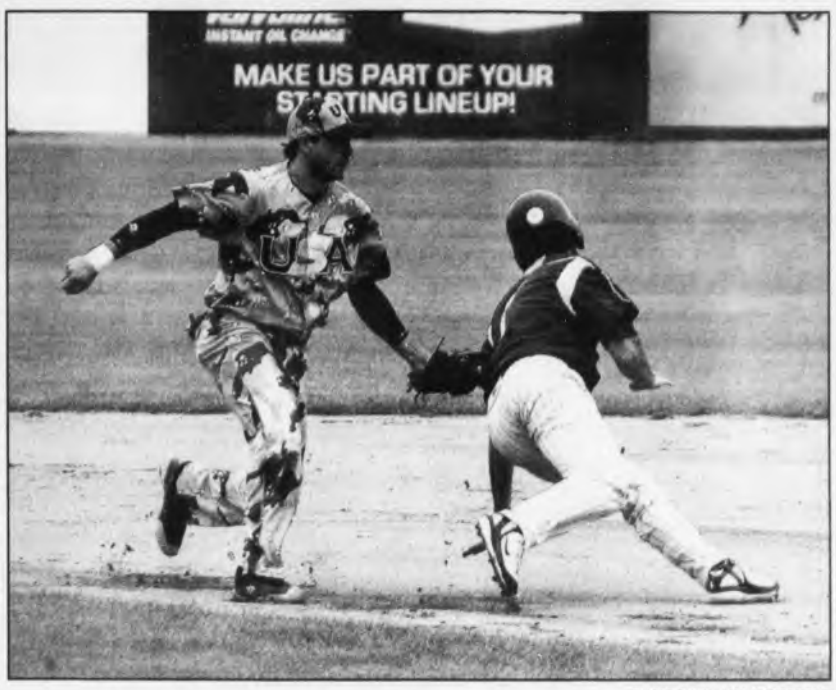
Post 118 had a makeup game with Jamaica Plain on Saturday and they lost in a slugfest, 17-14.

"We had a very short handed squad with only 10 players but we the players that we did have really showed some toughness," Taylor said. "The bats got started when a key hit from Kyle Dauphinee sparked the rest of the bats. Kyle had been catching for us and got hit on the elbow with a backswing from an opposing hitter. With his elbow swelling up on him he still managed to get a hard hit single to get us going offensively."

Jamaica Plain went up 5-0 after an inning and the two teams traded big innings for the rest of the game.

"JP made more plays than we did and they came out on top," said Taylor. "Even though we came out on the losing end I was very happy with the heart and pride that are players showed."

In more recent action, Post scored a huge win over West Roxbury on Monday, scoring more than 25 runs.



"I stopped counting at 25," Scituate/Cohaset's Scott Arnold said. "It was a big win."

The team followed with a 6-5 win over Morrisette on Tuesday.

The win improved Scituate/Cohasset to 6-5.

The team was in action against Holbrook at home in Scituate Wednesday night.

In other local action, Scituate's Rob Carlezon chipped in a pair of hits to help Norwell to a 9-1 win over Rockland on Saturday.

There is also baseball happening at the games.

Fun day at the ballpark

lined up on the third base side, signing autographs, chatting with fans, posing for pictures all with big smiles.

It didn't hurt that it was Rox baseball card giveaway day too.

KO

Both kids had a full set of Rox baseball cards to have signed, although my daughter's friend Becky decided to have her shirt autographed instead.

Then came one of the big moments of the day for the girls.

From the moment they saw a girl as a coach (Justine Siegal), they were fascinated.

When they got a chance to talk to her and get an autograph and picture it was the highlight of the day.

Then they got to run the bases.

There was a big hug from KO, the team's boxing kangaroo mascot and a chat with one of the Roxies (the team's lovely cheer squad) on the way out.

That pretty much made it a perfect afternoon for the kids, and parents who had a great time too.

And yes, the Rox won. They beat the American Defenders of New Hamshire (with former Red Sox player Brian Daubach, who gave a few smiles, waves and autographs as well, at the helm) 10-3.

Tickets start at just $5 and there really isn't a bad seat in the stadium.

It's easy to get to and the baseball is pretty good.

COHASSET TRIATHLON

Cohasset Triathlon Elite runners head into the chilly waters off Cohasset's Sandy Beach Sunday morning at the start of the third annual Cohasset Triathlon. Ocean temperatures were in the lower 60's through the event, along with drizzle and chilly air temperatures.

Scituate resident Bates Wilder ran in Cohasset's third annual Triathlon Sunday at Sandy Beach with someone close to his heart, Katherine Patricia Boika, who was killed in a drunk driving accident on June 6, 2006.

Cohasset Triathlon participants head up the hill to their bikes after completing the swim part of the triathlon Sunday morning at Cohasset's Sandy Beach.

A Cohasset Triathlon participant heads out on his bike to begin the second leg of the tri.

A ten-time Olympic gold medalist, Gary Hall Jr. of Florida does some stretches before taking part in Cohasset's third annual Triathlon Sunday morning at Sandy Beach. Hall is a world-class athlete with Type 1 Juvenile Diabetes. Proceeds raised will benefit the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation.

Kaye defends triathlon title

By Jay N. Miller
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

Olympic team tri-athlete Jarrod Shoemaker, who set a course record in winning the 2008 Cohasset Triathlon, couldn't be there Sunday to defend his title, but his family made sure nobody forgot about him.

Alicia Kaye, who happens to be Mrs. Shoemaker, successfully defended her women's championship with a 39-second victory over Amanda Felder, a transplanted Texan who lives in Nashua, N.H. And if Jarrod Shoemaker wasn't there to take men's honors, he sent his kid brother, Jacob, who managed to grab second place.

Gloucester's Janda Ricci-Munn was the first competitor across the finish line, in an unofficial time of 58:59. Jacob Shoemaker, 18, was next at 1:00:29, with Dean Phillips of Wenham third at 1:01:02.

Those were the highlights Sunday as 950 athletes in several age classes competed in the latest installment of the Cohasset Triathlon, which combines swimming, biking and running. Racers swim a quarter-mile in the ocean off Sandy Beach, bike over a 12-mile course, and then run 3.2 miles to the finish line.

Tide conditions delayed Sunday's start a bit, and the wave action was an added challenge, but aside from a couple of racers who took spills on their bike leg, there were no major problems.

"We had a very fast race with a great elite field," race director Bill Burnett said.

"There were no major problems, and we had over 950 competitors. The best thing is that about 300 of them were beginners, doing their first triathlon."

Kaye is far from a beginner, as the native of British Columbia became a pro in 2005. This year's race was a bigger challenge than it appeared, for a knee injury had sidelined her for five months this winter. Kaye managed only four weeks of running to get ready, while also finishing her master's degree in athletic counseling at Springfield College. She noted her husband was busy running a triathlon in Des Moines, Iowa, on Sunday.

"It's always good to be familiar with the course, and running Cohasset last year definitely helped me," Kaye said. "The most challenging part was the swim, no doubt, because it was really wavy. It was very difficult to keep your head up to see the moorings, difficult to negotiate the course. Once I got on land, I just put my head down, hoping to go as long and as hard as I could. I really didn't have any idea of where the other women were after we left the water."

Closest to Kaye was Felder, who just moved to New Hampshire this month after getting married in March and earning a doctorate degree in bioengineering at the University of California-San Diego. Although she finished a scant 39 ticks behind the winner, Felder, a Houston native and graduate of Rice University, never felt she had serious contact with the reigning champion. Kaye (1:03:41) and Felder (1:04:20) finished ninth and 11th overall.

"Not really. I never had contact with Alicia. She led wire to wire," Felder said. "The first time I saw her after the swim was at the finish line, but my eyes are bad (at distances) so I might've been closer than I thought."

The racer who's been living in La Jolla until recently didn't find the raw wind or choppy water too daunting.

"I don't think the weather played much of a role," Felder said. "My swim portion went pretty well, and I didn't feel the waves were too bad. And, we get cloudy days in California, and the Pacific can be pretty cold, too. As a first-time racer on this course, there are a lot of turns on the bike course, but I got through that OK. I generally do the Olympic distance triathlons, but these shorter ones are fun, and definitely different."

On the men's side, Ricci-Munn had battled his way to a third place finish in 2008. On Sunday he was in the thick of things from the start, but the major impediment to his race was his good friend, Dean Phillips. The 6-4, 200-pound Phillips is a monster on the cycling leg, but Ricci-Munn usually can turn in a better running time. As the duo biked along, with Phillips pulling away easily, Ricci-Munn knew he had to be patient.

"I came in here today with very few expectations," said Ricci-Munn, 33, who runs a specified training company in Gloucester.

"The way things began, I didn't have any better expectations: the swim leg was like trying to make headway in a washing machine. Then, after that, I know my good buddy Dean Phillips is a phenom on the bike. I had to get through both those things, and I knew if I kept it together, I might have a chance to run him down in the last leg. Running is my strength, although I'm pretty good at the bike, too. I was able to catch him on the run."

Said Phillips: "I know he's a really fast runner, of course. I'm strongest on the bike. We're good friends and we train together a lot, so I knew he would be coming after me on the run. The swimming was really tough for me today – the swells never let you get comfortable. But I got past that and had a good bike leg, but then Ricci-Munn passed me on the run, looking cool and collected. Then, Jacob Shoemaker passed me and he was really moving. He looked great."

The younger Shoemaker, eight years his brother's junior, was making his Cohasset debut, and his second-place finish made it memorable. Jacob became a budding tri-athlete in 2005 when his big brother gave him one of his old competition bikes.

"I swam and ran in high school," noted Jacob, who lives in Sudbury. "When Jarrod gave me his bike, I began trying triathlons, and I've really enjoyed it. It's hard not to get caught up in it, when your brother and your sister-in-law are both professionals. This was a fun competition, even if not ideal conditions. I just wanted to come down, experience this race and have some fun. Jarrod and Alicia have always supported me, and we train together a lot, so coming to do Cohasset was a natural for me."

The triathlon also included a bevy of amateur athletes, many of them local residents happy to join the pros in this demanding event. One such regular at Cohasset is John Edwards, a Scituate native now living in Duxbury. Edwards finished back in the pack and was unconcerned with his time.

"There was a lot of wave action today," Edwards said with a sigh.

"You couldn't really see, so other swimmers would bang into you. If it all goes right, you can finish that swim portion in seven or eight minutes, but it is not very easy on a day like this. But the biking and running courses are very nice, and it's a fine event for a good cause, so it's really an enjoyable day."

This year the Cohasset event is part of a newly constituted Massachusetts series, with similar events in Marlborough and Gloucester as the season goes on. All involved raved about the quality of the Cohasset event.

"Cohasset is always such a treat," Kaye said. "Of all the races we do, this one really does everything in a big way, first-class all the way, with super planning and organization. I'm more than happy to keep coming back to Cohasset."

Said Phillips: "Cohasset is the best race in the state. The preparation, the setting, the community help, and all the volunteers just make this one the standard every other race is shooting for."

Cohasset U13 laxers win TTL championship

The Cohasset U13 TTL Select Lacrosse Team won the 2009 Championship in a dominant "leave-nothing-to-doubt" performance in a victory over Hanover last Friday night by a score of 6 – 2 in the final game of the season. The TTL (Town Tournament League) is a regional select lacrosse league featuring teams of the best players from towns all over the South Shore at both the U13 and U15 levels. The Cohasset squad came in as the # 1 seed and boasted an undefeated regular season record that they knew might be tested by Hanover – the defending '08 Champions. However, from the opening whistle, the kids were determined to make sure that they controlled the action and the outcome as they played a near perfect game from start to finish to insure the win.

Having handed Hanover their only loss of the season, the kids knew that they were going to come in and try to make a statement right from the start, but it was the Cohasset squad that did all the "writing" on this day with outstanding play in every aspect of the game that put Hanover back on their heels from the very start. Our "Iron Wall" close defense – Harry Seraikas, Alex Norton, Tim Gillis, and Jack Donohue - were absolutely impenetrable and shut down just about every offensive threat that Hanover could muster. Switching seamlessly between our "Tiger" zone and man-to-man coverage, they frustrated Hanover's top scorers and produced multiple key turnovers that gave our offense plenty of opportunity to work their magic at the other end of the field. Conor Naughton (game MVP) stood tall in between the pipes for the entire game providing the backbone to the defensive effort as he stuffed several close in shots and stopped almost every outside volley as if he was playing catch in the back yard. Brian Counihan with excellent goalie play throughout the season, was also ready if needed, but won the "Unsung Hero" award for insisting that Conor finish out as the game's starter.

The transition game was in good hands as well as midfield quarterbacks Danny Axelson and Sam Morris controlled the face-offs and our possessions by quickly moving the ball up the field and executing both our settled plays and fast break scoring drives to perfection with both of them notching key goals throughout the contest. We also saw outstanding two-way play from their line mates – Jeffrey Powers, Curtis Golden, Chris Norton, Ben Buckley (who had a sick lefty snipe to seal the deal on a broken Hanover play) and Pat Holway who pulled a "Bobby Orr" for another sensational midfield led goal. Defensive specialists Tim Giuggio and Mike Lund made life miserable for Hanover's midfield troops as their relentless pressure up top made it next to impossible for them to keep a possession very long, let alone get any offensive momentum going.

The attack trio of Martin Buckley, Sam Murphy, and AJ Kucinski, whose perfect execution of fast break and settled offensive sets had been a key offensive strength all season, proved why they deserved that recognition by igniting the team's scoring with precision passing, back door cuts, quick dekes and dodges, and laser-like marksmanship. Hollis Hunnewell and Sean Mavilia anchored the 4th quarter attack and kept the pressure (and the ball) in Cohasset's offensive end for the remaining time on the clock.

Hingham's Fourth weekend is family-oriented

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

The Fourth of July Parade Committee is keeping its fingers crossed in the hopes that July 4 will dawn bright and sunny, in sharp contrast to the recent rainy stretch.

The weekend celebration features many fun-filled events — fireworks, a road race, a pancake breakfast, the traditional Hingham Fourth of July parade attended by thousands of spectators from near and far, a band concert, and a vintage baseball game — a true old-fashioned holiday celebration.

"The committee is hoping for good weather and no rain — at least not until after the parade!" said Fourth of July Parade Committee Chairman Mary Ann Blackmur. "The DPW has been busy getting the parade route spic and span, and the whole town is awaiting in giddy anticipation Hingham's slice of American Pie."

"Boss Clown and all the Shriner Clowns are looking forward to another year of entertaining us all along the parade route," Blackmur said. "Once again the Sr. Boston Crusaders Drum and Bugle Corp will make you march in place or at least tap your toe as they march along the parade route." New this year is the 7th regiment Drum and Bugle Corp from Connecticut. Many community organizations will be participating this year including The Jones Street Association and the Bare Cove Fire Brigade.

The Committee would like to include more classic/antique cars in the parade. To download an application, visit www.hinghamjuly4th.org. There is no registration fee this year due to the current economic climate. Donations are suggested but not required.

Classic/antique car owners who would like to participate in the parade may also call Committee member Jim Drew (617-279-5304) to register, or just show up at the high school parking lot off Union Street at 8:45 a.m. on the day of the parade.

"This year we celebrate America's birthday, and next year we will be celebrating both America's birthday and Hingham's 375th birthday," Blackmur noted. "We need the support of the entire community to help make it a great parade and celebration." Visit www.hinghamjuly4th.org for sponsorship levels. Donations may also be mailed to: Hingham July 4th Parade, 210 Central St., Hingham, MA 02043.

"This is a community parade sponsored by generous businesses and individuals," Blackmur said. "We are grateful for their support."

Fourth of July weekend events include:

Sat., July 4:

• 7 a.m., The Hingham Recreation Commission Road Race, "51 Years and Running," begins at the Middle School, 1103 Main St., with a ceremony at the finish line. Visit www.hinghamrec.com for registration forms and more information or call Mark Thorell or Amy Maree at (781) 741-1464. The race, which attracted nearly 2,000 runners last year, covers a 4.6-mile stretch along historic Main Street, finishing under the giant American flag in Hingham Square. The race benefits Hingham Recreation programs and provides summer scholarships to the popular summer playground program for up to 30 children. Runners of all ages are invited to sign-up and to take part in this timeless Hingham tradition.

• 9 a.m. — As a part of Hingham's Fourth of July celebration, the Old Ship Meeting House, 90 Main St., will be open for an hour before and after the parade. This is an opportunity for visitors to enjoy and learn more about this historic building and national treasure. Built by the people of Hingham in 1681, Old Ship is the oldest building in continuing ecclesiastical use in the United States; the only surviving First Period New England Meeting House; and a National Historic Landmark.

Following the parade, the OSC youth group will sell tie-dyed items on the Parish Hall lawn to pay for scholarships for underprivileged children to attend the Rosebud South Dakota camp. For more information, visit www.wowayankesummercamp.org/Donate.html.

• From 7-9:45 a.m. or until the pancakes run out, stop by the annual Hingham-Weymouth Kiwanis Club Pancake Breakfast on Hingham Common at Middle and Main Streets, where flapjacks will be flipped rain or shine, served with sausages, orange juice, coffee, and milk.

• At 10 a.m. the Fourth of July Parade ("Our Favorite Places" theme) featuring Uncle Sam, bands, floats, antique cars, and more steps out from Hingham High School, traveling down historic Main Street and arriving at Station Street at about noontime. Prizes are awarded for different categories of floats.

• A concert by the Satuit Band will top off the fun-filled holiday at about 7:15 p.m. at the Hingham Harbor gazebo.

Sun., July 5

• 2 p.m., Annual Summer Classic Vintage Baseball Game featuring The Coopers vs. The Derbys at Talbot Field, 51 Burditt Ave. The event, which is hosted by the Hingham Historical Society, also includes a barbecue, popcorn, and lots of family fun.

People of all ages will enjoy this emceed event. Players with nicknames such as "Dots," "Chips," and "May-Day" will stroll through the crowd in character between at-bats.

• 6 p.m., Holiday celebration and fireworks, sponsored by the Hingham Lions Club at the Hingham Bathing Beach off Rte. 3A. Start time for fireworks is approximately 9 p.m. Vendors will offer fried dough, lemonade, sausages, and other food items. Don't miss "the best fireworks display on the South Shore." All boats must be anchored in the Harbor by 8 p.m.

For further information about Hingham's Fourth of July celebration, its history, the parade committee, detours, parking restrictions, and a parade map, visit www.hinghamjuly4th.org.

Parade buttons

Parade buttons bearing the winning design are sold for $1 around town prior to the event to raise funds to help pay for the parade. The Hingham-Hull Rotary Club will sell the remaining buttons on July 4.

T-shirts with the button design on the front are now on sale for $10 in both children's and adult sizes at various locations, including GettiGear on North Street through July 4. Any remaining t-shirts will be sold during the parade.

It's not too late to drop off or mail a parade fund donation or to be a parade sponsor. Checks made payable to the Hingham July 4th Parade Fund may be sent to 210 Central St., ATTN. Hingham July 4th Parade Fund, Hingham, MA 02043.

Members of the community who would like to help out on the day of the parade are asked to contact Committee Chairman Mary Ann Blackmur at mblackmur@comcast.net.

COHASSET RECREATION

Field trips for Summer Xtreme

Cohasset Recreation Center is at 41 Highland Ave. For more information or to sign up for activities, stop by the office, or visit www.cohassetrec.com or call 781-383-4109.

Summer Xtreme – Students entering grades six through nine will travel to field trip destinations around the region. With a $99 per week fee, Cohasset Recreation Department is bridging the gap many parents face each summer, the gap between the quality and affordability of summer programs. The program is filling fast and the following programs still have openings.

What's in store this summer?

Week two: July 6 to 9, Codzilla boat ride and Boston Bowl and Billiards.

Week six: Aug. 3 to 6, Paw Sox and Fenway Park Tour/Tomb.

Week seven: Aug. 10 to 13, Water Wizz and laser tag.

The program will meet four days a week, Monday through Thursday, with field trips on Tuesdays and Thursdays. On Mondays and Wednesdays, the group of about 45 middle school students will participate in various sports, crafts, challenges, team builders and social activities. The program is supervised by counselors and directors with many years of experience working with children.

Girls Basketball Clinic – Cohasset High School. Girls varsity coach Jack Levangie will instruct a girl's basketball clinic July 14 through 17, from 9 a.m. to noon, for girls in grades four through eight. Fee is $99 and includes a T-shirt. Registration can be done online.

Yoga – Cohasset Town Hall. Hatha yoga classes include moving meditation with gentle stretching and strengthening postures with breathing exercises to decrease stress and increase flexibility. Cost is $8 drop-in. Meets Thursdays, at 9:30 a.m.

Sunday Afternoon Jam Sessions – Cohasset Recreation Center. Aspiring musicians can come down to the Recreation Center on Sundays, from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m., and get together and play music. Thanks to the generosity of Crossroads Music of Hanover, amps and drums will be available on site. Musicians should bring their own instruments and may bring their own equipment. Cost is $6 per visit or an all-access pass of $20 for five weeks.

WOMPATUCK

Pond investigation is Saturday

Unless otherwise noted, events meet at the Wompatuck State Park Visitors Center, are free of charge and open to all. No pre-registration is required. Reasonable accommodations available upon advance request. For more information, call park interpreter Bill at 781-749-7160. Wompatuck State Park is on Union Street, off Free Street, in Hingham. Programs sponsored by the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation. For information, visit the DCR events calendar at mass.gov/dcr/events.

Pond Investigation – Saturday, July 4, 10 to 11 a.m. Use the park's nets and buckets to discover what lives in the waters of Wompatuck State Park. Follow the park road down to Boundary Pond, where the group will meet. All children must be accompanied by an adult. Rain will cancel the event.

Family Nature Exploration – Saturday, July 4, 1 to 2 p.m. Be prepared to use sketch pads, binoculars, hand lenses, field or pond nets, or field guides while discovering the natural world of Wompatuck State Park. Each week a different aspect of the park. For adults and school-age children. Meet at the Visitors Center. All children must be accompanied by an adult. Rain cancels the exploration.

Kidleidoscope – Sunday, July 5, 1 to 2 p.m. Pre-school age children with a caregiver can join the Park Interpreter for some fun that is just for the little ones. SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JUNE 29, 2009

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Get your facts together and become familiar with them before you have to face up to that interview. The better prepared you are, the easier it will be to make that important impression.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) New information might warrant changing your mind about a recently made decision. Never mind the temporary confusion it might cause. Acting on the truth is always preferable.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Creating a loving atmosphere for those you care for could pay off in many ways. Expect to hear some unexpected but very welcome news that can make a big difference in your life.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Stepping away from an old and seemingly insoluble problem might be helpful. Use the time to take a new look at the situation and perhaps work out a new method of dealing with it.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You're still in a favorable goal-setting mode. However, you might need to be a little more realistic about some of your aims. Best to reach for what is currently doable. The rest will follow.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A setback is never easy to deal with. But it could be a boon in disguise. Recheck your proposal, and strengthen the weak spots. Seek advice from someone who has "been there and done that."

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Coming up with a new way of handling a tedious job-regulated chore could lead to more than just a congratulatory memo once the word reaches the "right people." Good luck.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) What you might call determination someone else might regard as stubbornness. Look for ways to reach a compromise that won't require a major shift of views on your part.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You're still in a vulnerable mode vis-a-vis "offers" that sound too good to be true. So continue to be skeptical about anything that can't be backed up with provable facts.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Thrift is still dominant this week. What you don't spend on what you don't need will be available for you to draw on should a possible (albeit temporary) money crunch hit.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Staying close to home early in the week allows for some introspection about your social life. Sort out your feelings before rejoining your fun-time fellows on the weekend.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) It can be a bit daunting as well as exciting to find yourself finally taking action on a long-delayed move for a change. It helps to stay with it when others rally to support you.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

'Barn raising' event for job seekers

By Brian P. Nanos
BNANOS@CNC.COM

"The whole idea is to involve the community with helping people get back to work."
Dana Aaron, executive director

Mike Tarsala said he's drawn to the July 10 Barn Raising event St. Luke's Episcopal Church on First Parish Road because, unlike other tools he has used in his ongoing job search, this one will give him a chance to help and be helped by neighbors.

"It's a cool idea; it's different than everybody (else) out there trying to help you get a job," he said. "The idea here is neighbors helping neighbors. I hope it works for everyone."

Tarsala, a three-year Scituate resident, is, like many people in the current economy, out of work.

"To make a long story bearable, there are a lot of quality people who are getting the ax," he said.

The event, which will be held from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on July 10, is designed to give Tarsala and others help finding each other jobs. Registration is $50, and information is available at barnraising.org.

The first Barn Raising event was held in 2003. Dana Aaron, now the executive director of the program, was looking for a way to help a friend's job search when, at the same time, he learned that by dropping his business card into a fish bowl he had won a reception for 25 friends.

Aaron decided to use the reception, which he said he didn't really need, to help his friend. At that first reception, each of the guests was asked to do one thing to help the guest of honor find a job. Much like communities in the past gathered to help raise a neighbor's barn, Aaron wanted his community to gather together and help find his friend a job, so he called it a barn-raising.

Aaron said his friend actually found a job before the barn-raising effort came together, but the idea stuck and grew into a series of programs Aaron now offers statewide.

The July 10 event is not going to be a reception with guests of honor; that will come at a later, as yet undecided date. Instead, Aaron said the job seekers would meet with each other to fine-tune their searches.

For example, at one point in the program, the people seeking jobs will meet in groups of three so that each member of the group will be responsible for researching job opportunities for the other two.

Later in the program, the participants will present themselves and their ongoing job searches to a group of 15 to 20 others who will suggest ways that they can improve their searches.

At a later date, Aaron said he would hold a Scituate barn-raising reception, inspired by the reception he won from the fish bowl, at which each visitor would be asked to do at least one thing to help one of the program participants find a job.

"Everybody who comes is asked to do one thing to help the guest of honor find a job," Aaron said. "The whole idea is to involve the community with helping people get back to work."

OBITUARIES

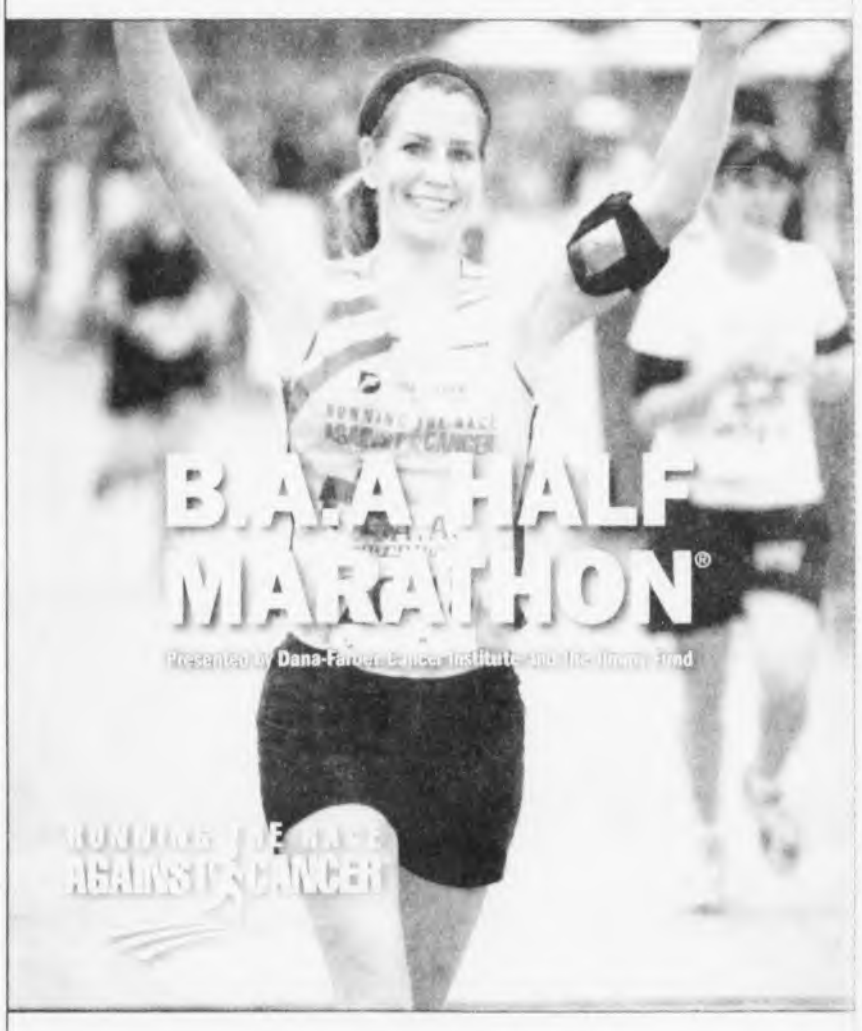
Obituaries appearing in this section are paid for and written by families, often through the services of a funeral director.

Edward J. Figueiredo

Edward J. Figueiredo

COHASSET – Edward J. Figueiredo, age 70, of Cohasset and Hingham, a Cohasset Lobsterman, passed away after a courageous battle with GIST cancer on Tuesday, June 30, 2009.

Ed was the beloved husband of Frances M. and the late Roberta. He was the son of the late Joseph and Mary Figueiredo and the brother of late Marjorie Sullivan of Cohasset, Joseph Figueiredo of Cohasset and Lawrence Figueiredo of Florida City, FL. Ed was the beloved father of Edward "Chip" Figueiredo of Cohasset, Christine Figueiredo of Morehead City, NC, and Annette Milton of Cohasset. He was the loving step-father of Christopher Fernald of Hingham, Daniel Fernald of Hull, Brian Fernald of Cohasset, and Joseph Fernald of Hingham. He is also survived by 14 grandchildren and many nieces and nephews. Ed was a graduate of Cohasset High School and Co-captain of the only undefeated football team in Cohasset High history. He served during Vietnam with the US Coast Guard. He was a member of the George H. Mealy Post #118 and the Massachusetts Lobstermans Assoc. As a young man, Ed tried to become a Police Officer, but decided he did not have the heart to give a ticket to anyone, so he turned to the sea to fish for lobsters, which he continued for 48 years. Ed became a mentor to many current lobstermen, who started working on his boat "Prime Ribs". Ed was also noted as the "Sesame Street" Lobsterman, when the famed t.v. show filmed a segment with he and his daughter, Christine, in the 70's on his boat in Cohasset Harbor, which aired for many years.



Ed was an avid sports fan. He enjoyed the Patriots and Red Sox as well as Nascar, of which many race car drivers feasted on his lobsters at the Loudon, NH and Dover, DE tracks for many years. Ed also spent many winters in Florida, the last few at his condo in West Palm Beach. He also enjoyed keeping his 1932 all-original Chevy in perfect working order.

A Funeral Mass will be held on Friday, July 3, 2009 at 10 am in St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset. Visiting hours on Thursday from 4-8 pm at McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St. (across from St. Anthony's Church), Cohasset. Interment private. If desired, donations in Ed's memory may be made to GIST Cancer Research Fund, 55 Saw Mill Rd., NY, NY 10956 or please consider donating Blood at any Blood Drive. Diamond adds sparkle to Pops

Craig Ferguson returns to host 2009 'Boston Pops Fireworks Spectacular'

Grammy Award-winning pop icon Neil Diamond will perform on the "Boston Pops Fireworks Spectacular," an entertainment special to be broadcast live from the Charles River Esplanade in Boston, Saturday, July 4 from 10 to 11 p.m. on the CBS Television Network.

Craig Ferguson of CBS's "The Late Late Show with Craig Ferguson," in his third consecutive year as host of the special, will travel directly from a week-long USO tour overseas with U.S. troops to Boston for the annual Fourth of July event.

Diamond will perform some of his classic hits with The Boston Pops Esplanade Orchestra under the direction of conductor Keith Lockhart.

"The Boston Pops Fireworks Spectacular," in its 36th year, is the orchestra's annual free outdoor Fourth of July concert and is sponsored by Liberty Mutual Group, one of America's leading insurance companies. The final 21 minutes of the broadcast, featuring the spectacular fireworks display, will be presented commercial free by Liberty Mutual Group.

Neil Diamond's eclectic and universally beloved songs – as well as his charismatic and openhearted performances of them – continue to make him an international force both as a record maker and a live entertainer. In an impressive musical career that has spanned nearly five decades, he has released dozens of albums and sold more than 125 million records worldwide, with a remarkable track record of 15 top 10 albums and 37 top 10 singles.

Craig Ferguson joined the late-night television arena as host of "The Late Late Show" in January 2005, following a career that encompassed film, television and the stage. The Scottish-born actor, writer, director and producer brings a fresh approach to late-night television, which has quickly evolved into appointment viewing for America's nightly insomniacs and for which he has received an Emmy nomination.

Keith Lockhart became the 20th conductor of the Boston Pops in February 1995 and marks his 15th season this year. He has conducted more than 1,000 Boston Pops concerts, made 66 television shows, and led the Boston Pops on 33 national tours and four tours of Japan and Korea. In 2010, the Boston Pops will mark its 125th season. Though the Pops have performed free concerts on Boston's Charles River Esplanade since 1929, the July Fourth concert took on a new dimension in 1974 with the introduction of the concert's now-famous grand spectacular fireworks finale.

Boston 4 Productions has produced this annual event for the past 36 years for which approximately 500,000 people pack Boston's Charles River Esplanade. In addition, more than seven million people across the country and the globe join "America's Orchestra" through the annual televised broadcast, sponsored by Liberty Mutual Group.

Quick Flix

Adult siblings deal with the death of their mother in "Summer Hours."

ANGELS & DEMONS (PG-13) Maybe it's faint praise, but at least this sequel is better than "The Da Vinci Code." Tom Hanks is back as supersleuth Robert Langdon in a thriller about an anti-Catholic organization that's plotting to blow-up the Vatican. The movie isn't spectacular. In fact, it's a bit of a maculate conception. But it's mindless summer movie fun. (B-)

AWAY WE GO (R) A comedy about a couple (John Krasinski and Maya Rudolph) searching for the perfect place to raise a family. The discombobulated script is also seeking direction. But the overrated director Sam Mendes can't help. The only lesson is that Krasinski and Rudolph can't carry a movie. (D+)

THE BROTHERS BLOOM (PG-13) Adrien Brody and Mark Ruffalo are terrific as two con men who target a gorgeous heiress (Rachel Weisz). The film charmingly defies easy categorization. Call it a romantic crime comedy. (A)

DANCE FLICK (PG-13) The Wayans brothers try to recapture the magic of their "Scary Movie" with this send-up of teen dance flicks like "Save the Last Dance" and "Step Up." (Not Reviewed)

DEPARTURES (PG-13) Bittersweet dramedy about a young musician who winds up working as an encoffinier, a person who elaborately prepares bodies for cremation. (B)

DRAG ME TO HELL (PG-13) Horror flick with Alison Lohman as a loan officer who forecloses on the home of an old woman who places a curse on her that turns her life into a living hell. (B+)

EARTH (G) This visually stunning documentary follows three animal families – polar bears, elephants, and humpback whales – over a period of one year. Some of the footage is predictably fantastic, but the stories don't quite grab you on an emotional level. (B-)

EASY VIRTUE (PG-13) Jessica Biel puts on airs as a snooty Yank who invades British high society in the 1920s in this variation on the Noel Coward play. (C)

THE HANGOVER (R) Bradley Cooper, Ed Helms and Zach Galifiankis play buddies who wake up in a Vegas hotel room the morning after a wild bachelor party. (D)

HANNAH MONTANA: THE MOVIE (G) This big-screen adaptation of the Disney TV series is just as bland as its source material. And, like the show, it's made for girls aged 6-14 and no one else. But along the way, you'll see some strong performances of catchy pop tunes. (C+)

IMAGINE THAT (PG) Eddie Murphy stars in another cutesy comedy for the whole family. He's forced to do goofy (funny?) things in order to get stock tips from his 7-year-old daughter. Filled with silliness and schmaltz. And it's a long way from Murphy's glory days in "Trading Places" and "Beverly Hills Cop." (C-)

LAND OF THE LOST (PG-13) Will Ferrell and Danny McBride star in his big-screen version of the '70s TV show about a family transported back to a land of dinosaurs and cavemen. (D)

MANAGEMENT (R) Steve Zahn and Jennifer Aniston play polar opposites who become involved in an offbeat romance that crisscrosses the country. The movies suffers from that forced wackiness that's so fashionable in films these days. Instead, the film should have trusted the chemistry of Zahn and Aniston — they're actually quite good together. (C+)

MONSTERS VS. ALIENS (PG) An animated tongue-in-cheek homage to classic B horror movies. You just may fall in love with Ginormica (voice of Reese Witherspoon). Well done. DreamWorks has finally entered the Pixar age. (B+)

MOON (R) Sam Rockwell stars in a sci-fi mystery about a man sent to the moon with a robot (voiced by Kevin Spacey) to help mine a new energy source. (B)

MY LIFE IN RUINS (PG-13) Nia Vardalos ("My Big Fat Greek Wedding") plays an American professor who becomes a tour guide in Greece and falls for the tour bus driver. (D+)

O'HORTON (PG-13) A train engineer who lives his life on a fixed schedule learns to change after he retires and sets off on a series of adventures. (B)

OUTRAGE (Not rated) Filmmaker Kirby Dick outs closeted gay members of Congress (like Sen. Larry Craig) who consistently vote against gay rights. (C)

THE PROPOSAL (PG-13) Sandra Bullock and Ryan Reynolds in a rote tale about a publisher coercing her underling into marrying her so she won't be deported to her native Canada. (C)

RUDO Y CURSI (R) The stars of "Y Tu Mama Tambien," Diego Luna and Gael Garcia Bernal, reunite for this drama about brothers and rivals in Mexican professional soccer. (B)

STAR TREK (PG-13) The summer movie season gets off to a great start, as "Lost" creator J.J. Abrams traces the formative years of the Starship Enterprise. The film wisely spends lots of time developing the dynamics between the iconic characters. Chris Pine (Kirk) and Zachary Quinto (Spock) do a great job of both paying homage to the original actors and making the roles their own. Be sure to look for a cameo by Leonard Nimoy. (A-)

STATE OF PLAY (PG-13) A journalist (Russell Crowe) and a congressman (Ben Affleck) get caught in the middle of a murder case involving the pol's beautiful young aide. It's not just entertaining, it's also extremely relevant. (A-)

SUMMER HOURS (Not rated) Juliette Binoche stars as one of three adult siblings faced with the task of dividing up their mother's lucrative estate after she dies. The movie is a slow-moving, rather torturous affair. (C)

THE TAKING OF PELHAM 1 2 3 (R) Remake of the 1974 Walter Mattau classic about terrorists taking over a New York City subway train. Denzel Washington and John Travolta star. (C)

TERMINATOR SALVATION (PG-13) Christian Bale plays John Connor in the franchise's fourth entry, which is two more than "Terminator" creator James Cameron thought was needed. (D)

TETRO (R) Francis Ford Coppola draws on memories for a fictional story about estranged brothers (Alden Ehrenreich, Vincent Gallo) having a chance meeting. (C)

CNC SUPER TEAM

Boys Track

NAME: Chris Carter
SCHOOL: Pembroke
GRADE: Senior
EVENT: 400, 4x100
STATS: The anchor of the 4x100 team, Carter legged it out down the stretch to help his teammates win the event at the Division 4 State Meet. He finished fourth in the 400 with a time of 51.44 seconds, and one week later at All-State's ran a time of 51.12.

NAME: Ryan Kelley
SCHOOL: Pembroke
GRADE: Sophomore
EVENT: 2 Mile
STATS: This sophomore took second place at the Division 4 State Meet with a personal-best time of 9:36.41, and then at the All-State Meet, Kelley ran a time of 9:31.51, setting a personal best record and placing 13th in a stacked field.

NAME: Pat Creahan
SCHOOL: Hingham
GRADE: Senior
EVENT: Discus, Shot put
STATS: Pat excelled when it counted, throwing 50'5 in the shot to win the Last Chance Meet. He went on to finish second in the MIAA Division 3 championships in the event. In the discus, Pat's best throw was at the All-State championship, where he launched a 163-2 throw for a fourth-place finish. His 150'6 toss at New Englands gave him a 14th-place finish there.

NAME: Bryan Carton
SCHOOL: Norwell
GRADE: Senior
EVENT: 800
STATS: Consistency. It's what coaches look for in athletes. Bryan Carton had it, especially when it came to running both the 400 and 800. A consistent top-10 finisher in both events, Carton finished sixth at the Division 4 State Meet in the 400 with a time of 51.58 seconds. Earlier in the year at the Massachusetts State Track Coaches Association Invitational, Carton set a personal best in the 800 with a time of 2:07.93, eight seconds better than his previous best. During the dual-meet portion of the season, Carton placed in the top three a handful of times.

NAME: Chris Greene
SCHOOL: Norwell
GRADE: Junior
EVENT: 200
STATS: During the dual-meet portion of the season, no one could touch Chris Greene. And once the individual meets began, he proved he could hang with the best of them. Greene won the 200 at Division 4 State Meet with a time of 22.78 seconds. At the All-State Track and Field Championships, Greene placed sixth with a personal-best time of 22.56, which qualified him for the New England Championships.

NAME: Dana Lindberg
SCHOOL: Hingham
GRADE: Junior
EVENT: 200
STATS: Dana had his best time of the season, a 22.46 at the All-State championships. That gave him a fourth-place finish. He was also tenth at New Englands with a 22.70. Dana also competed in the long jump at the Division 3 state championships. Dana is also a member of the National Honor Society.

NAME: Terrence Gibson
SCHOOL: Rockland
GRADE: Sophomore
EVENT: Long Jump
STATS: Terrence is a one-man track team. He does it all and this year improved every facet of his game. But is forte is the long jump. He hit 21 feet, 8 inches this year and was the top regional finisher in the All-State Meet with a leap of 20-8

NAME: Chris Dooley
SCHOOL: Weymouth
GRADE: Junior
EVENT: 800
STATS: He did not lose a Bay State Conference race in the indoor or outdoor seasons of his junior campaign. Dooley finished seventh in the 800 (1:57.26) at the All-State Meet and came in fifth in the 800 (1:57.01) at Division 1 States. He also competes in indoor track and soccer, captaining both teams for the Wildcats.

NAME: Ben Lincoln
SCHOOL: Hingham
GRADE: Senior
EVENT: Javelin
STATS: Ben isn't just one of the best in the south shore, but in New England as well. Ben had a season-best high throw of 198'0 at the MIAA Division 3 championships to win the title, then followed with solid throws of 196'9 in the Division 3 State championships (third place). In the New England championships, Ben hit 196'0 for a second-place finish.

NAME: Steve Sollowin
SCHOOL: Weymouth
GRADE: Sophomore
EVENT: Mile
STATS: He set school records in the mile and two-mile and finished eighth in the mile (4:24.47) at the All-State Meet and came in second in the mile (4:24.18) at Division 1 States. At the Bay State Conference Meet, he won the two-mile (9:31) earning BSC All-Star honors, going through the conference meets unbeaten.

NAME: Joel Hubbard
SCHOOL: Marshfield
GRADE: Freshman
EVENT: 800
STATS: Just a freshman, this kid impressed in a number of events for the Rams during all of the individual meets this year. He competed in the 800, 1-mile, and high jump. At the Massachusetts State Track Coaches Association Freshman/Sophomore Large Schools Invitational, Hubbard won the 800, and that's when he kicked it into high gear in the event. At the Division 2 State Track Meet, Hubbard finished fourth with a time of 2:21.32, qualifying him for the All-State Meet.

NAME: Bobby Gratzer
SCHOOL: Pembroke
GRADE: Junior
EVENT: Discus
STATS: Gratzer threw the discus with ease, making it look as if he was throwing a UFO across the horizon. The only Pembroke male to qualify and compete at the New England Track and Field Championships, Gratzer finished second at the Division 4 State Meet with a heave of 145 feet, 1 inch, and a week later, Gratzer placed fifth at the All-State Meet with a personal-best throw of 157-11. At his first-ever New England Championships, Gratzer finished 19th out of 33 discus throwers.

NAME: Terrence and Timothy Gibson, Phil Comeau/Tim Fitzgerald and Ian Peuser
SCHOOL: Rockland
EVENT: 4x100 Relay
STATS: The Rockland High School boys' track team set a school record and pulled out a victory at the State Relays. Meet and set a meet record at the MSTCA Freshman/Sophomore Meet
The 4x100 meter relay team of Terrence Gibson, Ian Peuser, Tim Fitzgerald and Tim Gibson was the same group that set the meet record two weeks ago at the MSTCA Freshman/Sophomore Meet

NAME: Sam Wicks
SCHOOL: Scituate
GRADE: Junior
EVENT: 100
STATS: The junior ran well under pressure, running faster in the finals of big meets all season. His best time of the season was an 11.46 in the finals of the All-Patriot League Meet. He came close to matching that in the final of the Division 3 State Meet with an 11.47 that netted him fourth place. Sam was 12th at the All-State Meet with an 11.50 time.

NAME: Josh Quinnie
SCHOOL: Hanover
GRADE: Sophomore
EVENT: 110 Hurdles, High Jump
STATS: The sophomore made it to All-States in the high hurdles, finishing 11th there, missing the finals by .3 seconds. His time of 15.49 was two hundredths off his best time, set at the Patriot League Meet.. He also competed in the high jump, where he tied his personal best with a jump of 6'1.

No July start for Avalon

Market, economy concerns put off groundbreaking

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The 200-unit Avalon Bay apartment complex will not begin construction this month.

The developers notified the Zoning Board of Appeals that economic and market conditions have prompted them to move forward at a slower pace than anticipated.

It has been over five years since the apartment complex developers received a comprehensive permit approval from the Cohasset Zoning Board of Appeals.

"It was always our intent to evaluate the overall market and economy in general to determine the most opportune time to start construction," said Avalon vice president of development Scott Dale.

The project also has several open issues with the town, including whether the town wants sidewalks on Route 3A and Sohier Street, that they want to finalize before moving forward, Dale said.

Avalon is still committed to the project and Dale said the subject comes up regularly around the office. Right now they will continue to monitor the economic and market situation month to month.

"It's circumstances out of our control," Dale said.

The 62-acre parcel located off Route 3A has its entrance roughly across from Good Sport. It is the former site of Webb-Norfolk, a conveyor belt manufacturer, and D.S. Kennedy Antenna.

The Avalon developers went through several years of appeals, primarily stemming from the Water Commission's concerns about an on-site wastewater treatment system. Avalon reached an agreement with the Water Commission last summer clearing the project to move forward.

Avalon recently completed a 250-unit apartment complex about five miles north on Route 3A at the re-developed Hingham Shipyard. Dale said that complex, which opened in early 2009, is 95 percent occupied.

The Cohasset Avalon complex is one of several large projects that are expected to begin or complete construction this year.

Less than a mile northbound on Route 3A from the future Avalon site, the construction of the Old Colony Square mixed-use development is well underway. In addition to a shopping plaza the Great 'Place' for a concert

Blues Bash to benefit Autism association

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

Since the mid 1990s, Cohasset's own harmonica ace J Place and friends have kicked out the blues jams at Place's annual South Shore Summertime Blues Bash.

Though the independently produced blues bashes have actually been semi-annual — with couple of years off over the last decade or so — they've always been high-energy, festive and well attended musical celebrations.

Each year, Place has gathered his own juke joint-style rockin' blues combos plus numerous friends and peers from the Boston and New England blues club scenes in the spacious, scenic backyard of his residence at 63 Summer St., for an afternoon-long, open air fest of blues and R&B singing, howling and jamming. Dancing, of course, has been welcome .

The all-day blues fests were sponsored in their first few years by the non-profit Boston Blues Society. But for the past couple of years, the event's cause and sponsorship have been more personal for Place. As a member of and the father of a son diagnosed with Asperger's Syndrome, Place has teamed with AANE to produce the annual Blues Bash as a benefit fundraiser for the Association.

Place's annual Blues Bash — an autism fundraiser for AANE — will rock the neighborhood on Summer Street this Sunday (July 12) from noon 'til dusk, with live music starting at 1pm. Admission is a $20 donation.

"Music ties in nicely with a fundraiser such as this," said Place. "It fits well both in terms of music and in terms of therapy for the Asperger's condition."

Place said his son, Mark, now 18, was diagnosed at age 3-1/2 with the Asperger's condition — specifically,

Affordable Housing Trust, CPC at 'impasse'

Long discussion yields no result

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Community Preservation Committee has money and a charge to fund housing projects, but lacks in housing expertise. The Affordable Housing Trust has expertise in affordable housing, a charge to pursue housing projects, but no money.

This was the fundamental problem presented for discussion at Monday's Board of Selectmen meeting.

The Selectmen brought together members of the Affordable Housing Trust and the chairman of the CPC in an attempt to reach a consensus on the issue of affordable housing.

After over an hour of discussion no solution presented itself.

Clark Brewer, a member of the Affordable Housing Trust, boiled the issue down and asked what was the Selectmen's level of commitment to meeting the town's needs for affordable housing.

A direct answer to that question – or where the selectmen stood on the CPC making money available to the Housing Trust – was never answered.

While Town Meeting is the only body that can approve CPC spending, the Housing Trust was looking for some support from the Board of Selectmen.

"We'd like to know if we are going to be a little advisory board that reports to Selectmen or go to CPC every time we need a farthing."
— Jim Hamilton, Affordable Housing Trust

The issue of affordable housing is an important one in Cohasset because the town is well under the state's Chapter 40B mandated 10 percent affordable housing stock.

The conversation was a follow-up to a meeting early June where the Housing Trust sought advice on how to they could get money to complete their charge; specifically the Housing Trust envisioned a portion of community preservation funds being dedicated to the housing trust.

The Housing Partnership Committee, which has morphed into the Affordable Housing Trust Committee, has been working since 2006 to identify affordable housing opportunities and develop zoning bylaws.

Jim Hamilton, chairman of the Housing Trust, praised the CPC's work in funding the revitalization of the historical society's assets and attention to open space.

"An area the CPC is not good at, which I believe is the reason (the Selectmen) created the Housing Partnership, is affordability," Hamilton said.

Funds from the Community Preservation Act can be spent in three specific areas: open space, housing, and historic preservation. Community preservation funding is generated by a 1.5 percent town real estate tax surcharge and some level of state match determined year to year.

To date, neither committee has been successful in bring an affordable housing project to completion. The Housing Partnership attempted to get several affordable housing units at 25 Ripley Road, but the project (as a town effort) was derailed after strong neighborhood and town opposition. Another project at 821 Jerusalem Road for two units of affordable housing is currently tied up in litigation.

CPC funds supported the creation of two apartment units during renovation of the Historical Society's Paul Pratt Building, however the units are not deemed "affordable" by state standards.

CPC money has also been used to update the affordable senior housing complex at 60 Elm St. Since adopting the community preservation act in 2002 CPC Chairman Stuart Ivimey said $1,080,000 had been spent on housing related projects.

From its inception, it was the intent of the Housing Trust, which was established through a Town Meeting vote, to apply to the community preservation committee in order to transfer the portion of the funding earmarked for affordable housing. The only other ways to fund the trust is through donations or by developers via an inclusionary zoning bylaw, which Hamilton said are not reliable sources of income at this time.

Housing Partnership members discussed this matter with the CPC at least two public meetings leading up to a Town Meeting. On both occasions, the CPC was hesitant to hand over the

POLICE BEAT

Unregistered solicitors cause spate of complaints

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

She was described as a skinny woman in tight jeans and a pink T-shirt. She told one resident that she had just graduated from high school and another that she had just finished college. She explained she needed money so she could try to win a trip to London. She also provided Cohasset addresses that did not match.

One man gave her $50 and another resident wrote a check for $200 but meant to give her $20, according to the police log entries.

Police were unable to find the woman, who was described by one caller as "very strange." It was not clear if she was working with two other solicitors whom residents also complained about.

Police located a man that same afternoon who was selling magazines. Further investigation revealed the man has a lengthy criminal history out of Florida for child offenses. He was told to leave town until he obtained the proper solicitor's license; he was told he would be arrested if he returns without a license.

Police said the company, the man and another woman were working for, was Team Xtreme Sales out of Phoenix, Ariz. A heavier woman, whom callers also reported as selling magazines that afternoon, left a Team Xtreme receipt at a house. Police could not locate her.

The calls came in over about a 2-1/2 hour timeframe on Monday (June 29). Callers live on Forest Avenue, Ripley Road, S. Main Street, and Forest Circle.

Chief James Hussey said police encourage residents to call with complaints about door-to-door solicitors. Residents should ask for the solicitor to show a license to solicit in Cohasset.

Under the 2006 Cohasset bylaw, solicitors are required to register with the police where they would apply for a $25 license. They are required to wear a badge issued by the police that includes their name and photograph. In addition solicitors have to provide police with their name, address, date of birth and height, weight and eye color, social security number; dates and times of canvassing activities; name and address of employer; and a brief description of the purposes of the solicitation.

Exceptions to the bylaw are town, state or federal officers or employees on official business; minors under 18 unless in connection with a commercial activity; candidates for public office or campaign workers; those promoting political causes and those soliciting for charitable organizations unless those solicitors are paid.

Wedding parking

It may have been the perfect storm on Government Island: long-awaited great weather, the Fourth of July holiday, and a wedding reception for 80 guests at the Lightkeepers Residence. But for those at the wedding reception – an apparent lack of parking for the guests caused a stir. Police were called but could not tell who was a wedding guest and who was parked illegally without a sticker.

Police tried to work with the wedding guests to find overflow parking spaces.

Chief Hussey said he would work with the Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation about creating some kind of temporary placard that wedding or other function guests could put on their dashboards.

The caller initially wanted 40 cars towed to make room for his guests. Police ended up tagging about 25 cars, Hussey said. Apparently many of the cars were parked by beach-goers heading to Bassing Beach for a day at the harbor.

Minors

Two 19-year-old Cohasset men have been charged with being minors transporting alcohol following a traffic stop last Wednesday (July 1) at about 9:15 p.m. on Forest Avenue.

Chief Hussey said an officer was conducting traffic enforcement and clocked the pickup the men were in as traveling 47 in a 30 mph zone. The officer pulled the pickup over and observed a 30-pack of beer in the truck's bed. In speaking with the operator and passenger, the officer determined that neither man was 21. Both were arrested.

The driver was also cited for speeding.

Warrant

A 57-year-old Scituate woman was arrested following a traffic stop at CJC Highway and lower King Street at 11:38 a.m. on Thursday (July 2). Police observed her run the red light by Stop and Shop and pulled her over. Further investigation revealed there was an active warrant for her arrest. She was charged with the warrant and cited for not stopping at a red light.

Bounced check

Police provided a local business with assistance in talking with a customer who had bounced a check and had not paid up. "We put the business and customer together to hopefully resolve it," Chief Hussey said. Hussey explained it is better in this type of instance to try and resolve the issue before going to court. If the bounced check continues to be a problem then court action can be taken and the customer can be charged with larceny by scheme, he said. The incident was reported on Monday (June 29) at about 12:30 p.m.

MV crashes

• A 2007 Volvo, owned by a Cohasset resident was parked legally along Border Street when an unidentified motor vehicle apparently struck the unoccupied Volvo and did not stop. The owner reported the incident to police at 6:35 p.m. on Monday (June 29). Police observed damage on the left rear driver's side; there was also some green paint that had transferred onto the car. There were no witnesses.

• A four-car chain reaction resulting in no apparent injuries but in all the vehicles, which were all traveling north, having to be towed, occurred at about 3:35 p.m. on Friday (July 3) on Route 3A (CJC Highway). Police said a 2006 Lincoln, operated by a Hull resident, had stopped behind other cars that had stopped at the lights at Stop & Shop. A 2005 Lexus, operated by a Cohasset resident, stopped behind the Lincoln and a 2000 Jeep, also operated by a Cohasset resident, stopped behind the Lexus. The driver of a 2000 Dodge, who is a Scituate resident, apparently became distracted and struck the Jeep, that then hit the Lexus that hit the Lincoln.

The Scituate driver was cited for following too closely.

• On Saturday (July 4) at about 11 a.m. police received a report from an employee in the village that her 2005 Kia had been struck by a silver Porsche convertible that did not stop and was headed toward Scituate. Police are investigating.

• A Beach Street resident reported that his fence and wall had been damaged in an apparent hit and run accident. The report came in at about 2:50 p.m. on Sunday (July 5). There were some tire marks by the six-foot vinyl fence and some stones were also knocked out of a stonewall. There were no witnesses, police said.

• The bartender in a King Street eatery reported that her car was struck in the parking lot by a silver Volvo with Vermont plates in an apparent hit and run. The 2004 Mazda had minor scratches to the front driver's side bumper, police said. The incident was reported at about 7:20 p.m. on Sunday (July 5). Police are investigating.

Gatorade

Some teens tossed a full bottle of Gatorade out the window at a woman who was walking near the 300 block of Atlantic Avenue at about 6:54 p.m. on Monday (June 29). Police said music was blaring from the car as it passed by. The bottle nearly hit the woman, police said. The victim provided police with a good description of the car and a plate number that police are working with and hope to identify the perpetrators shortly.

Attempted B&Es

• Officers checked out the area around a Black Rock Road caller's home after the resident called saying someone was jiggling the handle and trying to get into the house. The call came in at 10:30 p.m. on Monday (June 29). Police found no evidence of forced entry but advised the resident to keep the doors locked.

• Police believe that a series of sounds reported by a Forest Avenue resident starting at about 4:30 a.m. on Sunday (July 5) may have been caused by the newspaper delivery person. Police located the newspaper delivery person, who checked out, they said.

• At about 2p.m. on Saturday (July 4), a caretaker reported a potential attempted break-in to the King Street home where she works. She heard someone at the breezeway door but did not see anyone. She walked into the garage and saw a man with a dark blue hooded jacket and dark pants. He did not look back and walked down the driveway. The caretaker initially contacted the daughter of the person she cares for, who thought it might have been someone they knew. When that turned out not to be the case, the daughter told the caretaker to file a police report.

Summons

A 30-year-old Weymouth man is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation following a traffic stop on Sunday (July 5) at about 10:20 a.m. Police had observed the car the man was driving tailgating on Route 3A near Pond Street and ran the plate. The computer revealed the man's license had expired and was non-renewable. He was also cited for following too closely.

Wadleigh Park

On Saturday (July 4) at about 7 p.m. parking got out of hand at Wadleigh Park, which is at the corner of Jerusalem Road in Cohasset and Atlantic Avenue in Hull. Police received complaints about cars parked on the lawn and said the rocks had been moved so cars could drive onto the island. Police ordered wreckers for three cars, but some of the owners returned before the wreckers arrived. Police also tagged several cars.

Erratic driver

Police responded to a 911 call about an erratically operated silver PT Cruiser on Route 3A northbound on Sunday (July 5) at about 6 p.m.

An officer heard the radio transmission and drove up 3A where he observed the car make a sharp right onto Route 228 and continue onto Hull Street. The officer stopped the car and asked for the operator's license and registration. The Hull man, 43, was visibly shaking, police said. There was no odor of alcohol but police had the driver checked out by the ambulance. The Hingham K-9 unit arrived to search for possible drugs but none were found. In the end the operator checked out, but because of his emotional state the passenger, a 43-year-old Dorchester man, agreed to drive.

Based on witnesses' observation, the Hull man was cited for driving to endanger, crossing the double yellow lines and speeding.

Missing wallet

A Chelmsford resident called police to report a missing wallet with a Harley Davidson inscription on it and thought the wallet might have been left at a Cohasset restaurant over the weekend. The missing wallet, which has not turned up in Cohasset, was reported at about 9:19 a.m. on Monday (June 29).

Gas tank

A Jerusalem Road resident reported that a 6-gallon plastic portable gas tank that was full of gasoline was taken from his boat. The incident was reported at about 4:45 p.m. on Friday (July 3). Police notified the harbormaster, who had not seen anything suspicious.

Market, economy concerns put off Avalon groundbreaking project has 16 apartment units.

Less than a mile away from Avalon on Sohier Street Abbott Development has planning board approval to build a 27 single-family home condominium community on the Cook Estate property. Construction was expected to begin on that project this month as well. The Planning Board is waiting to receive and then endorse the final plans for the project.

Given the large swath of land and high elevation it has been suggested that the Avalon property could be one of the few locations for a wind turbine in town. However, Dale said Avalon is not pursuing the type of development at this time.

"We haven't made any move in that direction," said Dale.

As a direct abutter to the proposed Cohasset Height two-turbine project, Avalon closely followed the Planning Board public hearings on the project. The Planning Board denied the Cohasset Heights project in May.

History of the Avalon project

The Avalon project was issued a comprehensive permit from the ZBA in November 2003 for 200 apartments. It was approved as a 40-B project. Under Chapter 40B, a state law, a town's zoning board can approve affordable housing developments under flexible rules if at least 20-25 percent of the units have long-term affordability restrictions. Towns that are under the 10 percent threshold of their housing stock deemed as affordable by state standards are vulnerable to 40-B projects.

Twenty-five percent of the units, or 50, will be considered affordable. The state encourages rental housing, and because all 200 Avalon units would be rentals, all units — affordable and market rate — would be counted toward the town's affordable housing inventory. However, Cohasset currently has 76 units (or 2.8 percent) of affordable housing. The project will bring Cohasset within about 30 units to compliance with 40-B.

State budget approved; town budget matches

When the fiscal 2010 town budget was approved in March there were many state funding numbers were considered moving targets. Uncertainty about the amount of local state aid Cohasset would end up receiving nearly caused the Selectmen to move Town Meeting to a May date.

Yet, even in May, numbers at the state level were still in flux. Town Manager Bill Griffin commented at a recent Board of Selectmen's meeting he was glad the town didn't move the date because towns didn't know much more about local aid numbers than Cohasset did back in March.

With the $27 billion state budget signed by Governor Deval Patrick last week, Griffin reported the town's projected state aid numbers were within $20,000 of the actual numbers.

"That is good news," said Griffin in an e-mail.

The town's approved budget projected $2,286,206 in state aid; the approved state budget will provide $2,247,393.

Unlike some of the larger cities and towns that depend heavily on state aid to maintain their local services, state aid only accounts for about six percent of the Cohasset municipal budget.

Stormwater Committee needs members

In February, Selectmen voted to create a five-member Stormwater Advisory Committee. They are still seeking members with specific expertise or knowledge to volunteer. A couple of residents have expressed interest, but not enough to form the board. The Town Manager is currently accepting applications from interested residents.

The Stormwater Advisory Committee will take on myriad tasks including conducting public education activities in support of stormwater remediation, providing opportunities for public participation in stormwater and watershed remediation discussions, conducting an annual inventory of flood prone areas in Cohasset, seeking funding sources for stormwater remediation and advising the Board of Selectmen on stormwater-related capital expenditures.

Liaisons from the Board of Selectmen, Board of Health, Conservation Commission, Water Commission, Sewer Commission, Planning Board, School Committee, and Department of Emergency Management will be participating as well.

Appointments to the Stormwater Advisory Committee will first be made from interested members of the liaison boards and committees listed above, then from volunteers from the community, with preference given to people with relevant professional qualifications, including licensed professional engineers in hydrological or environmental specialties, architects and attorneys specializing in environmental law, and public relations professionals.

Interested candidates are requested to submit a letter of interest and resume to Town Manager Bill Griffin, Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025 or by e-mail to: wgriffin@townofcohasset.org money without having a specific project to consider. The CPC has over $100,000 in its affordable housing account.

As the town's dedicated committee to affordable housing Hamilton said they are the "experts" and, if they had access to funding, they would be able to act upon prospective projects more quickly.

"Right now there is a six-month cycle (to get approval from Town Meeting) whether we want $20,000 or $100,000," Hamilton said. "It's a completely flawed process."

If the CPC turned over a portion of its money to the Housing Trust, the current several step vetting process to go before Town Meeting would be streamlined. According to the bylaw Housing Trust expenditures need approval from Housing Trust and the Board of Selectmen.

"We're the ones who walk in the woods, pound the pavement looking to initiate projects," Hamilton said, adding they are looking for guidance and support from the Selectmen.

"We'd like to know if we are going to be a little advisory board that reports to Selectmen or go to CPC every time we need a farthing," Hamilton said.

CPC point of view

Stuart Ivimey, chairman of the CPC and the sole committee member in attendance, said he was glad the town had experts on what can be very confusing and ever changing world of affordable housing.

"Fundamentally, the CPC views itself as bank, we don't portend to be an expert," said Ivimey. However, he said the CPC generally likes to see the experts on various issues in town to come forward with specific projects to fund.

"We are uncomfortable taking a lump of money and handing it to another committee…we like to fund projects not to fund committees," Ivimey said.

As a general philosophy, Ivimey said the CPC tries to keep in mind where the community preservation money comes from – a voluntary tax.

"We don't think it is prudent to spend money on divisive and controversial concepts," said Ivimey, bringing up the outpouring of opposition to the 25 Ripley Road project brought forward by the Housing Partnership. "When we see something like that, it's not something we want to get involved with."

Responding to Ivimey's comments, Housing Trust member Tom Callahan said the Housing Trust was an alternate bank to the CPC, one with a specific purpose and statute.

"Let's not kid ourselves – (affordable housing) is all controversial and divisive," but it needs to be done, he said. "In all frankness after 25 Ripley Road the perception is support is wavering (for affordable housing)…We are worried that without the means, without teeth, to do our job, then what's the point?"

Selectmen respond

Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson at several points reminded the Housing Trust and CPC members to keep the discussion geared toward the future and a solution to the issue at hand, rather than dragging out details of the past.

For Selectmen Fred Koed he agreed with Hamilton the process was flawed.

"There has got to be a better mechanism," he said. The five-to-seven month timeline to get before town meeting was a long wait and, Koed added, it seemed even when there was a town meeting (most recently the special town meeting held in June) the application didn't come before the CPC despite requests for consideration.

"(The process) is not working right now for anyone," said Koed.

Selectmen vice chair Karen Quigley said she was bothered by the fact the Housing Trust has not been able to make their case before the CPC.

"It is unacceptable to me that two committees in Town Hall with common interests can't work together," Quigley said. She suggested that if money was transferred from the CPC accounts to the Housing Trust by Town Meeting that the CPC could still weigh in on the expenditure.

Eventually, Carlson asked Ivimey point blank if the CPC would be in favor of making the money available to the Housing Trust.

"I'm not in favor of it…and I think the majority of my board would echo that," Ivimey said. In order to go before Town Meeting, the CPC has to recommend the expenditure.

"We're at an impasse between the two boards," said Quigley.

The Selectmen asked the board to get together to see if they could come to some sort of compromise.

Hamilton said by phone on Tuesday the Housing Trust planned to go before the CPC with their application requesting the funding transfer later this month.

"Then we'll have our answer," Hamilton said.

Housing Trust in brief

The Affordable Housing Trust was established by a majority vote at the 2008 annual Town Meeting and was expected to assume many of the same duties — plus some new ones — performed by the housing partnership over the last few years.

The housing trust model was developed in a response to the state's Chapter 40B affordable housing law in order to be proactive in the housing market. It is designed to have funding at its disposal in order to actively seek projects and not be rigidly tied to the Town Meeting cycle.

According to the Housing Trust's bylaw, the funds in the trust can be derived from developers, gifts, grants, donations or other cash payment to the trust for the purpose of providing low- to moderate-income housing. Other Massachusetts towns, including Hingham, Hanover and Duxbury are moving toward or already using this model of using CPC funding to support their housing trusts.

ZBA closes hearing; intends to deny application

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"I see no reason to continue this hearing."
— Woody Chittick, Chairman

The Zoning Board of Appeals closed the book on the proposed 40B development at 25 Ripley Road and is preparing a decision to deny the application.

The filing, put forth by Cohasset resident, property owner and developer, Will Charles, proposes transforming the current single-family residence at the corner of Sohier Street and Ripley Road into seven condominium units, two of which would be deemed affordable by state standards.

At previous hearings on the project held in May and June the Zoning Board gave the applicant specific items they wanted to see by the next hearing – a updated comprehensive site plan, a parking plan, a landscape plan, a lighting plan, a septic determination from the Board of Health, to name a few.

None of those items were ever presented to the ZBA.

In a discussion after the closing of the hearing, the zoning board indicated they would be drafting a denial of the application with help from town counsel. The ZBA's reasoning was driven primarily by the lack of evidence and complete plans presented during the public hearing process.

ZBA chairman Woody Chittick said they received a letter from the applicant's attorney, Robert Barrett, since the last hearing.

"Basically (it said) we have what we're going to get," Chittick said. The zoning board sent a reply reiterating the items the zoning board required to make a decision yet, the board received no further information. "I see no reason to continue this hearing."

Neither the applicant Will Charles nor his attorney Robert Barrett were present at the zoning board meeting Tuesday night. Scheduled for the first hearing of the evening the Zoning Board put off the hearing on 25 Ripley Road in anticipation of the attendance of the applicant or his representative. They proceeded with the two other hearings scheduled for the night.

Around 8:30p.m., the ZBA returned to the Ripley Road project. No one representing the applicant had arrived, so they allowed audience members, mostly neighbors of the proposed project, to speak.

Chittick said the applicant could still petition the board to withdraw the application "without prejudice," which means the project can file again with no time restraints. The project was withdraw without prejudice once before in January.

Will Charles declined to comment on the project when reached by phone Wednesday morning.

The zoning board members commented on the highly unusual and unique set of circumstances they were dealing with in this comprehensive permit application.

"Part of the process here is much of what is normally submitted in a 40B application was sought by us and denied," said ZBA member Peter Goedecke.

Chittick agreed the circumstances were unusual, "most applicants want their project succeed."

The neighbors represented by Hap Pompeo of 11 Ripley Road thanked the zoning board for its "professionalism and understanding" throughout the process. Several neighbors asked questions about where the project goes from this point, particularly if the ZBA denies the application.

"I can't even guess what (the applicant) may do," said Chittick. Procedurally, he said, if the applicant does not like the ZBA's decision projects under the state's chapter 40B affordable housing law can appeal the ZBA's decision to the state's Department of Housing and Community Development (DHCD), which oversees affordable housing projects. If the zoning board or the applicant does not like the decision made by DHCD there is another appeal level in Superior Court.

"It might be the end of the beginning as opposed to the beginning of the end," said Goedecke.

The ZBA briefly went over how to frame its decision. Most of the items mentioned had to do with the lack of physical plans presented to the board and lack of cooperation from the applicant in providing the paperwork the ZBA said they needed to render a positive decision.

The zoning board members typically draft up their own decision, but given the complex legalities associated with 40B applications they are having town counsel start a draft and will review it at their next scheduled meeting in August. The ZBA has until September to render a decision.

Black Rock closed Wednesday afternoon

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

As of Wednesday afternoon, Black Rock beach had to be closed for swimming.

During the summer months, the Board of Health takes samples of the ocean water in five locations in Cohasset to ensure the water is safe for swimming and other recreational activities.

Health Inspector Tara Tradd sampled the water on Tuesday and sent the sample off to G&L Labs in Quincy. The results were 5,800 colonies of enterococci per 100 milliliters.

If tests reveal a one-time "spike" of more than 104 colonies of enterococci per 100 milliliters of water beaches are closed. Tradd immediately went to the beach Wednesday afternoon to post signs and inform beach-goers of the closure.

A re-sample was scheduled for Thursday and if it came back at a safe level, swimming would be allowed at the beach over the weekend.

Tradd was not sure of the cause for the atypical results. The other beach results were well within the standards and the same was taken before heavy rains on Tuesday afternoon.

Beaches can also be closed if the geometric mean of the last five testing results at a beach (not during a storm event) is over 35 cfu/100 milliliters. The geometric mean may indicate that sample levels are consistently high enough over time to post the beach in order to protect the public from possible swimming-related illness.

Black Rock beach is located in North Cohasset, near Hull's Atlantic Avenue. The open water beach is typically flushed with each tide.

Bassing's Beach, the Yacht Club, Sandy Cove, Sandy Beach and Black Rock beach are tested weekly during the summer. The results are posted on the Department of Public Health's website.

Results from the other beaches are as follows: Bassing's Beach/Sailing Club – 41 cfu/100 milliliters, Yacht Club – less than 10 cfu/100 milliliters, Sandy Cove – 31 cfu/100 milliliters, Sandy Beach – 20 cfu/100 milliliters.

In an effort to improve communication about beach closures the Board of Health will be using a flag system as well as updating the office's voicemail with the results of the water testing each Wednesday afternoon.

A yellow flag flown in the harbor and a red flag with a crossed out swimmer will be posted at Sandy Beach will indicate no swimming.

The most common health effects related to swimming in polluted waters could include ear infections, conjunctivitis and rashes. The most common ailment is gastro-intestinal disorders, stemming from swimmers swallowing water.

For more information on beach closures, please contact the board of health at (781) 383-4116.

Young Cohasset pianists hit the right note

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

SUMMER

Hello Cohasset. I hope that everyone enjoyed the 4th of July weekend last week. It was so nice and warm and I hope that as you are reading this it will be warm again. It finally does feel a little bit like summer and the kids as we all know, are not fazed by weather. Rain or shine, cold or warm, most are still doing all of their summer activities.

OH BOY!

We have a brand new baby boy in town to talk about! John (Jay) Michael Naples, Jr. was born June 30, 2009. Jay weighed in at 9 pounds, 10 ounces and was 20 inches long. Katie and John Naples (mom and dad) along with Jays three big sisters, Samantha who is 8, Molly who is 4 and Emmy who is 2, are so excited and thrilled with his arrival. In addition, his grandparents, Irene and David Lord of Cohasset and Frances and Robert Naples of New York are so happy as well. We know that this bouncing baby boy is loved by all, congratulations!

STONEHILL

Stonehill College recently named Mary A. Previte, a member of the class of 2011 to the dean's list for the Spring 2009 semester. Congratulations on a job well done.

HOBART

Two Cohasset students recently graduated with bachelors degrees during the Commencement Ceremonies of Hobart and William Smith College on May 17, 2009. Allison Dean and Daniel Allen both were honored at the ceremonies. It is wonderful to write about this news, best of luck to you both.

BUSINESS

Sydney Johnston graduated from the Tuck School of Business at Dartmouth on June 13th, 2009. Sydney's parents, Diane and Robert, are so proud of all your accomplishments. Sydney graduated from Middlebury College magna cum laude in 2002 with a degree in International studies. Congratulations!

BRYANT

Another Cohasset student, was named to the Bryant University Spring semester dean's list. Congratulations to Kristen Dooley, a junior in International Business received this honor.

LAUNCH PARTY

Hey Cohasset, coming up this weekend tomorrow, July 11th is the annual Cohasset Sailing Club Summer Launch Party. All adult family and friends of the sailing club are invited to a lobster and chicken feast and a silent auction to benefit the club. The party will be held from 6pm till 11pm rain or shine. Dinner will be served between 6:30 and 8:30 pm BYOB. Tickets are $50 pp payable to the Cohasset Sailing Club and are available by calling Joyce Driscoll 781- 383-0122 or Claudia McKeon 781- 383-6125.

Donations for auction items are welcome– please contact Jim Porter 781-383-2029.

DOUBLE FEATURE

Cohasset Dramatic Club, in cooperation with Cohasset Recreation Department, will present a double feature of musical theater entertainment this summer with both "Annie, Jr." and "The Wedding Singer." Combined, both casts will include 74 young people, with 60 in the cast of "Annie Jr.," ages 8 through 13, and 14 in "The Wedding Singer," ages 15 through 19. They have been rehearsing since before school let out in May and are now in the final stages of rehearsals for the upcoming performances.

Both shows offer a musical comedy experience for audiences of all ages. "Annie Jr." is a slightly shortened version of the original show, running 60 to 80 minutes in length. "The Wedding Singer" is a musical comedy based on the Adam Sandler movie of the same name.

Show dates are July 17, 18 and 19, with "Annie, Jr." being presented at 10 a.m., on the 17th, and at 3 p.m. on the 18th and 19th. "The Wedding Singer" takes the stage on the same three dates with all performances at 7:30 p.m. All shows will take place in the air-conditioned Cohasset High School auditorium. Tickets are $12 each and are available at Paperscapes in downtown Cohasset, Buttonwood Books and Toys on Chief Justice Cushing Highway in Cohasset, by reservation on the CDC ticket line at 617-697-2115 or at the door. All seats are general admission. Call Lisa Pratt at 617-852-0091 for more information or leave a message on the ticket line.

Enjoy the show!

PIANO AWARDS

Congratulations to Cohasset piano students Miles Morin, Brianna Sheldon and Julia Herzfelder for winning awards in the South Shore Conservatory's ninth annual Piano Competition. The competition took place on Saturday, May 30, in Cox Hall at the Conservatory's Hingham campus.

Miles, a student of piano instructor Hui-Min Wang, took first place in his division. Brianna, a student of Margaret Li, placed second in hers, while Julia, also a student of Hui-Min Wang, placed third in her division. As winners, all three students performed in a special winners concert on Sunday, May 31.

Devin Chen of Norwell placed as the overall winner and received the Larence H. Smith Award for Outstanding Piano Solo Performance.

SAVANNAH

The following Cohasset students were named to the dean's list at the Savannah College of Art and Design in Savannah, Ga., for the 2008 winter quarter.

Justin Frederic Wood, who is seeking a bachelor of fine arts degree from the School of Design.

Kathleen Elizabeth Dewaal, who is seeking a bachelor of fine arts degree from the School of Building Arts. Kathleen also earned dean's list status for the 2009 spring quarter.

Caroline McElhinny, who is a photography major and is seeking a fine arts degree, was named to the dean's list for the 2009 spring quarter.

Full-time undergraduate students who earn a grade point average of 3.5 or above for the quarter receive recognition on the dean's list.

ST. LAWRENCE

Cohasset's Suzanne M. Lewis was among the 494 students who received a degree at St. Lawrence University's commencement ceremony May 17, 2009, on the campus in Canton, N.Y.

Suzanne graduated from Thayer Academy in Braintree, and received a degree cum laude in Spanish and fine arts.

NORTHEASTERN

Northeastern University recognizes students who distinguish themselves academically during the course of the school year. The following Cohasset students were recently named to the 2009 spring semester dean's list, which ended in May 2009:

Jacqueline M. Cahill, a business administration major; Kiersten L. Swain, who is majoring in communication studies; Casey L. Cavanaro, a communication studies major; Jonathan Grimm, who is majoring in communication studies; Samuel Steele, an entrepreneurship and new venture management major; Elizabeth Fegreus, who is majoring in liberal arts, non-science; Rita K. Carpenter, a nursing major; and Alison Krupczak, who is majoring in nursing.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Pologruto.

Dawn Meehan, daughter of Barbara Meehan of Cohasset, and Thomas Pologruto, son of Maria and George Makin IV of Collingdale, Pa., were married May 16, 2009, at St. Edward Confessor Church in Syosset, N.Y.

The bride was given in marriage by her grandfather, Larry Vangel.

Matron of honor was Jennifer Matthews, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Kathryn Amano, Kim Bigelow, Jeannine Cavallaro, Maria Dolan, Alyson Kass-Eisler, Kristina Lund and Casey Walter. Junior bridesmaids were Katie and Kelli Dolan.

Brother of the groom George Makin V of Collingdale, Pa., was the best man. Groomsmen were Alex Battles, Frank Ingiosi, Paul Ingiosi, Rob Fuller, Robert Meehan, Jon Moriarty and Sean Taggart.

The bride is a graduate of Milton Academy and Wellesley College. She is employed as the director of admissions and student affairs at Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory's Watson School of Biological Sciences in Cold Spring Harbor, N.Y.

The groom is a graduate of Monsignor Bonner High School in Pennsylvania and received his bachelor of arts degree and master of science degree from the University of Pennsylvania and his doctorate degree in biophysics from Harvard University. He works in finance in New York City.

Following a reception at The Fox Hollow in Woodbury, N.Y., the couple honeymooned in Bermuda. They reside in Huntington, N.Y.

Diane G. Johnston of Cohasset and Robert Frederick Johnston of Hamilton announce the engagement of their daughter, Sydney Homewood Johnston, to Charles Patrick McConathy of McCoy, Colo.

Both are graduates of Middlebury College, where they met in 2001.

The bride-to-be graduated from the Tuck School of Business at Dartmouth College in June 2009.

Her fiancé is the manager of New Energy Development for the State of Colorado.

The wedding is scheduled for Aug. 14, 2010, at Yarmony Creek Ranch in McCoy, Colo.

Blues Bash to benefit Autism association

a variant known as PDD-NOS or Pervasive Developmental Disorder Not Otherwise Specified.

Place explained in his son's case the condition includes general developmental delays, such as language and communications skills.. But he noted he was able to find effective treatment through an intervention program early on.

Asperger's Syndrome (AS) is a condition falling within the autism spectrum. It's generally regarded as a neurological and/or developmental disorder affecting two-way social interaction, verbal and non-verbal communication.

Other noted symptoms of the condition include inflexibility of thought and all-absorbing narrow areas of interest. Although in some cases, individuals have shown talents such as strong memory skills and excelling knowledge of math and science.

Music is another area where people with autism/Asperger's have shown surprising talents. One of them, Place believes, is his son.

"Mark (Place) is a self-taught musician, a really fine bass player," said Place, adding that he's a single parent with sole custody.

"Mark can be incredibly insightful. He has a real affinity for music, and he's also great at drawing. Mark has been at the Pilgrim Academy, which is a special needs school in Plymouth, and he's really thrived there in the last three years. He was able to graduate, and I believe he's really progressed in general," Place said.

AANE's mission is to foster awareness respect, acceptance, and support for individuals with AS and related conditions and their families, according to its website at www.aane.org.

J Place's annual Blues Bash — an autism fundraiser— will rock the neighborhood on Summer Street (July 12) from noon 'til dusk, with live music starting at 1pm. Admission is a $20 donation.

"Music ties in nicely with a fundraiser such as this. It fits well both in terms of music and in terms of therapy for the Asperger's condition."

— J Place

Place performs regularly with two blues/R&B bands, both of which will be on the bill at Sunday's Blues Bash.. First, scheduled at 3-3:45pm, the Drift Away Trio, whose motto is Rhythm, Rhyme, and Harmony like the lyrics to the song of the same name. Then, as headlining act at 6-8pm, the five-piece J Place Band with special guests.

Both bands include veteran pianist/keyboardist and Hingham resident Joe Micarelli. A regular with the South Shore's long-running Fat City Band for over 25 years, Micarelli also now teaches piano full-time at his home, with a current schedule of over 40 students.

Other acts booked for the show include the Charlie Keating Band, playing what it calls Down 'n Dirty Roadhouse Blues, and the Gregg Miller Group, featuring South Shore singer/guitarist Miller. Also, singer/guitarist/DJ John Kelly, a former bassist with '70s soul/R&B hitmakers Tavares ("It Only Takes a Minute"), performing a set that Place said will be partly a tribute to Michael Jackson.

Emceeing the festival is Peter Black, host of 95.9FM WATD's "Wide World of Blues" (Monday-Friday, 10pm to 2am).

In addition, the event includes raffles and a silent auction including a pair of tickets to see Bonnie Raitt and Taj Mahal on Aug. 15th at the Bank of America Pavilion in Boston.

J Place's Drift Away Trio are also playing out this weekend at the Snug in Hingham on Saturday, the previous evening to Blues Bash.

Children's Hospital Tennis Benefit July 17-20

The Cohasset Tennis Benefit, scheduled for July 17 through 20.

The tournament begins with an evening reception at the Lightkeeper's residence on Friday, July 17, followed by tennis matches on private courts throughout Cohasset on July 18 and 19. Cost is $250 per team. Mixed-doubles teams play within three categories; pros, intermediate and social.

Proceeds benefit the Children's Hospital "Extraordinary Needs Fund," which covers hotel, transportation and other expenses for families visiting a sick or injured child.

The event this year is dedicated to Paul Carroll, a beloved friend, tireless tennis enthusiast and a steadfast champion behind the tournament since it's inception more than a half century ago.

For more information about the tournament or to register, visit www.cohassettennisbenefit.org.

Science, civics do not take a vacation

CSCR

JACK BUCKLEY

The student data is submitted to town and state officials to help managers make informed policy decisions that safeguard our fragile resources.

School might be out, but science and civics are not on vacation in Cohasset. More than 50 Cohasset teens, joined by 15 Scituate peers and a half dozen Derby Academy students, are dedicating their talents this summer to the monitoring, assessment, and analysis of our coastal habitats. The student data is submitted to town and state officials to help managers make informed policy decisions that safeguard our fragile resources. Among the tasks to be completed this summer by eight distinct student teams are monitoring the health of wetlands, collecting and analyzing bacteria counts, assessing harbor health, and identifying and quantifying the invertebrates that make their home in the sediments of marsh ecosystems.

With the incessant rains of June, CSCR's unique research on the role of biofilm as a contributor to harbor bacteria counts holds great promise as a keystone project in understanding harbor health. This year's biofilm research team, Hannah Rawson, James McKelvey, Chrissy Kalpin and Julia Canney, is quite unique for two reasons – they collectively represent 10 years of CSCR experience in spite of their youth and the project team leaders are CHS class of '09 scholars Jean Thomae and August Oddleifson. Thomae and Oddleifson pioneered the research project as Marjot Foundation scholars and documented the existence of enterococci bacteria in biofilm as well as its correlation to rainfall. This year's team will additionally focus on identifying bacteria species in order to better understand this compelling biological phenomenon.

Additional bacteria analysis will continue this summer as CSCR student researchers team up with the Cohasset Board of Health under the leadership of Tara Tradd. Each year, CSCR students split samples with the Board of Health. One split of the sample is analyzed by CSCR students while the other sample split is shipped off to a professional lab for bacteria analysis. The student results are then compared to the professional results. Consistently, CSCR student data is statistically comparable to that produced by the professional lab with which the town holds a contract. This year's crew of highly talented and dedicated students – Tara Goodwin, Caroline Collins, Ashley Howard, Michelle Berube, Rhiana Fitts, Greta Shwachman and Logan Pratt – will no doubt produce professional quality data.

Another veteran research team headed by Dr. Anne Thomae includes Megan Richardson, Tori Lehr, Margaux Donze, Melissa Campedelli, Johanna Regan, Jenny Magruder, Madeline Altholtz, Ellie Baumgarten and Paige Collins. Richardson and Lehr return as team leaders of the National Pollution Discharge Elimination System, or NPDES project, an assessment of water quality in Cohasset Harbor initiated last year in partnership with Veolia Water, NA. Veolia Water manages Cohasset's wastewater treatment plant and as plant manager is legally obligated to assess the quality of water into which it discharges treated wastewater. Veolia Water and CSCR student researchers have formed a unique partnership as stewards of our fragile harbor ecosystem.

By comparison, CSCR's wetland monitoring teams provide equally important data and understanding about our coastal marshes. Teams document the reach of tidal flushing in critical habitats such as Inner Little Harbor (via Cat Dam), Jacobs Meadow (via James Brook), Mariners' Park (via the Parker Ave cut), Musquashicut Pond (via the upper reaches of the Gulf River), and Broad Cove (via the Hingham Harbor culvert, a Derby Academy partnership). Data is collected to determine how best to manage the restriction so sufficient salt water floods the wetland, thereby allowing for a healthy, marine wetland ecosystem to thrive. Wetland Monitoring projects, therefore, share common research objectives – to collect, manage and analyze standard wetland habitat data according to CZM (Coastal Zone Management) protocols. Wetland teams are comprised of the following students. The Little Harbor Team: Jamie Timothy, Tucker Oddleifson, Morgan McCarthy, Colleen Ryan, Maggie O'Grady, Emily Baumgarten, Ellie Tedeschi, Carly Oddleifson, Aniko Haber, Brendan Kearney, Emily Castro, Taylor Golz and Will Popp; Team Musquashicut, the Scituate High School team: Ben Rivera, Heather Jenkins, Kelly Jenkins, Maeve Dawley, Bob Norton, John Arnold, Dhrumil Patel, Michelle Parris, Alexander Seelis, Rachel Shea, Hal Parskey, Steven Crowley, Keith Provost and David Lyons; The Jacobs Meadow Team: Jeff Charles, Andrew Littauer, Cam Washak, Ian Quinlan, Jack Wilson, Mike Monaco, John McGoldrick, Travers Craven, Robbie Hill, Chris Hayes, Jackson Dean, Jack Thomae and Andrew Leighton; The Parker Ave. Cut Team: Kyle Healy, William Choi, Sam Green, Meghann Salerno, Sara Mavilia, Cally Altholtz, Natalie Dignam, Olivia Atkins, Lauren Hayes, Dom Brennan and Annie Robinson.

Julia Canney reads the refractometer: Salinity is measured by use of a refractometer that measures the refraction of light caused by salts in the water.

Wetland Monitoring interns, Jessie Fitts and Fiona McBride (Class of '09), have paid their dues at CSCR, entering their fifth year of research. As a result, they have been hired to share their expertise with students and to assist wetland faculty leaders and veteran teachers Jerry Crowley, Annette Moore, Bill Sanford, Jeff Kotter, Joy Higgins and Laura Giuliano.

As a departing "gift" to the town of Cohasset, Class of '09 graduates Oddleifson, Thomae, Baumgarten, Fitts, McBride and Margaret Goodwin will lay the foundation for CSCR students to publish a State of the Harbor Report for the town of Cohasset. As a culminating act of scientific research and civic engagement, this "senior-driven" State of the Harbor Report will stand as the authoritative source of known research in Cohasset Harbor and as a model of student achievement at CSCR.

As a footnote, readers may want to know that CSCR provides these experiences to our community's students without charging any program fees, membership dues or tuition schedules. CSCR depends upon grants, foundation support, corporate partnerships and community generosity. Readers wishing to support our mission by making a tax-deductible donation to CSCR may do so by using our PayPal donation link at www.ccscr.org, or may mail contributions to CSCR at 40 Parker Ave.

Deer Hill finishes year on high note

THE ARTS

KATHRYN HILLMAN

The Deer Hill School hosted its 2009 Spring Concert recently. However, because of the large number of students participating in band and chorus there were two performances on consecutive evenings. On Wednesday May 10, the grade four Tuesday morning band performed along with the advanced chorus and the fifth grade band. The grade four Wednesday morning band and the third grade chorus performed.

The fourth-grade bands, directed by Mr. Biagini, performed a series of songs, which showcased their progression throughout the year. The band began with some of their earliest pieces; "Rolling Along," the band's first "real" song. Another early piece, "Morning," featured the flutes and clarinets, which the director noted are often drowned out by louder sections. However, the band soon progressed into more difficult matter – "Old MacDonald Had A Band" featured call-and-response with each section playing a distinct melody. "Hard Rock Blues" also had distinct part differentiation, as well as a wide variety of dynamics. The blues/rock combination was a huge crowd pleaser. The final pieces of the night were both full-length pieces for complete concert bands. "Fanfare and March" and "Down The Field March" were both strong, well-performed pieces, featuring the brass and drum sections especially. The fourth grade band has made monumental progress over the course of the year.

The fifth-grade band also performed on the Wednesday. They opened with "School Spirit March." Described as the "finest of college marching songs" by Sousa, it was spirited, upbeat, and had a dignified air. Their second piece, "Arrival at Normandy" harked back to D-Day, in World War II, and was a stately march. The band finished off their set with "Big Band Boogie" a swing tempo, which featured the saxophone section especially well. The entire repertoire was extremely well received.

The choruses performed over course of two days as well. The advanced chorus, directed by Ms. Claassen, performed a variety of songs, featuring many soloists. "Dream Your Dreams" featured Olivia Arnold, Isabel Buckley, Meghan Considine, Rebeca Fredey, Natalie McFetridge, Emily Moy, Julia Stanganelli, Caroline Patterson, Sophie Stone, and Tayja Wright. It was a nicely balanced piece with each part having a distinct melody line and contributing nicely to the piece overall. A particularly creative piece, "Rhythm of the Rain" featured an instrumental ensemble, including Olivia Arnold, Meghan Considine, Adam Game, Emma Humphrey, Madeline Littlejohn, Vivien Littlejohn, Marina Longo, Kaitlin McGovern, Katie McKeon, Ben Moy, Madison Pratt, and Julia Richardson. The singers depicted falling rain through different musical devises – most of the piece was staccato (short and accented) giving the impression of raindrops. The whole piece was creative. "I Found A Way" featured Madeline Littlejohn, Lindsay Stelljes, and Jerome Vainsi. This pop/rock piece had interesting dynamics and beautiful harmonies. The advanced chorus's set sounded terrific, with impressive harmonies and had a great sound throughout the whole performance.

The grade-three chorus, also directed by Ms. Claassen, performed on the Thursday. One piece, "Major/Minor" was not just a song, but also taught the students about major and minor keys and how they affect the mood of music. The song featured soloists Dylan Connolly, Andrew Sullivan, and Cora Quinlan. The final song of the evening was the ever-popular "Supercalifragilisticexpialidocious." The audience loved it and the chorus did an amazing job for such a surprisingly challenging song. It had the audience on its feet.

Both concerts were major successes. Unfortunately, it will be the last one featuring Ms. Claassen, who will be moving to the west coast. "I'm actually moving to California to be closer to my family. I'll be teaching band, grades four through six, my favorite age group. I want to thank the Cohasset community – the parents, my students, and all the staff for all their support my three years…I'm going to really truly miss it here," said Ms. Claassen. Ms. Claassen will be missed; fortunately, Mr. Biagini, band director, will continue, "I'm just so proud of the job the kids did…I can't wait to start up again in the fall."

Kathryn Hillman of Cohasset is a senior at Notre Dame Academy.

'Wedding Singer' and 'Annie' soon on stage

Cohasset Dramatic Club, in cooperation with Cohasset Recreation Department, will present a double feature of musical theater entertainment this summer with both "Annie, Jr." and "The Wedding Singer." Combined, both casts will include 74 young people, with 60 in the cast of "Annie Jr.," ages 8 through 13, and 14 in "The Wedding Singer," ages 15 through 19.

Both shows offer a musical comedy experience for audiences of all ages. "Annie Jr." is a slightly shortened version of the original show, running 60 to 80 minutes in length, and featuring songs such as "Tomorrow," "Maybe," "NYC" and "It's a Hard Knock Life." "The Wedding Singer" is a musical comedy based on the Adam Sandler movie of the same name. It tells the story of Robbie Hart, lead singer for a wedding band from New Jersey, who happens to write a song that hits the charts and makes his the most sought after wedding band around. He and his friends make the music for everyone else's happy endings, but can Robbie write the lyrics for a happy ending of his own? Come found out and meet a cast of crazy rockers, celebrity look-alikes and more.

Show dates are July 17, 18 and 19, with "Annie, Jr." being presented at 10 a.m., on the 17th, and at 3 p.m. on the 18th and 19th. "The Wedding Singer" takes the stage on the same three dates with all performances at 7:30 p.m. All shows will take place in the air-conditioned Cohasset High School auditorium. Tickets are $12 each and are available at Paperscapes in the village, Buttonwood Books and Toys at Shaw's Plaza, by reservation on the CDC ticket line at 617-697-2115 or at the door. All seats are general admission. Call Lisa Pratt at 617-852-0091 for more information or leave a message on the ticket line.

Affordable housing

Maybe ultimately 40-B is to blame. The 40-year-old "anti-snob" zoning law that is supposed to support affordable housing initiatives is viewed more as the enemy, a state law that can force large, multi-unit housing complexes onto quiet single-family-home streets.

Let's face it, for most of us our home is our castle. Its value is critical and it may be where a great deal of our personal wealth is invested. No one wants to see his or her neighborhood go down hill for any reason. Affordable housing can create neighborhood panic among homeowners.

However, with that being said – it is important to state that affordable housing is not "low-income" housing. In fact many — journalists, for example – would not qualify for affordable housing in Cohasset because they don't make enough money!

At its core, affordable housing is supposed to create opportunities for communities, like Cohasset, to maintain some economic diversity. Affordable housing should allow police officers, teachers, firefighters and town hall employees, for example, the opportunity to live in town. Children now grown and starting their own families would like to return to the town they grew up in. Seniors citizens may want to downsize, but still stay in the town they have called home for so many years.

Right now, the housing choices for these demographics are slim.

Currently, the Community Preservation Committee holds the purse strings (with Town Meeting approval) to pay for local, affordable housing initiatives. The Cohasset Affordable Housing Trust was established by Town Meeting in 2008 to be proactive in the housing market. It is designed to have funding at its disposal in order to actively seek projects and not be rigidly tied to the Town Meeting cycle. The two committees – which if they work together could truly make some strides toward creating affordable housing in Cohasset — are currently at an impasse.

So where do we go from here? We are hoping that the Housing Trust and CPC can come to a shared vision and move forward together. If the two committees simply can't see eye to eye, at the very least Town Meeting should be able to decide if its voluntary CPA tax dollars are put in the Housing Trust.

The Housing Trust, like the town, isn't able to buy property or real estate without town meeting approval, but they could use the money to explore possibilities, or help a developer with bridge financing. Every dollar spent by the Housing Trust needs to have additional approval from the Board of Selectmen.

Next door in Hingham, the housing trust has been successful in creating affordable housing. They are using the town's CPC money to get things done. No one has to reinvent the wheel, here.

However, we think it is important that our Board of Selectmen use their "bully pulpit" to promote affordable housing and to help give the Affordable Housing Trust some teeth. Selectmen can differ on their opinions and have a healthy discussion on the issues. While they serve as "generalists" in terms of their roles as government officials, we elected them to serve as individuals, with opinions and passion about causes they believe in.

It is time for our selectmen to be leaders in ensuring the Cohasset moves forward on the affordable housing front. With the current recession Avalon is now on hold, but even with 200-unit complex Cohasset will still be about 30 housing units short of its 10 percent Chapter 40-B threshold once the 2010 census rolls out.

The town should be proactive and pursue its own initiatives – small projects that fit into the character of the town and neighborhoods. The Housing Trust has the expertise and passion to work on this initiative – they are the ideal entity to do this job.

We hope the Selectmen, the CPC and the town give the Housing Trust some clout, commitment, and real support.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Public safety workers taking it on the chin

TO THE EDITOR:

We all are feeling the pain of the current severe economic downturn. The pain should be shared, but it should not be borne to an unfair degree by our local police officers and firemen. Three popular initiatives come immediately to mind: A. police details; B. police and fire disability awards; and C. the Quinn Bill which pays incentives to police earning higher education credits. Let's talk "top-line" about each:

A. Police Details: It appears that Governor Patrick took a courageous position in curtailing some types of police details on state highways. I admit that the "devil is in the detail," and I just hope the changes were fair and still protect public safety. However, I hope that local town officials and their police chiefs maintain their authority over local decisions. For example, many streets in Cohasset are narrow with blind curves and no sidewalks. Better to err on the side of caution.

B. Police and fire disability awards. The Ledger ran a good series, but it emphasized the abuses. I would like to have seen equal time given to heroic police and firefighters who have risked their lives and sustained life changing disabilities that change not only their lives but that of their families. I also want to state categorically, that disabilities can be latent and disability awards should sometimes be awarded long after the policeman of firefighter retires. I do agree with the columnist that awarding disabilities for all cases of high blood pressure and heart disease is an abuse.

Finally, the 10.8 percent of police and firemen who retire with disabilities seems like a reasonable percentage.

C. I am most upset that state legislatures have gutted the Quinn Bill and again left a "hot potato" in the hands of local officials. I am 68 years of age; I can remember when many police were very poorly educated. Police work is more demanding and complex than ever before. They are a full partner with the military and homeland security agencies in the war on terror. We need officers who have prepared for court appearances and present the peoples' side of the case articulately so that felons are not acquitted. It is a pleasure to speak with members of the Cohasset Police force, they are not arrogant and they know what they are doing. Let's not be jealous of incentive payments that they earn and give our citizens a big return on investment.

HEALTH NOTES

Watching over-the-counter meds

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Non-steroidal-anti-inflammatories — for long — are in the news, and for good cause. NSAID's are drugs with analgesic, antipyretic (lowering an elevated body temperature and relieving pain without impairing consciousness) and, in higher doses, with anti-inflammatory effects (reducing inflammation). The term "non-steroidal" is used to distinguish these drugs from steroids, which (among a broad range of other effects) have a similar anti-inflammatory action but with some complex side effects. As analgesics, NSAID's are unusual in that they are non-narcotic. Recently nsaids such as Tylenol which employ ibuprophen are now being reassessed for several reasons: some new studies have begun to indicate that the widespread and casual use of nsaids is probably linked to kidney damage and an increasing incidence of ulcers by interfering with the stomach's ability to protect itself from acidic stomach juices.

During digestion of food, the stomach has enzymes that produce juices called prostaglandins some of which promote inflammation, pain, while others aid digestion and protect the stomach. Nsaids block the harmful enzymes and reduce prostaglandins throughout the body. As a consequence, ongoing inflammation, pain and fever are reduced. A side effect is the reduction of platelet development and blood clotting, and therefore, NSAID's can cause ulcers in the stomach and promote bleeding.

There are now too many drugs with too many brand names out there and we need a better way to classify and screen them

If you are taking over-the-counter pain medications on a regular basis, you will want to talk with your physician about the potential for ulcers and other side effects that can be reduced by using alternative therapy. Your doctor may recommend that you change the medication you are using; or add some other medication in conjunction with your pain medication.

Learn about Meds —A large part of the problem is education. Now that medications are publicly advertised on radio and TV (if provided with appropriate warnings which nobody reads) medications and the instructions which accompany them have their own pitfalls. The most recent is meds like Tylenol, an NSAID. The Feds and the Mass DPH have both issued warnings on the use of acetaminophen, but also aspirin, ibuprophen and many other similar prescription and non-prescription drugs. We've talked about the doctor saying "take two (younamits) and see me in the morning. There are now too many drugs with too many brand names out there and we need a better way to classify and screen them.

Paving process is pretty involved

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Little Harbor Project Paving – We hear lots of comments regarding the condition of North Main Street and the roads around the Common. We agree that these roads leave a lot to be desired and are a bit hard on our vehicles. We'll, that's about to end. We are currently making plans to rebuild these roads, literally from the ground up. When we are finished we will have first class roads in place of what we have now.

The process of paving is rather elaborate. The following steps will be necessary to rebuild the road:

• Remove and Plate structures — This operation will remove all manholes, water valves, etc. that are in the street and cover the resulting holes with steel plates set at a level way below the bottom of the asphalt (more on this later) and the plates will be covered with gravel.

• The whole asphalt roadway will be pulverized down below the asphalt to a total depth of about 12 inches. This grinding process is called "reclaiming." The asphalt will be ground up into to small pieces that will be homogenized with the gravel below the asphalt. The resulting mixture of asphalt and gravel, as odd as it sounds, makes an excellent road base when it is leveled and compacted by a heavy roller. The grinding operation is the reason the manholes and other in-the-road structures are removed. These cast iron structures don't grind up very well and the grinding machine doesn't like grinding cast iron.

• Some of the ground up material will then be removed, so that when the road is finished and paved it will be at the same height that it was before paving. (If we didn't do this when the new asphalt is added on top, the road would be much higher than the existing curb and also, drainage would be impaired.)

• Next the road surface will be graded smooth and rolled to its final form.

• Ta Da, drum roll please – we are now ready to pave the base coat. (The final topcoat of paving will be done at a later date.)

So when will this extravaganza be done and how long will it take? We are currently working with the reclaiming contractor and paving contractor to assemble a schedule. (Check the schedule).

The sequence of the work will be to start with the roads around the Common (specifically, North Main Street, Highland Avenue, Robert Jason Road and William B. Long Road) and then work toward the Jerusalem Road intersection. During the paving operation through traffic should use Ripley Road as a detour. Residents and others needing access to buildings on the Common or North Main St down to Joy Place will have limited access. One lane traffic will be maintained at most times. But, there may also be times when this will be temporarily halted. In the evenings, free access will be maintained, but raised structures in the roadways will be a hazard until the base paving is complete.

The Farmer's Market will be held on Thursday, July 23rd, canceled on the following Thursday, July 30th, and will begin again Thursday, Aug. 6th. The commotion around the Common associated with paving will just be too great to attempt to hold the Market during peak activity and could jeopardize the safety of the Market participants.

Recently small two inch square wood "pegs" about three inches high have sprouted up around the Common and along North Main Street. These are offset markers associated with the paving project. We mentioned above about the manhole structures and other devices in the street being dug up and covered by steel plates, buried below the level of road grinding. So, the question is, how do we find these buried structures to put them back when the grinding is completed? The "pegs" are the answer. Each of these is marked with the location of the buried feature so it can be located.

The photo shows a typical peg offset marker. This one is on North Main Street on the Common about two feet from the sidewalk. Please be careful when walking on the Common, especially at the Farmer's Market. The pegs are hard to see.

The Question Cone

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

There are two scientific breakthroughs I really hope to see in my lifetime: weather control, and immortality. I used to think immortality was the more important of the two but I've changed my mind. In fact if the sun doesn't shine for more than a few hours this month I may leave this party early. The weather has been so miserable that I've almost lost my interest in JJ's. Now don't be alarmed: it hasn't come to that yet. But the fact that we're even discussing "JJ's Malaise" shows just how serious the situation is.

The gloom has hit me especially hard because I've been in this awful place before. It was called Seattle. I paid a lot of money to put three thousand miles between me and the Pacific Northwest so I'd never have another June full of drizzle, and I would have gone farther but I ran out of continent. I may need to borrow someone's boat at this point.

In the meantime I'm going to rerun my warmest, sunniest article, in hopes that it will burn off a little of the fog.

To Cory and his friends, winter fantasies were usually just that: stories of snow drifts and sleigh rides and roasting chestnuts, memories of a simpler time that existed only in songs now.

But progress hadn't killed the pleasures of a New England summer. There were endless games of flashlight tag, road races, outdoor concerts, water rockets, stargazing, pool parties, fireworks, camping, parades, Fla-Vor-Ice, baseball, fishing, cycling, and best of all, no school. Summer break, that blessed confluence of ideal weather and an almost embarrassingly long vacation in which to fully enjoy it, was a scheduling anomaly in Kid World — the only hard evidence that the adults who ran that world actually knew what they were doing.

After a glorious June and a wild, independent July, Cory's 10th summer was now winding down. Nights came earlier and mornings were cooler. He wore long sleeves and pants as he rode his bike downtown, heading for the barbershop and the hair cut that would mark the official start of back-to-school season.

An ice cream truck drove past him and stopped beside the baseball field, stirring a buzz of activity among the younger spectators. Cory had pole position and quickly decided the barber's tip would be better spent on a Creamsicle than on shaving cream. He dropped his bike on the grass and was first in line at the window.

"What can I get you?" the young woman asked without much enthusiasm. It was only mid-morning but she seemed worn out already.

"I'll have a —" An unusual name on the hand-written list caught Cory's eye. "What's a Question Cone?"

"That's been discontinued," she said. "But I have three left."

"What flavor is it?"

"Vanilla. And some of them have a chocolate ball inside the ice cream. You ask a question before you eat it, and if you get a chocolate ball it means the answer's yes."

Cory had never heard of anything like this. "Does it really work?"

"No, but they taste pretty good. These are the last three right here."

"Okay. I'll have one please."

The Question Cone was wrapped in silver Mylar with directions written on it that warned against breaking the seal prematurely.

"1) Open package. 2) Ask one 'yes or no' question. 3) Wait 10 seconds before eating. 4) Chocolate ball inside means yes!"

Cory had to use his teeth to tear the tough plastic. Feeling a bit silly, he went with an easy question. "Where — I mean, am I going to get my hair cut?" he asked the cone. He looked at the ice cream woman, who shrugged.

"Take a big bite off the top," she said. Cory stuffed the cone into his mouth, bit down, and shook his head.

"See?" the woman said. "It's just a gimmick."

Cory hopped on his bike and ate the rest of the cone while he steered with one hand. It was delicious, even if it was too dumb to know where he was going. He pulled up to the barbershop and leaned his bike against the rack.

The sign in the window said, "Closed." Two men were busy inside painting the ceiling with rollers. Paint-speckled cloths were draped over the barber chairs, sinks and counters.

Cory mounted the bike again and started for home, but something felt odd. He stopped and squeezed the tires. The rear one was losing air, so he picked up the pace. When he passed the ball field the ice cream truck was gone, but as he approached the town common there it was again. He stood up on the pedals and coasted, thinking.

"Do you have any more Question Cones?" he asked the woman.

"You liked it, huh? I have two left."

"I'll have one please."

Cory hurried to a secluded, shady spot, glanced around self-consciously, and tore open the package.

"Will my tire go flat before I make it home?" he asked. "Aaaa!"

Cory dropped the ice cream on the ground and leaped back. It had trembled in his hand, ever so slightly, like one of those Mexican beans with the worm inside. Afraid to touch it he gently squashed it on the grass with his sneaker. In the center of the ice cream was a core of dark chocolate, cool and hard on the outside, melted and still warm on the inside.

Cory turned in shock to look at the ice cream truck. It was driving away again. He dashed to his bike and peddled toward home as fast as he could. Sure enough, his tire went completely flat a quarter mile from his house. He ditched his bike in the woods and ran home in an all-out sprint.

It took him half an hour to convince Matt, his best friend, that they needed to commandeer his mother's car. After much bribery Matt's older sister agreed to help, and they drove off in a cloud of dust to find the ice cream truck. Meanwhile word had gotten around among the neighborhood kids that something was up with Cory. By the time he returned with the last Question Cone and strode ominously toward Matt's backyard fort, a crowd of 20 was gathered to witness with open minds whatever was about to take place.

He told them all to be absolutely quiet. Then he entered the shanty-like fort alone, crouched down, bit the wrapper, tore it open and gingerly lay the treat on the floor like a live grenade.

"Is there no chocolate ball inside this ice cream cone?" he said. Then he darted outside and latched the door.

At first nothing happened. Then they heard a strange sound, like corn kernels popping and unpopping inside a steel drum. It got louder. The walls of the fort vibrated and bowed outward. Shrieking with excitement the kids ran away in all directions as the noise grew to a deafening rumble. In a final spasm of recursion Matt's fort suddenly jumped off the ground and exploded in a geyser of vanilla ice cream and chocolate balls that shot into the sky, briefly blotted out the sun and rained down in a torrent on every house, car and giddy child within 200 yards of the epicenter.

It was the greatest end to the greatest summer in recorded history.

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

It's hard to realize that Boston is down to two newspapers, the Globe fighting for its very life and the Herald reduced to covering little more than City Hall, the State House and the enemy du jour, like elderly drivers and "hacks," whatever they are.

When I was young and ice covered most of the earth, it was hard to avoid running into a daily paper in the city that was known in a burst of civic pride as the Hub of the Universe and the Athens of America.

There were the morning and afternoon Globes, the Herald (the pre-tabloid one), the Traveler, the Post, the Record-American-Sunday Advertiser and the Christian Science Monitor. The Transcript, the paper of Brahmin Boston, was only a dozen years in the grave.

When I went to work for the Associated Press, the Boston office was located on the third floor of the Globe building across Washington Street from the Post in an area called "newspaper row." The United Press, not yet UPI, was a couple of doors down the street.

All of us rivals were tied together by the Towne Grille restaurant and Tommy McFarland's tavern, where (and I'm not giving away any secrets) not a few workers from local word factories drank their lunch.

In fact, when the first tip on what became the Andrea Doria disaster came to the AP's Boston office from a ham radio operator in Virginia it was manned by an office boy. The staff was downstairs at the Towne Grille, catching last call.

The Post, which was owned by the Communist-hunting John Fox, who used to play piano in one of Morey Pearl's South Shore bistros until he discovered the stock market, occupied a building that strained architectural credulity.

Actually, it was two or three buildings (I never figured out which) joined together as one so that if you got off the elevator on the third floor of one building, you were on the fifth floor in next without moving up or down.

In those days, each of the papers had one reporter who covered the big crime of the day. On the Herald, it was Arthur Stratton. The Record had Bob Court. And the Post featured Arthur "Bad Eye" Quinn.

Quinn, the most colorful of the lot, enhanced his reputation while covering a murder in New Hampshire. His story began: "The headless body of a beautiful woman was found, etc." At least, that's the way the story goes, and knowing "Bad Eye," one just knows it's true.

Fifty or more years ago, the Globe was the paper to work for. It was rolling in dough. No one ever got fired. A profligate management was starting to send reporters and photographers to all corners of the earth.

When I went to work at the AP, I noticed that every night the Bruins played hockey out of town, a man from Western Union would come to the office, listen to his clicker, bang out a page of copy on a typewriter which he left on a desk and left. Eventually, the copy was thrown away.

Curious, I asked him what he was doing. He didn't know except that he was doing it for the Globe. I asked my editor. He didn't know. I asked the bureau chief. He didn't know either but he promised to ask the Globe suits.

It turned out that, when the Bruins were young and not deserving of staff coverage of out-of-town games, the Globe had ordered an "add," or an extra long story, by "overhead," or in addition to the regular AP coverage.

The original order had long been forgotten and, for more than 20 years, the Western Union man had been dutifully taking the "add" by "overhead," and leaving it to be thrown away — and the Globe had been paying the tab.

All facility stickers expired June 30

The expiration date of the beach and Recycling Transfer Facility permits is June 30. A copy of a current registration is required. If leasing a vehicle, people will need proof of residence in addition to the registration. Stickers are on sale during normal business hours at Town Hall. Stickers are also available at the DPW garage on weekends from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., and during the week from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. Stickers are: $50 for residents under the age of 60 and for $15 for seniors.

This sticker will allow access to the Recycling Transfer Facility, Sandy Beach, as well as, parking at all areas in town that require a sticker.

Library Corner

Meet Sarah Roche on July 17

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road. For more information, call 781-383-1348.

Artist's Reception – Meet artist Sarah Roche at her art reception in the library from 6 to 9 p.m., on Friday, July 17. The reception is free. Roche's exhibition, presented by South Shore Art Center of Cohasset, will be on view through Aug. 31. Gallery hours are Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Wednesdays and Fridays, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Saturdays, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Independent Film Night – The library will show the independent film "Lake Tahoe" at 6 p.m., on Thursday, July 16. Free admission and free refreshments courtesy of the Friends of the Library.

Library Book Group – The library book group will discuss Kathleen Kent's book "The Heretic's Daughter" at 10 a.m., on Wednesday, July 29. All are welcome.

Beach Reads – The library has a variety of paperback books, just the right size for a beach tote. Catch up on summer reading while catching some rays.

FOR CHILDREN

Boston Bruins Join Starship Adventure @ Your Library – It's not too late to join the Boston Bruins Read on a Starship Adventure@Your Library, the 2009 Massachusetts summer reading adventure, which is sponsored by the Friends of Cohasset Library, the MRLS, and the MBLC. Register online or in person. Registration will continue throughout the early summer. Click "yes, I would like to participate in the Bruins Read program," on the registration page of the online summer reading program. The Bruins will be offering random weekly drawings for prizes. Also, join others in the meeting room for free Monday evening movies and Tuesday evening family performances. Click on calendar for a complete list of events and activities. Families that read together provide the strongest model for future readers.

Monday is Family Movie Night – Join others in the Meeting Room at 6 p.m., on Monday, July 13, to see the movie "Bolt" rated PG. Animated film featuring voices of John Travolta, Thomas Haden Church, Miley Cyrus. From Walt Disney Pictures; directed by Chris Williams; 96 minutes. Bolt is a spoiled German shepherd who is the star of his own action TV show and is living the good life. One day he is accidentally abandoned in his trailer but he truly believes he still has the superpowers from his show. Along the way, he meets some friends who are trying to find their homes and they help him discover his true self. Children must be accompanied by an adult. Movie site license sponsored by Friends of the Library and Cohasset Democratic Town Committee. Admission is free, and all communities welcome.

Tuesday Family Performance – Be prepared to be amazed by magician Scott Jameson at 6 p.m., on July 14, in the Meeting Room. Free tickets are available. This show is sponsored by Friends of the Cohasset Library. Seating is limited, so get tickets early. For more information about this Starship Adventure at your library go to the Web site at scottjameson .com. All ages and communities welcome.

Drop In Story Time – Drop in Story Times will take place at 11 a.m., on Fridays, July 10, 17, 24, 31 and Aug. 7, in the Story Room. All ages and communities welcome.

Historical Society Tall Ships/Sail Boston

Cohasset has an especially strong connection to one of the tall ships visiting Boston. Cohasset resident Henry Dormitzer, yachtsmen, former Cohasset selectmen and Boston businessman was responsible for bringing the Tall ships to Boston in 1974.

It is only natural that the Cohasset Historical Society is taking its exciting July event to the water. Cohasset's long held tradition of fishing and boat building blends in with the majestic Tall Ships that will be in Boston Harbor July 8-13th. Cohasset has had ties with the Tall Ships for more than 3 decades. Join us July 12th and come aboard our chartered yacht to see the visiting fleet. Call the Society at 781-383-1434 or email cohassethistory@yahoo.com for information.

During their stay in Boston, some of the tall ships will be near our chartered cruising yacht the Majestic Princess' berth at Rowes Wharf and may be available for boarding.

Cohasset has an especially strong connection to one of the tall ships visiting Boston. Cohasset resident Henry Dormitzer, yachtsmen, former Cohasset selectmen and Boston businessman was responsible for bringing the Tall ships to Boston in 1974. He then led a group of volunteers working at a Boston pier in preparation for a tall ships event in 1980 at which time he started a sail training program for youngsters in the area. The program needed a boat for the children and thus began the creation of the Spirit of Massachusetts. Dormitzer was responsible for having her built, fitted out and sailed in an earlier version of the tall ships event in 1984.

The Spirit of Massachusetts cost $756,000, took just over a year to build and was appraised at $1.5 million. Over 40,000 man-hours went into her construction, and the various woods needed were brought in from all over the United States and as far away as Central America.

Built for service as a sail-training vessel for young people, she also served as a goodwill ambassador for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts from 1984 until 1987. From Boston she went to Maine to be uses for summer cruise parties. Ocean Classroom Foundation began chartering Spirit for their educational programs in 1997 and subsequently purchased her in 2000. They use her in their teaching programs. She joins the fleet for this year's Sail Boston 2009 event.

Ocean Classroom Foundation is committed to sending students and their teachers to sea, on voyages in which the traditions, values and adventure of maritime life provide a unique context for education.

Staying safe when lightning strikes

SANDY BEACH HAPPENINGS

Jen DiSabatino & Ted Purdy

In fact, last summer, a man was struck in Scituate while walking along the spit with his wife. According to news reports, the sky was clear above.

Weather-wise, summer's been slow to get started this year. As we look forward to the coming months and some better weather, we would like to remind our patrons about the importance of staying safe when lightning storms approach the coast.

There is a lot of information out there from meteorologists about the dangers of being outside during a thunder and lightning storm, particularly at the beach.

While New England and the South Shore don't necessarily experience daily lightning storms like the Caribbean or Florida, we do get storms that produce cloud-to-ground lightning. This is extremely dangerous near the water.

Our certified, professional lifeguards' first responsibility is to prevent injury. Therefore, when we hear thunder, we clear the water. We are now fortunate to have a device that tracks storms and even lightning strikes. We can tell how far a storm or cloud-to-ground strike is. When this storm and lightning meter detects a cloud-to-ground lightning strike within 10 miles, we will clear the beach. Sometimes the threat is not visible from the beach, but it is there. Lightning can strike 10 miles ahead of a storm cell, according to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

In fact, last summer, a man was struck in Scituate while walking along the spit with his wife. According to news reports, the sky was clear above.

In order to appreciate the real-life repercussions of staying on the beach in a lightning storm, please read this excerpt from a June 2008 article in the Maryland Coast Dispatch. It was written by Sgt. Ed Fisher, a 17-year veteran of the Ocean City Beach patrol.

Captains Note: In my years with the OCBP I have been involved with 10 lightning incidents. All occurred on the beach and none in the water. In one instance a group from northern Virginia was on the beach at North Division Street as a storm approached. The Beach Patrol cleared the beach as standard procedure. However, this particular group refused to leave and huddled under an umbrella. A single bolt of lightening struck the umbrella. Instantly, all four individuals were left unconscious and fighting for their lives. Beach Patrol personnel responded and performed CPR, risking their own safety. However, all victims died.

Even with this knowledge and the fact that a beach is one of the most dangerous places to be during a lightning event, people still argue with the SRTs (lifeguards) attempting to do their job and keep the patrons safe. I have personally spoken with a father on the beach as he held a small child in his arms, with active lightening all around as he argued about leaving the beach. As you can imagine it becomes even harder to clear the beach if it doesn't look threatening.

Don't risk your life, the life of your family or the safety of our Surf Rescue Technicians. When asked to leave the beach, do so immediately.

Jen DiSabatino is beach manager and Ted Purdy is a trustee of Sandy Beach Association.

Respecting rules at Sandy Beach

Dogs are not permitted on the beach from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m., from mid-June through Labor Day. If people bring pets to the beach during off-hours, it is imperative that they pick up after the dog.

Sandy Beach Association asks that people respect the rules of the beach. Alcohol, fires, fishing, glass bottles or flotation devices are prohibited anywhere on the beach. Frisbees, hard balls, kites, skimmers and boogies boards are allowed in orange cone marked areas only. Climbing on rocks on either side of the beach is dangerous and prohibited.

Dogs are not permitted on the beach from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m., from mid-June through Labor Day. If people bring pets to the beach during off-hours, it is imperative that they pick up after the dog.

Residents should have received the Sandy Beach Association annual fundraising letter. This mailing is the only source of fundraising for the Sandy Beach Association. The fee for the parking sticker funds the parking lot only – it does not cover the costs of beach cleanup, staffing or beach operations. The beach can't operate as it does without the support of Cohasset residents. Donations can be sent to P.O. Box 285, Cohasset, MA 02025,

New road off Route 3A possible

CCI-Energy back with subdivision proposal

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The preliminary subdivision filing is the first step in a process and is essentially a preview of a subdivision project, which requires a formal public hearing process and a lot more information.

A new road and a new lot could be in the cards for the land where two wind turbines were recently proposed.

On Wednesday night the Planning Board heard from a civil engineer and CCI-Energy president Jim Sweeney, the proponent of the Cohasset Heights wind turbine project, on their plans for a new access road to the hill from Route 3A.

The preliminary subdivision filing is the first step in a process and is essentially a preview of a subdivision project, which requires a formal public hearing process and a lot more information. Planning Board chairman Al Moore likened the hearing to a sack of potatoes.

"We're trying to figure out how many potatoes are in the pile and how big is the sack – will they all fit?" Moore said. "We're not here to look at the fine detail…we're trying to get some feel for what's being proposed."

After the preliminary subdivision hearing an application is filed and there is a formal public hearing process where all aspects of the project are reviewed. Whatever decision made during the preliminary hearing is not binding as the project moves forward. Commercial subdivision applications require a preliminary hearing; in residential subdivision hearings it is only recommended.

A preliminary subdivision hearing also freezes the zoning bylaws for a period of time and requires the planning board to act on a quicker schedule.

Jim Sweeney of CCI-Energy said the general concept was to make the current two lots, one of which is home to the capped Graham Waste landfill, into three. CCI-Energy's application for two commercial-sized wind turbines on the same property of the current filing was turned down by the Planning Board in early May.

Jeff Couture of SITEC Environmental and civil engineer for the project said a new access way, which has been temporarily named Technology Drive, is proposed. The to-be-built road would begin to the north of the Hingham Lumber building on Route 3A and end at a 120-foot cul-de-sac giving access to all three lots. The road gives frontage for the new lot.

Planning Board member Jean Healey-Dippold asked what plans the applicant has for the land at the end of the road. Both Couture and Sweeney averted the question.

Sweeney said he expects the property owner, Paul Barry, to rent out the lots, adding he would like to wait until the full hearing to announce the plans for development on the land. The land is zoned commercial and light industrial uses.

Couture explained the road has a wetlands crossing and a portion where there is a steep grade.

The town's consulting engineer John Modzelewski had some concerns as to the necessity of this new road when Crocker Lane already provides access to the lot and with the steep grade of a portion of the road.

While Planning Board members said there could be some side benefits in segregating the commercial traffic from the medical building's traffic, they shared in Modzelewski's concerns with the steep grade.

The road proposed has a 12 percent grade and Modzelewski said an 8 or 9 percent grade is the most he would feel comfortable supporting. Crocker Lane has about a 9 percent grade at a certain point. Modzelewski and the board asked Couture and the applicant to explore some modifications to Crocker Lane as an alternative.

"This is an expensive road to build no matter what for one lot," said Modzelewski. The utilities lines to feed whatever development goes in on the lots would still come up Crocker Lane.

"Come back to us with some changes on how you can work out the steep grade…I don't think there's any problem with the rest of it," said Moore.

The filing will be back before the board on Wednesday, Aug. 19.

At the start of the meeting, the Planning Board signed its decision on the CCI-Energy Cohasset Heights wind turbine special permit and site plan review application. The board denied the project in early May. The full text of the decision was filed with the Town Clerk on Thursday morning.

Watching over-the-counter meds

Most adults age 45 and older take an average of four prescription drugs daily. Keeping track of prescriptions, vitamins and other supplements is crucial to staying healthy and avoiding dangerous side effects. These tips will help you manage your medications wisely for good health and safety.

Talk with the Experts — Doctors and pharmacists are busy, but they can and will take time to answer your questions. Be clear about the medications you are taking and how they may affect you.

• Write down your questions and take them to your appointment.

• Ask the questions for each drug you take, and write down the answers.

• Bring both your questions and answers to your doctor and pharmacist.

Ask Questions like: What is the name of this medication? What is it supposed to do? What are the side effects? Will this medication work with others I am taking? How do I take the stuff? Is it safe? What are the pitfalls?

Tell your Doctor about all the medications you take: prescription, over-the-counter and herbal. Create a list, or personal medication record, A form is available from AARP for free. Include everything you take, the doses, and how you take them. Include the following: name and contact details; your physicians' names and emergency contact information, pharmacy contact information, name of your medications, reason for use, form, dose, start and stop date.

Make copies for your doctor, pharmacist, wallet, home and for a loved one. Be sure to keep it updated with new medications, drug allergies and side effects.

Short Films Night, July 15: "La Raccolta," "Pollen Nation" and "Homegrown Revolution"

"Homegrown Revolution" (16 min.) is set in the midst of densely urban downtown Pasadena, where radical change is taking root. For more than 20 years, the Dervaes family has been transforming their home into an urban homestead. They harvest three tons of organic food annually from their 1/10 acre garden. "Pollen Nation" (26 min.) follows the journey of one commercial beekeeper – third generation beekeeper Jeff Anderson – from the honey harvest on the High Plains to the warm winter-feeding grounds of California. It also explores the history of human interaction with bees, a story that reflects the development of agriculture. Finally, "La Raccolta" (29 min.) takes us to Umbria Italy for the olive harvest. Olga, Oriana, Luigi and Renato have been harvesting olives for more than 50 years but they worry that a changing social fabric which threatens the future of this lyrical tradition.

Legion in the hunt for playoffs

By Mark Ducharme
CORRESPONDENT

The pennant race is on in Zone 6 East and the Scituate/Cohasset American Legion Baseball team finds itself in the middle of the battle for one of the five playoff spots in the league.

A year ago, Cohasset made a late season run to nose out Holbrook for the fifth and final playoff spot in the zone.

Post 118 tentatively had a game with Weymouth on Tuesday. They play Stoughton tonight, Milton on Thursday, Holbrook on Friday and Quincy on Sunday. However Post 118 has some makeup games that they have to add to the schedule.

They had their doubleheader with Braintree postponed last Friday and it was to be made up this week.

Cohasset had one of its bigger wins of the season at Adams Field against Morrissette, a team they are battling with for a playoff spot. They held on to defeat Morrissette 6-5.

It appeared that Post 118 was going to have an easier time as they pulled out to a 4-1 lead, but Morrissette came back to tie the game, 4-4.

Cohasset had one of its bigger wins of the season at Adams Field against Morrissette, a team they are battling with for a playoff spot.

However Post 118 took the lead back, 6-4 and held on behind the pitching Derek Schwantner and Brendan Doonan.

Schwantner pitched 6 1/3 innings and Doonan came in with two on and one out. He walked the first batter, but Doonan got John Ainsley to line out to Jordan Berry in right field who then threw to second base to get a double play to end the game.

"Derek showed a lot of guts and determination on the mound," said Cohasset coach Greg Taylor. "He had a rough time in the fourth inning with

Cohasset players make a mark at Bay State Baseball

Cohasset's McCunney, Doonan lead Southeast in near-comeback

Southeast scored four runs in the top of the seventh inning to make things interesting, but Central held on to claim a 7-6 win to open action on the second day of the Bay State Summer Games baseball tournament.

Tony Martinelli (Rutland; Wachusett Reg. HS) set the pace early on the hill for Central. The big lefty tossed four innings, allowing two hits while striking out seven including five of the first six batters.

Central built a 7-2 lead heading into the final frame but Southeast staged a furious comeback to pull within a run. Kyle MacDonald (Hanover; Xavarian Brothers) singled to start the inning and then scored on a single by Rob McCunney (Cohasset; Boston College HS). Chris Puliafico (Sharon; Sharon HS) followed with a single and then both runners came home after an RBI single by Brendan Doonan (Cohasset; Cohasset HS) was misplayed. Jim Perron (Norwell; Archbishop Williams) then singled in Doonan to cut the lead to one.

Central started the scoring in the first when Alex Posch (Hopedale; Hopedale HS) walked, stole second and scored on a throwing error by the Southeast second baseman.

Hadges set to defend his State Am crown

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

Next week, John Hadges of Easton will defend his State Amateur title at The Country Club. On Monday morning, he will go off the 10th tee at 8:42 a.m., paired with Ben Spitz of Norwell and Andy Drohen of Crestview.

Spitz, 26, won the State Amateur in 2006 at Worcester Country Club, and Drohen, 40, won the State Am the last time it was played at The Country Club.

Hadges, 48, who won at Kittansett in Marion last year, chased this title for nearly three decades before finally winning the championship trophy.

Five times he was the 36-hole medalist. Besides last year, he was also medalist in 1981, 1987, 1988 and 2005. However, once the match-play phase of the championship began, he seemingly was matched against the hottest golfer in the tournament and was eliminated.

Many golf writers argued that if the State Amateur were strictly a stroke-play championship, as it is in most states, Hadges would have won several titles.

In other stroke-play championships in the state, Hadges has fared well. He won the Ouimet Invitational at Woodland, the Hornblower Memorial at Plymouth CC and the venerable Southeast Amateur, which finishes at Cohasset Golf Club. He has won that event "either six or seven times." He's not sure.

After earning medalist honors last year at Kittansett, he ran into a hot golfer in the 36-hole final match. It was Thorny Lea club mate Matt Parziale.

Neither golfer led by more than one hole. Furthermore, it was tied going up the final fairway. Hadges made his putt and Parziale missed his. For the 36 holes, Hadges was 1-under par. It was a sterling exhibition of championship golf.

A year has gone by since he won this title, but it doesn't feel like it, said Hadges.

"I think is it is the weather," he said. "I can't believe the Fourth of July is already over."

Yes, it has been a messy spring for golfers. But it hasn't slowed down Hadges.

"The weather comes with the territory of being a New England golfer," he said. "If it means you have to play with rain pants, you wear them. You do what you have to do and play in whatever weather there is."

Because he won the State Amateur last summer, he received an invitation to play in the recently concluded Northeast Amateur championship at Wannamoisett Country Club in East Rumford, R.I.

John Hadges is one of the top stroke-play golfers in the state. During the final 36-hole match at last year's State Amateur, he was 1-under par.

"I first got a chance to play in the Northeast when I was like 20 or 21," said Hadges. "I played well and came close. I didn't think much about it. I figured I would get invited again."

That year, he was among the leaders after two rounds of play, but in the third round, he ballooned to an 80 and fell out of contention.

This year, "I really didn't play that well in the tournament. I had some injuries I was dealing with," said Hadges. "But I really enjoyed it. It is quite an experience. When you register, they give you a bunch of stuff, shirts and balls, things like that. There is a booklet and it not only lists the champions, but also those who have played in the tournament over the years. It's impressive to see how many former U.S. Open champions, Masters winners, Tour winners who have played in this championship."

Some of the former winners include Hal Sutton, Ben Crenshaw, Scott Hoch, Allen Doyle, John Cook and Anthony Kim. Among the players who did not win the Northeast Amateur is Tiger Woods. That says a lot. It's probably the best amateur field outside of the U.S. Amateur Championship.

"Other amateur tournaments have to entice good players to enter, but not this tournament," Hadges said. "I think it's best it's done right and it's a great course."

Hadges will be playing a great course next week in Brookline.

"It's a lot like Kittansett, in the respect that you have to put yourself in the right position off the tee," he said. "It's keys."

The only difference is the wind.

"We were lucky last year at Kittansett; the wind only blew hard on the first and last day of the tournament," Hadges said. "I don't think we'll have to worry about that next week."

French, Woods on top

Peter French of Bellingham and Jonathan Woods of Duxbury teamed up to win the 54th Braintree Junior Fourball at Braintree Municipal Golf Course last week. They combined for a 9-under-par 63 to win their second consecutive Braintree Junior Fourball junior and overall division titles . . . Patrick West of Pembroke shot an 80 to win the boys 16-to-18 division title in the 11th, and Conor Biagiotti of Mansfield was 22nd. Matthew Robinson of Scituate fashioned an 87 to finish second in the boys 12-to-13 age group. Jack Lyons of Hanover was sixth, and Shane Rossi of Hingham was 10th . . . Carol Mahoney and Doris Privitera combined for a net 31.5 to win the Nine Hole Scotch Tournament at Scituate CC. Bev McCafferty and Merrilyn Hauman were second, and the team of Mary Malrock and Carol Blanchard was third. Matt Parziale of Thorny Lea tuned up for the State Amateur by advancing to the quarterfinal round of the prestigious North and South Amateur at the famed Pinehurst No. 2 course in North Carolina last week. The Brockton golfer fashioned a 70 in stroke-play qualifier to make the 64-player field.

Tee to Green

NEPGA/Callaway Golf Junior Tour event at Cranberry Valley GC in Harwich on June 26. Liam Cain of Quincy was sixth with an 84. Thomas Londergan of Marshfield tied for ninth, and Gerard McEleney of Canton finished 16th. Kevin Gately of Pembroke was fourth in the 14-to-15 age group with an 83. Nick LeRoy of Hanover was

In last week's Tee to Green, we wrote that Jim Forsgard "retained" his South Shore CC club championship. He won two years ago. Last year's winner was David Pomarico, who was unable to defend this year because he underwent extensive heart surgery. He promises to come back and do his best to win the title next year. Meanwhile, the week that Forsgard won the club championship, he scored one of golf's rarities when he made a double-eagle on the par-5 18th hole at the Hingham club. He knocked a 3-iron into the cup from the fairway for a two on the hole.

A look back from the green to the tee on the challenging 16th hole on the Jones Course at Pinehills.

Mission accomplished

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

Few golf venues reach their pre-construction mission.

But Pinehills Golf Club has done it.

PINEHILLS GOLF CLUB

When course owners Pinehills LLC decided to create this golfing haven, they wanted to make it a world-class facility, the best daily fee course in New England.

They did.

They hired two of the biggest names in golf course design, Rees Jones and Nicklaus Design. Plus, they did not cut any corners in constructing these championship layouts.

Just about every golfing publication that's worth turning a page to read selected Pinehills as a premier facility.

New England Golf Guide named Pinehills as a five-star facility. Only one other course in New England earned that distinction.

Golf Magazine selected Pinehills as one of the top 10 public courses you can play.

Zagat's Golf Guide called it the No. 1 course in Massachusetts.

Golf Digest, Travel & Leisure Golf and GolfWeek all praised this 36-hole jewel.

The two courses are laid out over 300 acres of sandy-based rolling hills that are ideal for golf course construction. There are dramatic changes in elevation dictated by its earth kettles and kames.

These earth kettles (deep drops in elevation) and kames (steep hills) were formed ages ago as glaciers receded from the region.

What these sudden elevation changes do is give you picturesque downhill shots and others where if you push or pull it right or left fall off the world into an abyss of scrubby pine and brush.

Our favorite hole here commands that sort of attention. It is the 16th hole on the Jones Course, a par-4 that doglegs to the right.

You're coming off the par-5 15th, the toughest hole on the back nine, and you're playing the second-most difficult hole on the side, which plays 433 yards from the tips to 333 yards from the front tees.

Long hitters might want to bite off as much of the dogleg as they dare. A well-struck drive would give you a wedge to the green.

But if you come up short on your tee shot or your ball fades too much to the right, your ball will drop off into world of trouble. If you are lucky enough to find your Titleist Pro V, it might take you two or three shots to get back into play.

It is the ultimate risk and reward hole.

As far as we are concerned, what makes the Nicklaus Course stand out is its playability.

On most holes, the driving area is spacious and easy to hit. But the approach shot to the green can be a test. This gives the average golfer the hope at making par, the opportunity to play the hole, at least another swing.

Too many designers make the tee shot too heroic, so much so that the beginner or average golfer is frustrated and out of the hole, down two or three golf balls when they are still on the tee. The Nicklaus Course keeps them in the hole for at least one more shot.

But Pinehills is more than just two championship golf courses. It offers a state-of-the-art practice facility and an army of teaching professionals who can help you improve your game.

It is what they call the total golf experience.

Cohasset Juniors, Majors still alive in Williamsport Tourney

Juniors

Game 1
Cohasset 4, Norwell 2

Cohasset sent their ace, Connor Goetz, to the mound and Norwell countered with their ace T.J. Dakin. Christian Davis led off the top of the first with a first pitch double to right center and scored on Connor Goetz' RBI single. In the second inning with one out, Colin Gideon-Murphy singled, stole second and then scored on Connor O'Brien's two out single for a 2-0 Cohasset lead.

Norwell fought back with two runs of their own in the bottom of the fourth to tie the game at 2-2. Cohasset came right back in the top of the fifth to grab a 3-2 lead when Christian Davis reached on an error and eventually scored on a passed ball. In the top of the seventh Cohasset managed to sneak in an insurance run when Nick Tangherlini led off with a walk. Mike O'Brien pinch ran for Tangherlini and stole second. With two outs Connor Goetz grounded to the shortstop who's throw went over the first baseman's head allowing O'Brien to score from second, giving Cohasset a 4-2 lead entering the bottom of the seventh.

Goetz, nearing his pitch count limit, took to the mound in the seventh and struck out the first batter before turning the ball over to Shane Haggerty who retired the last two batters to give Cohasset the victory allowing them to advance in the winner's bracket. Goetz went 6-1/3 innings, throwing 98 pitches and striking out 10 Norwell batters. He received excellent defense from Shane Haggerty, who with two on and two outs in the third inning, made an unbelievable diving catch of a popup down the leftfield line and Christian Davis, who tracked down ball after ball from his centerfield position, including the last out of the game deep into right center.

Game 2
Cohasset 11, Scituate 4

Shane Haggerty got the start for Cohasset and struggled in the first inning allowing three hits and two walks, a throwing error on a strike out and before the fans were in their seats; it was 4-0 Scituate.

Cohasset's bats came alive in the top of the third as Cohasset got a second look at Scituate's starting pitcher Chris Leclair. Connor O'Brien led off with a single, Christian Davis walked, Connor Goetz singled, Shane Haggerty singled, Mickey Barry got hit by a pitch, Conor Dooley then blasted a double to right center and then Colin Gideon-Murphy laced a double to left center to make it 6-4. Craig Davis then singled in Gideon-Murphy for a seven run top of the third giving Cohasset a 7-4 lead.

Haggerty settled down after the first, going five innings and striking out eight Scituate batters before turning the ball over to Gideon-Murphy and Nick Tangherlini who managed to shutout Scituate the rest of the way.

Cohasset scored three more times in the fourth after Goetz was hit leading off the inning and Haggerty followed with a towering double to deep left, Mickey Barry then singled in a run and one out later Gideon-Murphy knocked in two more runs with a single, Cohasset now led 10-4. Cohasset pushed across one more run in the seventh when Mike O'Brien led off with his second hit of the day and eventually scored on a sacrifice fly by Goetz.

Cohasset advances to play Quincy at Quincy's Merrymount Field.

Game 3
Quincy 8, Cohasset 5

In their third tournament game, Cohasset fell to Quincy 8-5 on Wednesday.

The loss sends the Juniors into the loser's bracket where they'll have to win once to get into the finals where they'd have to beat Quincy twice.

The game is tentatively scheduled for this Saturday, time and site to be determined.

Last night Quincy jumped out to a quick 1-0 lead in the top of the first but Cohasset came right back to tie it in the bottom of the first when Christian Davis led off with a double and scored after Connor Goetz and Shane Haggerty followed with singles. Quincy regained the lead 2-1 in the top of the second.

Cohasset came back with two runs of their own in the third, once again Christian Davis (2-3) started the rally by leading off with a walk and three singles in a row by Goetz (3-4), Haggerty and Mickey Barry plated to runs. Cohasset stretched their lead to 4-2 in the fourth when Craig Davis led off the inning with a double over the leftfielders head, Michael O'Brien then sacrificed him to third and Davis scored on Christian Davis' infield single with two outs.

Quincy regained the lead in the fifth with three runs to take a 5-4 lead into the seventh. In the top half of the seventh Quincy managed to increase their lead to 8-4 before Cohasset attempted a comeback of their own. Goetz led off with his third hit of the game, Barry walked with one out and Goetz scored on an infield hit by Jack Kuppens, however this is how the game ended with Quincy winning 8-5.

Connor Goetz went six innings striking out seven and getting some terrific defense from Mickey Barry (two double plays), Brendan O'Connell and Mike O'Brien.

Major League

Cohasset 9, Sharon 5

Cohasset came out strong in the top of the first when after two were out Patrick Holway worked a walk, Harrison Martin singled and Pat Federle lined a double down the right field line to score two for Cohasset. Sharon came back with one run in the first and two more in the second to take a 3-2 lead. Chris Haggerty led off the third for Cohasset with a single and scored on another Federle double to even things at 3-3. Sharon regained the lead with two runs in the fourth, setting the stage for a heroic comeback by Cohasset.

Patrick Holway led off the sixth with a home run to deep left cutting the lead in half, 5-4. Tommy O'Brien in relief of starter Charlie Blackington, struck out the side in the bottom of the fifth giving Cohasset the energy they would need for a sixth inning comeback. With two outs and men on first and second Cohasset was down to their last at bat in hopes of advancing in the winner's bracket

Holway lined a shot off the pitcher's leg and Blackington without hesitation slid into home with tying run, barely beating the throw to the plate from Sharon's shortstop, game tied 5-5.

Sharon threatened in the bottom of the sixth when after one was out, O'Brien walked the number two hitter and allowed a single to their third batter. Runners were now at first and third with their clean-up hitter stepping into the box. Cohasset intentionally walked the Sharon power hitter setting the stage for a force-out at home plate. Bases now loaded with one out and Cohasset's infield in on the grass, the winning run only 60 feet away. The first pitch is laced on one hop to Michael Lund at second base, he calmly fires a strike to Pat Holway at home, two out and bases still loaded. Next batter flies out to Harrison Martin in right field and Cohasset survived the Sharon threat.

Extra innings and Pat Federle led off with a walk, O'Brien followed with a single, and Jeff Powers advanced both runners to second and third. Brett Dooley lines the first pitch into left center scoring Federle but on a close play O'Brien is called out at home. Dooley advanced to second on the throw home after a walk to Lund, Blackington singled in Dooley, Chris Haggerty followed with a double off the fence in right center and Cohasset led 9-5.

In the bottom of the seventh, O'Brien struck out the first and last batter to send Cohasset onto round two of the winner's bracket. O'Brien finished with eight strikeouts in four innings and Blackington added four through the first three innings.

Game 2
Hanover 10, Cohasset 3

Hanover entered the tournament as one of the favorites but Cohasset had thoughts of upsetting the hard hitting Hanover squad. Harrison Martin took the mound to start the game for Cohasset and allowed three runs over three innings. Martin did not allow a walk and struck out three, his only blemish was a hit batter and a wild pitch giving Hanover a 3-0 lead after two innings. In the third Hanover's first baseman Rosinski took Martin deep for a two run home run and Hanover led 5-0. Hanover's lead increased to 6-0 in the fourth after two singles and an error allowed runners to advance to third was followed by a sacrifice fly to deep left of which Brandon Winn made a nice catch in the left field corner. Hanover scored again in the top of the fifth with a double and single sandwiched around two strike outs by Cohasset pitcher Patrick Holway.

Cohasset finally got on the board in the bottom half of the fifth when Michael Lund led off with a walk, Jack Conte (3-3) followed with a single, Charlie Blackington then singled.

Cohasset then ran themselves out of the inning when with the bases loaded and a sacrifice fly to right, Cohasset failed to tag up and was thrown out at the plate, 7-1 Hanover at the end of the fifth. Hanover scored three more runs on home runs by Judge and Rosinskis second of the game. Hanover now led 10-1 entering the bottom of the sixth. Cohasset managed to plate two more runs in the sixth when Patrick Holway and Tommy O'Brien singled, Conte

Cohasset players make a mark

They added two runs in the second inning when Bryan Perez (Worcester; Doherty Mem. HS) drove in Brian Sullivan (Auburn; Auburn HS), and then scored on a basehit by Posch.

Trevor DeRochea (Stoughton; Stoughton HS) took over on the hill in the third for Southeast (1-1) and did a good job keeping his team in the game. He tossed 3 2/3 innings, allowing a hit and two unearned runs.

Central (1-1) reliever Liam O'Sullivan (S. Grafton; Holy Name Central Catholic) pitched one inning and struck out the side in order.

Southeast 6, Coastal 1
West 10, Southeast 2

Cohasset's Brendan Doonan threw three solid innings, allowing just one run to help lead the Southeast to a 6-1 win over Coastal on Wednesday.

Thomas Ryan tossed four no-hit, shutout innings for Southeast to lead his squad to a 6-1 decision over Coastal. Ryan (Walpole; Walpole HS) fanned six but left the game after a short rain delay. Michael Bortolotti (Milton; Milton HS) went 2-for-2 with a pair of runs and a stolen base to pace the Southeast offense.

Kyle MacDonald (Hanover; Xavarian Brothers) added an RBI double and Jim Perron (Norwell; Archbishop Williams) picked up an RBI with a sacrifice fly.

Southeast (2-1) led 6-0 until the top of the seventh when Coastal (0-3) left fielder William Karalis (Rehoboth; Bishop Feehan) drove in Ryan Courville (Somerset; Somerset HS) to spoil the shutout.

Cohasset's Rob McCunney chipped in with a walk, while playing shortstop.

In a second game Wednesday, Doonan knocked in a run, while McCunney walked and scored a run in a 10-2 loss to the West.

After four games, the Southeast is 2-2.

location but settled right back into a groove. We really needed a start like that going deep into the game with the schedule as intense as it is."

" I felt like he had given me all he could give me so I called on Brendan Doonan to try and close the game out."

Cohasset had pounded out a 19-4 win over West Roxbury prior to its win over Morrissette.

"West Roxbury did not have their full team and their pitching was a little thin," Taylor said. "They are a better team than the score indicated. It's tough to be in every game when the schedule has become so compacted do to the rain."

Pat Doonan had four hits and scored four runs in the game. He also pitched the last three innings for Post 118 and it was the first time that he pitched in nearly two years.

John Kearney added three hits and three RBI and Berry blasted a long home run at Scituate High for Cohasset in its win over West Roxbury lined his third hit of the game and Blackington lined his second hit of the game. However that was all Cohasset could muster on this evening, Hanover won 10-3.

Hanover 's pitcher Earle struck out ten Cohasset batters in his four innings of pitching, including the side in the second, third and fourth.

Cohasset entered the loser's bracket and played the winner of Norwell vs. Holbrook/Avon on Wednesday night in Braintree.

Game 3
Cohasset 13,
Holbrook/Avon 3

Playing their first game in the loser's bracket, Cohasset kept their hopes alive with a 13-3 mercy-rule victory over Holbrook/Avon in Braintree on Wednesday night.

Cohasset welcomed back the return of Charlie Michalowski from a broken hand and Charlie picked up where he left off with a first inning two run home run to center.

Holbrook/Avon came right back with two runs in the bottom of the first to tie the game at 2-2 after one. Cohasset broke the game open the next two innings with big hits from Charlie Blackington, Chris Haggerty, Harrison Martin, Patrick Holway, Patrick Federle, Sam Rice and a nice bunt single by Michael Lund. Charlie Blackington settled down and held Holbrook/Avon to only one run the next three innings. Blackington received some defensive help from Michalowski, Brett Dooley and Jeff Powers, who picked the potential game continuing run off of third base.

Cohasset will play Milton National on Friday night in Canton.

Cohasset sends their ace Tommy O'Brien to the hill in hopes of keeping their tournament run alive.
